

speakout 2ND EDITION

Discover English as it is really spoken

Speakout 2nd Edition is a comprehensive six-level general English course for adults that has been developed in association with BBC Worldwide and BBC Learning English. The course integrates authentic video from popular BBC programmes into every unit and builds the skills and knowledge learners need to express themselves confidently in a real English-speaking environment.

Completely revised and aligned to the Global Scale of English, this edition has striking new visuals, updated reading and listening texts, new video clips and a large bank of additional practice material.

Speakout Extra

Speakout Extra provides downloadable worksheets that meet learners' individual needs by providing them with additional grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation and skills practice. It also includes extra video exploitation activities to help learners get the most out of the BBC clips.

Has Google made us stupid?

The rise of Google and other search engines has ¹ _____ the way we remember information, ² _____ to research. Because we now have access to all ³ _____ information we could possibly want at the touch of a button, we no longer need to store so much information in our heads. ⁴ _____ that this is actually changing the way our brains store and recall information. We're quite likely ⁵ _____ information which we believe we can find online and more likely to remember something which we ⁶ _____ not be able to access on the internet. We are now better at remembering where we can ⁷ _____ the information than we are at ⁸ _____ the information itself. ⁹ _____, the brain is a malleable organ, which changes according to our circumstances. So, it's not just Google that can change the way we remember things. We have always looked to 'experts' to remember things for us. And even in more informal ways, long-term couples also learn to rely ¹⁰ _____ each other for remembering information. Now, where did I put my keys?

B Match the words in the box above with parts of speech 1–10.

 - 9 My surname is Jones; my middle name is Wheatley; and my given/main name is Stephen.
 - 10 My maiden/born name is Smith but my married name is Edelstein.

B Work in pairs and answer the questions. Which of the collocations:

- a) are on your passport/identity document?
- b) might change in your lifetime?
- c) are related to reputation?
- d) means 'using their names'?
- e) means 'volunteered'?
- f) means 'famous'?
- g) means 'it's only a title'?
- h) is in honour of someone else?

C Work in pairs. Think of someone who:

- is a household name.
- had to clear their name.
- has made a name for him/herself recently.
- has to live up to his/her name.
- used to be a big name.
- is so famous that they're known by their given name.

READING

- 3 A Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

- 1 What do you think are the world's most common given names?
- 2 What are the most common family names in your country?
- 3 Why do you think people change their names?

B Read the article and complete the sentence.

The main idea of the text is that ...

C Answer the questions.

- 1 According to the article, is it only celebrities who choose strange names for their children?
- 2 What do the results of Mehrabian's research show?
- 3 According to the study in paragraph 6, how might your name affect your chances of getting a job?
- 4 In Satran's opinion, what influences the way people name their children?

- 4 A Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

- 1 Do you agree with Mehrabian that 'Names generate impressions'?
- 2 Do you agree with Satran that 'Celebrity culture and ethnic diversity have made people much more eager to look for a wide range of names of their own'?
- 3 Why do you think certain names are associated with success?
- 4 The research for this article was done in the USA. Do you think the results would be the same if the research was done in your country?

B The article contains several colloquial expressions. What do you think words/phrases 1–7 mean? Use a dictionary to help you if necessary.

- 1 going in for (paragraph 1)
- 2 increasingly outlandish (paragraph 2)
- 3 reach the top of the tree (paragraph 5)
- 4 career-wise (paragraph 5)
- 5 cut and dried (paragraph 6)
- 6 call-backs (paragraph 6)
- 7 for the likes of (paragraph 7)

Making your name

Approximately 130 million babies are born each year, and under normal circumstances, they all get a name within days of their birth. The most common given name is thought to be Mohamed (it can be spelt in different ways). And the most unusual? Well, take your pick. British model Jordan called her daughter Princess Tiaamii; Jermaine Jackson (Michael Jackson's brother) named his son Jermajesty; and actor-director Sylvester Stallone called his son Sage Moonblood. But it isn't just celebrities who are going in for strange-sounding names.

'My pupils have increasingly outlandish names,' says one secondary school teacher from London. She cites 'poorly spelt names' such as Amba, Jordon, Charlee and Moniqua, and what she calls 'absurd names' like Shaliqua and Sharday. How will such names affect her students when they go out to get a job? 'I think it's a serious disadvantage,' she says.

Albert Mehrabian, professor emeritus of psychology at the University of California, agrees with her. 'Names generate impressions, just like a person's appearance can generate a positive or negative impression,' he says. 'But names also have an impact when you're not physically present, such as when you send in a CV.'

Mehrabian researched people's instinctive reactions to hundreds of first names. It's striking how many positive associations some names carry, and how negative the connotations of others turn out to be – particularly when it comes to linking names with 'success', which Mehrabian takes to include ambition, intelligence, confidence and other attributes.

So what kind of name does it take to reach the top of the tree, career-wise? Based on research in the USA, Mehrabian says that Alexander scores 100 percent for 'success'. William gets 99 percent and John 98 percent. For the girls, Jacqueline rates very highly, as do Diana, Danielle and Catherine, although Katherine with a k does slightly better than Catherine with a c.

But can the impact of a first name really be that cut and dried? Pamela Satran, co-author of eight baby-naming books, is less convinced that the power of a name can be quantified. 'There isn't that much hard evidence that's absolutely conclusive,' says Satran. She recalls one American study where researchers submitted identical CVs to a number of employers. The given name on half of the CVs was Lashanda, 'seen as a stereotypical African-American name,' says Satran. The name on the other half was Lauren – seen as much more white and middle class. In one study, the name Lauren got five times more call-backs than Lashanda, says Satran. But in another study the rate was similar for both names. 'I've seen similarly conflicting studies,' Satran adds.

Satran also believes that people's attitudes towards names are changing. She says, 'Celebrity culture and ethnic diversity have made people much more eager to look for a wide range of names of their own. The thinking is: if you have a special name, that makes you a special person.' Let's hope so for the likes of a certain individual born in 1990 in Java; this young man is named Batman bin Suparman, a name that went viral and spawned a Facebook fan page that now has over 11,000 followers.

GRAMMAR

THE CONTINUOUS ASPECT

5 A Check what you know. Why is the continuous form used in these sentences?

- 1 These days it's getting easier and easier to change your name.
- 2 She's always talking as if she's a household name, but she's only been on TV once!
- 3 I'm considering naming my dog after my hero: Che Guevara.
- 4 The author of the book has been trying to think of a good name for it for months.
- 5 My partner was reading a book about babies' names when I got home.
- 6 I was hoping to borrow your car, if that's OK.

B Check your answers. Match uses a)–f) with sentences 1–6 above.

- a) to describe a background action that was in progress when another (shorter) action happened 5
- b) to talk about something that's incomplete, temporary, or still in progress (often emphasising the length of time)
- c) to talk about situations that are in the process of changing
- d) to emphasise repeated actions (that may be annoying)
- e) for plans that may not be definite
- f) to sound tentative and less direct when we make proposals, inquiries, suggestions, etc.

6 A Which underlined verbs would be better in the continuous form? Why? Change them as necessary.

- 1 John's not in the office. He might have lunch.
be having (The action is still in progress.)
- 2 I'm fed up. We've waited for an hour!

WRITING

A PERSONAL PROFILE; LEARN TO PLAN YOUR WRITING

8 A Read the personal profile. Where do you think it will appear?

Mira Kaya

About me

I'm half-Turkish, half-British. I was born in Istanbul, but I live in London. I'm the author of over a dozen children's books and several plays that have been produced in the UK, France, Turkey, Germany and other countries.

For six years I was a teacher at a school in North London, where I worked extensively with children with learning difficulties. This led to my first publication, a picture book called Bobby Blue's Big Day. The story was later made into a short film. Other books followed, including Night Owl and the Rooftop Ringleaders series, for which I was nominated for several awards.

Besides writing, my passion is cycling. I hit the road whenever I have a spare moment (there aren't many), and can be found wheezing up hills outside London in bright yellow spandex most Saturdays. My other passion is my two wonderful children: Gulay and Baha, who are the first editors for every story I write. My second editor is my husband Martin. We've been married for ten years.

B Read the guidelines for writing a personal profile. To what extent does Mira Kaya's profile follow them?

- 1 Share positive things.
- 2 Keep it short: condense rather than use very long sentences.
- 3 Choose specific details and examples, not generalisations.
- 4 Don't lie, boast or exaggerate.
- 5 Keep it informal and friendly.

9 A Which information in the box would you include in a profile for:

- a blog/a social networking site?
- a networking site for professionals/a job application?

where you're from family information likes/dislikes hobbies talents and skills education/grades/qualifications goals and plans favourite music/food religious or spiritual beliefs address pet peeves groups you belong to job trips and unusual experiences professional achievements

B What information from the box above would you leave out?

speakeout TIP

Think of writing as a conversation. Always remember your audience. Who will read your writing? What do they expect (think about content, length, tone and formality)? What do they know about the topic?

10 A Look at the outline of a profile for a personal website. Is there any information that is NOT suitable?

Introduction:	name & where I'm from
Interests:	love children, music, dance
Skills:	play guitar & piano, drawing, costume-making
Qualifications:	3 'A' Levels: Geography, History, English; Bachelor's: Geography
Family:	husband & daughter

B Discuss. Which of the following things do you do when you write? What does it depend on?

- 1 Brainstorm ideas.
- 2 Write notes.
- 3 Write an outline.
- 4 Discuss your ideas with someone before writing.
- 5 Visualise your readers and imagine how they will react to your writing.
- 6 Write the first draft quickly and roughly.

11 Write a personal profile as part of a class profile. Follow stages 1–4 below.

- 1 Think about your audience and what you need to include. Make notes.
- 2 Write an outline for your profile.
- 3 Write your profile (150–200 words). Check it and make any corrections.
- 4 Share your profile with other students. What common features are there in your class, e.g. professions, hobbies, where you're from, etc.?

Are you a good language learner?

1 I'm always watching videos or reading articles in English and that helps me a lot.

LISTENING

5 A Read the radio programme listing below and answer the questions.

- 1 What does the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator do?
- 2 Who uses it?
- 3 Do you think this type of test can be useful? Why/Why not?

B  1.6 Listen to the programme and answer the questions.

- 1 According to the programme, what causes a lot of stress at work?
- 2 What kinds of people does the MBTI test?
- 3 What kinds of questions does the interviewer ask Mariella?

How Myers-Briggs Conquered the Office

It was created by a mother and daughter team, neither of whom were trained as psychologists, yet today it is the world's most widely used personality indicator, used by leading companies like Shell, Procter & Gamble, Vodafone and the BBC. In this BBC radio programme, Mariella Frostrup tells the story of The Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI), created by Katherine Briggs and her daughter Isabel Briggs Myers. Participants are asked a series of questions intended to reveal information about their thinking, problem-solving and communication styles. At the end of the process each participant is handed one of sixteen four-letter acronyms which describes their 'type'. ENTPs are extrovert inventors, ISTJs are meticulous nit-pickers. Mariella finds out what type she is – will it change the way she works?

6 A What do the following expressions from the programme mean?

- 1 sweeping generalisers
- 2 detail-obsessed nit-pickers
- 3 obsessive planners
- 4 last-minute deadline junkies
- 5 recharge your batteries
- 6 flat-pack furniture

B Listen again. Choose the option, a), b) or c), which best describes Mariella's answer to the question.

- 1 How do you like to recharge your batteries at the end of the day?
 - a) She goes out for a nice meal.
 - b) She stays at home and reads a book.
 - c) She watches TV and goes to bed.
- 2 If you have ever had the opportunity to put together any flat-pack furniture, how did you go about it?
 - a) She always follows the instructions carefully.
 - b) She finds the whole process infuriating, so she doesn't buy flat-pack furniture.
 - c) She tends to lose the instructions and the parts.
- 3 If you imagine that a friend of yours gives you a call and says, 'I've just been burgled.', what would you do? What would your reaction be?
 - a) First, she would ask her friend how she was feeling.
 - b) First, she would be concerned about the practicalities, then she would ask about feelings.
 - c) She would only ask about the practical details.
- 4 How do you go about doing the food shopping?
 - a) She generally keeps a careful list of all the things she needs. Then she buys it all online.
 - b) She hates internet shopping, so she goes to the supermarket once a week.
 - c) She buys most of her food on the internet, but she doesn't use a list so she forgets things.

C Work in pairs. Answer the questions in Exercise 6B for you. Then compare your answers with your partner.

SPEAKING

7 A Read about the different types of people in the Myers-Briggs test below. Which type are you more inclined to be like? Choose a letter for each section (I or E, N or S, T or F, J or P) to work out your profile, e.g. ENTJ.

B Turn to page 158 to read more about your profile. Do you agree with the description?

C Tell other students about the result of your test, what it says about your personality and whether you agree with the result.

VOCABULARY

IMAGES

- 1 A Look at the photographic portraits. What do you think makes a good photo portrait?
- B Read the text. Does it mention your ideas? What does Bailey feel is important when taking a photo portrait?

Getting the picture

A great photographic portrait captures the beauty of the human soul in a unique and inspiring way. It's so much more than just a black and white pose. It's evocative and has attitude, and it helps us to see a person's true personality. So, what is it that can make a portrait truly iconic?

In Getting the Picture David Bailey, world-famous photographer, whose revealing images are instantly recognisable and have charted decades of fashion, celebrity and notoriety, reveals how he got involved in photography and how he has produced some of the most striking and provocative images, which have defined our times.

'You've got to see things as they are, not as you think they are,' says Bailey. 'If someone's in a bad mood, I don't mind, because I encourage the bad mood, you know, wind them up a bit. And then you get a reaction from them. You can't be judgmental and be a photographer.'

- C Work in pairs. Check you understand the meaning of the words/expressions in bold. Can you use other words to explain them?

captures the beauty – shows you how beautiful something is

FUNCTION

SPECULATING

- 2 A Look at each portrait more carefully. Work in pairs and discuss the questions.
What can you say about the person's character from the picture?
What job do you think they do?
- B ▶ 1.7 Listen to people discussing the portraits and make notes. What do they say about each person's:
 - character/appearance?
 - possible job?
- C In which portrait do they say the person:
 - 1 has something about him/her which says (sort of) creative?
 - 2 looks quite serene?
 - 3 gives the impression of being very intellectual?
 - 4 has something in his/her eyes that makes you think he's/she's about to laugh?
 - 5 might have something to do with fashion?
 - 6 looks pretty cool?
- D Listen again to check your ideas.

- 3 Look at the language used for speculating. Read audio script 1.7 on page 165 and find some examples of this language.

I suppose/guess/reckon he/she's about ...
I'd say he/she's .../I wouldn't say he/she's ...
He/She/It could be/could have been ...
He/She/It makes me think (that) maybe he/she/it ...
He/She gives the impression of being ...

I'd hazard a guess (that) ...
If I had to make a guess, I'd say (that) ...
He/she could be/could have been ...
It looks to me as if he/she ...

- 4 Rewrite the sentences using the words in brackets.
 - 1 I guess she's a bit lonely. (It / seems / me)
 - 2 It looks as though he's angry. (gives / impression)
 - 3 I think she's probably an actress. (reckon)
 - 4 If you asked me, I'd say she was happy with her life. (had / make / guess)
 - 5 I'd definitely say that he's not telling us everything. (pretty)
 - 6 I think she could be an only child. (hazard / guess)

LEARN TO USE VAGUE LANGUAGE

- 5 Look at the examples of vague language. Some are from the conversation in Exercise 2B. Why do the speakers use vague language? Does it sound formal or casual?

Vague nouns: thing, stuff, bit
There's something in her eyes.

Quantifiers: one or two, a few, a couple of, a lot of, plenty of, loads of, a bit (of)
There's a bit of flour.

Vague numbers: around, about fifty, more or less, fifty or so
He's about forty-ish.

Generalisers: sort of, kind of, you know
He looks sort of creative.

List completers: and stuff, and so on, or something (like that)
She could be a model, or something like that.

speakout TIP

To sound fluent in English, avoid long pauses in your speech by using fillers like er and erm. Vague language (sort of/kind of/you know) and hedges (I'd say/I reckon/I suppose) are also used as fillers. Read audio script 1.7 on page 165 and find examples of fillers.

- 6 A Correct the mistakes in the sentences.

- I'll be there soon. I just have a couple things to do.
- Why don't we meet at exactly eight-ish?
- I left a lot of stuffs at the hotel, but I can pick it up later.
- Don't worry. We've got a plenty of time.
- We've sort finished the accounts.
- There'll be about forty and so people attending.

- B 1.8 CONNECTED SPEECH: linking, elision Listen to the corrected sentences. Find examples of the following:

- linking between words which end in a consonant sound and words which begin with a vowel sound.
I just have a couple of things to do.
- elision (when a sound disappears) between two consonant sounds, e.g. must be /mʌsbi:/.
Why don't we meet at about eight-ish?

- C Mark the links between words in the following examples. Try saying the phrases.

- It looks as if he's got a lot of work to do.
- She looks about fifty or so.
- It's a bit dark, isn't it?
- I've got a couple of things to ask.

- D 1.9 Listen and check. Then listen and repeat.

SPEAKING

- 7 A Work in pairs. Look at the portraits on page 158 and follow the instructions.

- B If you had a photograph portrait taken of you, where would you be? What kind of portrait would you like to have? Compare your ideas with other students.

DVD PREVIEW

- 1 Work in groups. Look at the photo and discuss the questions.
 - 1 What do you know about this city? Think about its geography and history.
 - 2 Have you been there? Would you like to go?
 - 3 What would it be like to live in Venice? How might it be different from where you live now?
- 2 Read the programme information. Why do you think Francesco is a good person to host the programme?

Francesco's Venice

BBC

Francesco's Venice is a BBC documentary that tells the story of the great Italian city, Venice. Francesco da Mosto, a historian and writer, explains how this city – with no firm ground, no farmland and no army – acquired its power and fame. During the series, da Mosto describes the city's history and shows how his own family's fortunes have been closely related to the fortunes of Venice. In this episode, he goes to a house that his family built centuries ago and imagines his ancestors' lives as merchants.

- 3 Complete the sentences about Francesco's ancestors' house with the words in the box.

warehouse bequeathed showroom rotting

- 1 The house is damp and in terrible condition, and the wood is _____.
- 2 Chiara da Mosto _____ the house to another family after falling out with her relatives.
- 3 This room was a _____. They used it to store goods before selling them.
- 4 It served as a _____. They used it to show goods to clients.

DVD VIEW

- 4 Watch the DVD. Number the scenes in the order they appear.
 - a) Francesco stands on the balcony and looks across the canal.
 - b) He sails a small boat and looks at the house.
 - c) He walks through the house.
 - d) He imagines his ancestors and other people inside the house.
- 5 A Answer the questions.
 - 1 Why does the story of his ancestors' home break Francesco's heart?
 - 2 When did his ancestors build the house?
 - 3 What happened to the house in 1603?
 - 4 Apart from living there, what did his ancestors use the house for?

B Watch the DVD again to check.
- 6 Work in pairs and discuss the questions.
 - 1 What did you think of Francesco's house?
 - 2 What did you find interesting about his story?
 - 3 Does your personal family history involve any particular countries or cities? Which ones?

speakout a possession

7 A  1.10 Listen to someone talking about a treasured family possession. What is the object? What does she say about the points below?

- Background: the history of the object.
- Physical description: what it looks/feels/sounds/smells like.
- Value: why it is so important.
- Memories: what feelings or stories are associated with it.

B Listen again and tick the key phrases you hear.

KEYPHRASES

(It) has been in my family for four generations.
My grandmother inherited it.
It has sentimental value.
(It) was bequeathed to me.
I should repair it.
I will always treasure it.

8 A Now think about a treasured possession of your own or a place that is special to your family. Make notes on the points in Exercise 7A.

B Work in groups and take turns. Tell each other about your possession/place.

writeback a description of an object

9 A Read a description of an object. Why is the object special to the writer?

I own an antique gramophone player that belonged to my grandfather and then my father. It was made in Germany in the 1920s and has a heavy base made of pine wood and a large brass horn. In the days before cassette players, CDs and iPods, this is how people listened to music at home.

The gramophone reminds me of my childhood because when we went to my grandfather's house in Essex, near London, he used to play records on it. While his grandchildren were running and bellowing all over the house, he would be sitting there drinking tea and listening to a scratchy recording of a Bach sonata or Fauré's Requiem.

When he died, the gramophone was handed down to my father. It sat in the corner of the living room where a light skin of dust settled upon it. It was a piece of furniture, an heirloom that no one used or noticed but that just seemed to belong there, just as now it belongs in its own special corner of my living room. I don't know if many people nowadays would recognise a gramophone if they saw one, but I treasure the object because of the memories associated with it.

B Write about an object or a place that is important to you. Use the key phrases to help.

V PHRASES WITH NAME

1 Underline the correct alternative.

- 1 He was innocent but it took him years to live/clear/make his name.
- 2 I was named before/after/of my grandfather.
- 3 My married name is Kovacs but my maiden/principle/single name is Warsawski.
- 4 Zara made a name for self/her/herself as the best designer in the business.
- 5 He's a good actor but not a house/household/family name like Brad Pitt or Johnny Depp.
- 6 His real name is Keanu but his nickname/friendly name/fun name is Nunu.

G THE CONTINUOUS ASPECT

2 A Complete the pairs of sentences using the same verb. Use one simple form and one continuous form. Some verbs are in the negative.

- 1 a) My friend _____ to visit next week.
b) Harada is Japanese. He _____ from Osaka.
- 2 a) I _____ a cold for two weeks – I can't seem to get rid of it.
b) I _____ tennis lessons for two years.
- 3 a) My office _____ painted yesterday so I stayed home.
b) The garden _____ really beautiful when I was a child.
- 4 a) The children _____ homesick at all so they love travelling.
b) The economy _____ any better – jobs are still at risk.
- 5 a) They knew me already because I _____ for that company before.
b) I was exhausted because I _____ for sixteen hours.

B Work in pairs. Discuss why we use the simple or continuous forms in the sentences above.

In 1a) it's a future plan so this uses the present continuous.

G DESCRIBING HABITS

3 A Find and correct the mistakes in sentences 1–6. There is one mistake in each sentence.

- 1 I'm prone leaving things until the last minute, and then I always have to rush.
- 2 I don't tend needing as much sleep as I used to.
- 3 I keep forget her birthday.
- 4 My parents were always very strict and they wouldn't to let me out late at night.
- 5 I'm more inclination to phone people than to send them a text.
- 6 I'm always tidy my house. I can't stand it when it's in a mess.

B Work in pairs. Change information in the sentences above to write three or four sentences about your partner (guess if necessary). Then compare your sentences.

A: I guess you're prone to leaving things until the last minute.

B: Actually, I tend to be quite organised.

V PERSONALITY

4 A Complete the words in sentences 1–6.

Words from the wise

Everyone needs words of wisdom. When we're trying to find our feet, we all need help. Sometimes it's the wise words of our mentors that can do the trick.

1 JANE GOODALL

PRIMATOLOGIST AND CONSERVATIONIST

When I was about ten years old and dreaming of going to Africa, living with animals and writing books about them, everyone laughed at me. Africa was far away and full of dangerous animals, and only boys could expect to do those kinds of things. But my mother said, 'If you really want something and you work hard and you take advantage of opportunities – and you never, ever give up – you will find a way.' The opportunity was a letter from a friend inviting me to Kenya. The hard work was waitressing at a hotel to earn money for the trip – and spending hours reading books about Africa and animals, so I was ready when Dr Louis Leakey offered me the opportunity to study chimpanzees.

COLUMNIST

My geography master told me: 'When people tell you that there are two sides to every argument, it is nonsense. There are three: your side, their side and the truth.'

READING

- 1 A Can you remember any useful advice you have been given? Who gave it to you?
- B Work in pairs. Which pieces of advice a)–h) do you agree/disagree with? Why?
 - a) Look on the bright side and appreciate the good things in your life.
 - b) Don't be afraid to disagree with the majority. The crowd isn't always right.
 - c) Success isn't about the hours you work; it's about getting the job done.
 - d) Use every chance you get.
 - e) An original idea is no use unless you work to perfect it.
 - f) Don't be afraid to make mistakes.
 - g) Don't waste time wondering what might have been. Look to the future.
 - h) Work hard and have confidence in your abilities.
- 2 A Read the article. Match advice a)–h) with 8 of the people.
- B Work in groups and discuss the questions below.
 - 1 Which three pieces of advice do you like the best? Are there any that you don't like?
 - 2 Have you ever been in a similar position to any of the people in the text? What did you do?

VOCABULARY

LEARNING AND EXPERIENCE

- 3 A Find expressions in the article with the following meanings.
 - 1 become familiar with a new situation or experience (introduction)
 - 2 use the chances you get (paragraph 1)
 - 3 a problem that prevents or delays progress (paragraph 2)
 - 4 in a position in which you quickly have to learn something difficult (paragraph 4)
 - 5 finding out how something is done in a particular place or situation (paragraph 6)
 - 6 changed a person deeply, e.g. the way they understand the world (paragraph 7)
 - 7 believe that your feelings are correct (paragraph 9)
 - 8 act according to your personal feelings about something (paragraph 9)
- B Look at questions 1–8 and choose three or four that you are happy to answer. Compare your answers with other students.
 - 1 When were you last on a steep learning curve? What was the most difficult thing to learn?
 - 2 In what situations do you always trust your instincts?
 - 3 What opportunities have you taken advantage of?
 - 4 Can you think of a situation or place in which you had to learn the ropes?
 - 5 Can you think of a great event or person that had a profound effect on you?
 - 6 How long did it take you to find your feet in your current school or workplace?
 - 7 What's the best way to deal with a setback at work?
 - 8 Are you analytical when you make decisions, or do you usually go with your gut feeling?

4 HONG BO CHIN

FINANCIER

For my first year in corporate finance, I was on a steep learning curve and thought I needed to work eighteen hours a day to impress everyone. I'd get to the office exhausted, until one day an older employee told me, 'You're not impressing anyone by working ridiculous hours. Just get the job done.' I wish I'd spoken to him earlier. But for his advice, I would have worked myself into the ground.

5 PETER BARRON

HEAD OF EXTERNAL RELATIONS FOR GOOGLE

All the best advice I received was from my father, and I even took some of it. My favourite is: 'The man who never made a mistake never made anything.'

6 STEFAN OROGOVITZ

BRAIN SURGEON

A journalist asked me, 'Why do brain surgeons have such large egos?' I said, 'We need them. We lose ninety-five percent of our patients.' If I'd known that statistic when I was learning the ropes, I'd be selling insurance today. How can you keep working with figures like that? You do all you can, never apologise, and believe in yourself.

7 PAOLA GAVAZZI

SCREENWRITER

A film director kept asking me to rewrite a screenplay. I kept protesting. Eventually he just said to me, 'You're not paid to write. You're paid to rewrite.' That had a profound effect on me.

8 SANTA SEBAG-MONTEFIORE

AUTHOR

When we were skiing in Klosters my father would say 'It's sunny at the top', before heading up the mountain in thick fog. He meant 'be positive', and always be grateful for what you have.

9 NOBANTU SESEKE

PUBLISHER

Early in my career, I received some amazing manuscripts, but my colleagues weren't sure, and I ended up saying 'no'. I now regret rejecting some authors who went on to have good careers. What I've learnt is to trust your instincts. Go with your gut feeling. Had I done this, I would have said 'yes' to some great books. If only I'd known then what I know now.

My co-founder and CEO, Joseph Velosa, said to me years ago: 'If you don't have passion, then you have nothing. If you don't believe in what you are doing, why would anyone else?'

GRAMMAR

HYPOTHETICAL CONDITIONAL: PAST

4 A Look at paragraphs 4, 6 and 9 in the article. Underline three conditional sentences and three phrases to describe regrets.

B Check what you know. Answer the questions.

- How do we make past conditionals? (If + past perfect + ...)
- Instead of if + past perfect, two of the conditional sentences (in paragraphs 4 and 9) use alternative forms. What forms are they?
- Are these forms more or less formal than an if clause?
- Look at the conditional sentence in paragraph 6. Do both clauses refer to the past? What forms are used? Why do you think this is sometimes called a 'mixed conditional'?
- Two of the phrases to describe regrets use the same verb tense. What tense is this?

C Read the rules about hypothetical past conditionals.

RULES

- Use if + past perfect and would + present continuous/present simple to form a mixed conditional.
- Use a mixed conditional to say that if something in the past had been different, the present would be different.

5 A Complete the sentences with one word in each gap.

- If she had helped him back then, he would _____ helped her.
- _____ for Ahmed's efforts, this conference would not have happened.
- If _____ we had arrived earlier, we would have seen the sunrise.
- _____ I known about her illness, I would have come sooner.
- I _____ doing some things I did when I was younger. I was thoughtless then!
- I _____ I'd known about the free food!
- If he hadn't come, everyone would _____ died.
- I _____ be working here if I hadn't met Layla in 2008.

B DOUBLE CONTRACTIONS In sentences 1–4, some double contractions are possible (where two consecutive words can both be contracted). Can you see where?

In sentence 1, 'he would have' can be contracted: 'he'd've helped her'.

C 2.1 Listen to the recording and focus on the contracted sounds. Listen again and repeat the phrases.

SPEAKING

6 A Complete the sentences and make them true for you.

If there's one thing I've learnt ...

One thing I'd never ...

One thing I wish I'd known when I was ...

If I had a personal motto, it would be ...

My mother/father/mentor/friend always told me ...

B Work in groups and take turns. Read your sentences and give some background, explaining what you wrote. Try to use contractions.

VOCABULARY PLUS

METAPHORS

7 A Read the metaphor and choose the correct meaning.

I'm over the hill.

- a) I can't do something well enough because I'm too old.
- b) I have done the most difficult part of a task.

B Discuss the questions.

- 1 Can you think of other examples of metaphors?
- 2 Why are metaphors used?
- 3 How do they help to communicate an idea?
- 4 What can you do to remember metaphors?

speakout TIP

Metaphors sometimes come in patterns: your career is a journey; time is money; ideas are food; good is up and bad is down. It is useful to write these metaphors together in your notebook. This helps you to remember them.

8 Read the paragraph and underline four metaphors related to journeys. Match them with meanings 1–4. Do you have similar metaphors in your language?

“When I graduated, everyone said, ‘You’ll go far.’ I joined a law firm and quickly reached the peak of my profession. But then my career started to go downhill. I argued with colleagues and lost some cases. I found myself at a crossroads: either I could continue working there or I could take a risk and start my own firm.”

- 1 go badly
- 2 having to choose one thing or another
- 3 have a great future (You’ll go far.)
- 4 become number one

9 A Work in pairs. Student A: read the paragraph below and underline four metaphors related to ideas. Match them with meanings 1–4. Student B: turn to page 159.

“When I was a philosophy student at university, one day my professor said, ‘OK, here’s an idea. For some, this might be hard to swallow, but I have a proposal. Instead of making you take exams, in which you just regurgitate the book, at the end of term you all give a talk about something you found interesting in class.’ He paused. Silence. ‘It’s just food for thought,’ he said. ‘You don’t have to decide now.’ None of us had done anything like this before. But, as if to prove it wasn’t just a half-baked idea, at the end of term, he made us do it. It was the best thing I did in four years at university.”

- 1 reproduce without thinking
- 2 difficult to believe/accept
- 3 badly thought-out
- 4 something to think about

B Read your paragraph to your partner twice. Which metaphors did he/she notice? Explain the meaning of the four metaphors to your partner.

10 Replace the underlined phrases with metaphors and any necessary verbs.

- 1 My teachers said, ‘You have a great future ahead of you.’
You’ll go far.
- 2 A friend told me she was related to Albert Einstein, but I find that difficult to believe.
- 3 You should keep some time free to visit the National Gallery when you’re in Edinburgh.
- 4 He had a badly thought-out plan to start a website selling cars.
- 5 I began my career by winning two tennis tournaments, but then things started to go wrong.
- 6 Our dog had been sick for years and was expected to die at any moment.
- 7 He was at the height of his career when he decided to retire.
- 8 Someone once said ‘all children are born geniuses’. That’s something for us to think about.

11 A Work in pairs and think of two:

- half-baked ideas that could change the world.
Allow all schools to be run by the students.
- tips for reaching the peak of your profession.
- things you can’t afford (either the money or time) to do.
- activities you would do if you put aside some time for yourself.
- reasons why famous people’s careers go downhill.
- things you heard in the news that you find hard to swallow.

B Share your ideas with the class.

Can you change people's opinions by talking to them?

The idea of the 'living library' originated in Scandinavia. 'Readers' come to the library to borrow real people in the same way that they would normally borrow books. They can then take them away to a corner for a fifteen-minute chat, in the course of which they can ask any questions they like and hear real live answers. The idea is that by doing this, the 'reader' will start to uncover some of the preconceptions that they may have, and the 'book' is able to try and dispel a few of the typical stigmas, stereotypes and prejudices they encounter in their everyday lives.

LISTENING

1 A Have you heard of a living library? If not, what do you think a living library is?

B Read about living libraries. Were your ideas right? Do you think they are a good idea?

2 A 2.2 Listen to a radio programme about living libraries. Work in pairs and discuss these questions with a partner.

- Has your opinion of living libraries changed?
- How did the speakers feel about taking part?
- Would you ever take part? Why/Why not?

B Listen again and answer the questions.

- What was written in the catalogue next to 'student'?
- How did Alex feel about this?
- What did Alex expect the man to do?
- What actually happened?
- What was the first thing Saba noticed about Karrie?
- What opinion is Karrie hoping to change?
- How does being blind affect Karrie's life?
- Why does Karrie feel that she is a good judge of character?

GRAMMAR

VERB PATTERNS

4 A Check what you know. Underline the correct alternatives to complete what other people have said about living libraries.

- 1 It was great being able to say those things you're usually scared to say/say/saying and ask questions you're usually afraid to ask.
- 2 We were given the freedom to ask/ask/asking questions without having to worry about to be/be/being judged. I admit to feel/feel/feeling a little nervous about a few of the questions.
- 3 I wanted to offer/offer/offering some insights into my job. I took part in the living library event to challenge/challenge/challenging stereotypes and misconceptions I'd encountered.
- 4 I enjoyed to talk/talk/talking to different people. I learnt more about where my arguments for to be/be/being a vegan fall down. I had to apologise for not always being able to answer the question properly.
- 5 They advised me to be/be/being as honest as possible.
- 6 To sleep/Sleep/Sleeping outside in the middle of winter isn't the problem. Coping with how people treat you is much harder to deal/deal/dealing with.

B Look at Exercise 4A again. Find examples to match the patterns 1–9 below.

- 1 Verb + to + infinitive, e.g. I decided to explain.
- 2 Verb + object + to + infinitive, e.g. They encouraged me to apply.
- 3 Noun + to + infinitive (as part of a semi-fixed phrase), e.g. It's time to ...
- 4 Adjective + to + infinitive, e.g. I was happy to talk to them.
- 5 to + infinitive used to express purpose e.g. She left early to catch the train.
- 6 verb + -ing e.g. I recall feeling apprehensive.
- 7 preposition + -ing e.g. Are you interested in learning about the issues?
- 8 -ing used as a noun (gerund), e.g. Smoking is bad for you.
- 9 like/love/hate etc. + -ing, e.g. I hate arguing about politics.

C Match examples 1–3 with rules a)–c).

- 1 They seem to have forgotten why we came here.
- 2 Not understanding people's reasons for why they do the things they do is a big problem.
- 3 He is always being stopped by police just for the way he looks.

RULES

- a) Passive infinitive or -ing form _____
Use the passive infinitive or -ing form to talk about actions which are done to the subject.
- b) Perfect infinitive or -ing form _____
Use the perfect infinitive or -ing form to emphasise when one action happens before another.
- c) Negative infinitive or -ing form _____ Negative infinitives or -ing forms can often be made the subject of a sentence, like gerunds.

- 2 _____ (meet) Linda and _____ (have) the chance to talk about her experience was enlightening.
- 3 They had the opportunity _____ (ask) me anything that they wanted.
- 4 It's hard _____ (imagine) what it's like to live with a disability.
- 5 I wouldn't even contemplate _____ (leave) the country.
- 6 She had refused _____ (marry) the man her parents had chosen for her.
- 7 Somehow he seemed _____ (lose) all the money already.
- 8 He is fed up with _____ (be) called rude names.

B Work alone and think of:

- one thing you would never consider doing.
- something you regret doing/not doing.
- three things you find hard to tolerate.
- something you have recently been persuaded to do.

C Compare your ideas in pairs.

SPEAKING

6 A Mark the statements below with a number from 1–5 (1 = strongly agree, 5 = strongly disagree).

Medical and technological advances will mean that in the future there will be no disabilities.

Women should be promoted to top jobs in business and politics before men.

Everybody in the world should have access to a library.

Students, not the state, should pay university tuition fees.

Individual countries do not have the right to interfere with the affairs of another country.

B Work in groups. Discuss two of the statements and modify them until everyone in the group agrees with what they say.

C Compare your new statements with the rest of the class.

Are we doing enough to help the homeless?

Homelessness is a major problem in any big city. There are regular attempts by authorities to clear the streets of the homeless, typically in cities hosting events like the Olympics. Homelessness doesn't look good and it makes politicians feel uncomfortable. Is enough being done to resolve the problem, however?

Many people assume that homeless people live on the streets as a result of drug or alcohol misuse.

Consequently, they assume we can do little to help as drugs will continue to be a problem. Additionally, charitable organisations already help the homeless, so this may be sufficient. In my opinion, this approach ignores the bigger picture.

There is no doubt that drug abuse is a major contributing factor leading to homelessness. On the other hand, there are increasing numbers of people who are homeless because of the lack of affordable housing. In addition to this, as unemployment increases, more people struggle to keep up with payments on their homes.

A frightening number of the homeless are families with children. They are, in fact, the fastest growing part of the homeless population. Furthermore, it's not only the unemployed who cannot afford housing. According to a recent survey, more than a quarter of homeless people (25–40 percent) actually work. Nevertheless, they still cannot afford to pay for accommodation.

In today's society, it is unacceptable that working people cannot afford to pay for a house to live in. For this reason, it's essential that governments ensure people are paid sufficient wages. Likewise, since housing prices are so high, governments should focus on providing accommodation for low-income families. In conclusion, the responsibility for homelessness should not just be left to charities, but as a society we need to help people before they find themselves on the streets.

WRITING

A DISCURSIVE ESSAY; LEARN TO USE LINKING DEVICES

7 A Look at the photo. What do you think are the main reasons for homelessness? What is the best way to reduce the problem?

B Read the essay. Does the writer share your ideas?

8 Look at the guidelines for writing a discursive essay. How far does the essay in Exercise 7B follow the guidelines?

- 1 Include an introductory paragraph.
- 2 Divide your essay into for and against sections.
- 3 Use linking words and phrases.
- 4 Write a concluding paragraph.

9 A Complete the table with phrases in bold from the essay.

introduce additional information (meaning 'and') what is more, another (problem/issue/point, etc.),
_____, _____, _____

indicate a contrast with what has come before (meaning 'but') in contrast, on the contrary, conversely, _____, follow a logical argument (meaning 'therefore') thus, hence, accordingly, as a result, _____, _____, prove your point evidently, obviously, indeed, to conclude, _____,

speakout TIP

Most linking words come at the beginning of a sentence (followed by a comma), or in the middle of the sentence (usually with a comma before and after the linker). Some linkers can be used at the end of clauses. Underline an example in the essay of where the linker appears at the beginning, in the middle and at the end of a sentence.

B Delete the incorrect alternative in each sentence.

- 1 Most computer users have, in conclusion/evidently/in fact, never received any formal keyboard training. As a result/However/So their keyboard skills are inefficient.
- 2 He is old and unpopular. On the contrary/Furthermore/In addition to this, he has at best only two more years of political life left.
- 3 The laws were contradictory. Measures were taken to clarify them, accordingly/as a result/hence.
- 4 What he said was true. It was, nevertheless/thus/however, unkind.
- 5 I don't mind at all. Indeed/In fact/To conclude, I was pleased.
- 6 Many employees enjoy music in the workplace. However/Conversely/In addition to this, some people find it distracting or, indeed/in fact/obviously, annoying.

10 A Work in groups. Choose a statement from Exercise 6A and discuss the arguments for and against it.

B Plan an essay about your statement. Write a few key sentences using linking words.

C Write a discursive essay (250–300 words).

2.3 » WHO DO YOU TRUST?

- F introducing opinions
- P intonation for emphasis
- V idioms of opinion

SPEAKING

1 A Work in groups and discuss the questions.

- 1 Which professions are the most/least trusted by the public? Think of the top three (most trusted) and the bottom three (least trusted). Compare your ideas with other students.
- 2 Do you think public trust in some professions has changed over the years? Why/Why not? What has happened to make people more/less trusting of these professions?

B Read the article about the most and least trusted professions in the UK. Would the results be the same in your country?

In a recent UK poll to find the most trustworthy professions, doctors came first. Ninety-two percent of people trust them. Other highly trusted professions included teachers, judges and clergy. Near the bottom of the list were business leaders and journalists, but politicians came last. Only thirteen percent of people trust them.

Three of the most trusted professions gave us their comments.

Dr David Bailey, doctor

'I qualified when I was twenty-three years old. I've every intention of working until I'm sixty-five, so I've got a real vested interest in making sure that my patients think I am trustworthy. You do that by the way you behave towards people.'

Mary Davis, teacher

'We make every effort to get to know each individual pupil and we also try very hard to be part of the community. As well as knowing the pupils, we get to know their families.'

Professor Justin Lewis, university professor

'We don't have an axe to grind. Our business is doing research; teaching. In good faith, we try and produce things that are of value to society in general.'

 - a) give a very negative opinion about someone or something
 - b) take a deliberately contrary position in an argument to force people to justify their opinions
- 2 I'm going to speak my mind. I think this situation is absolutely terrible and we have to find a solution.
 - a) change your opinion after reconsidering something
 - b) say what you really believe
- 3 If you have to make a decision, it's no use sitting on the fence. You must choose one or the other.
 - a) being unable to commit yourself to one opinion or one side
 - b) asking lots of people to help you make a difficult decision
- 4 Let's not beat about the bush. You have committed a serious crime, and now you must pay for it.
 - a) give an opinion based on false evidence
 - b) talk a lot, but avoid directly addressing the most important point

C Which idioms in Exercise 2B can be used to introduce opinions or knowledge?

FUNCTION

INTRODUCING OPINIONS

3 A ▶ 2.4 Listen to a debate. What issue are the speakers discussing and what conclusion do they reach?

B Listen again and tick the ideas that are mentioned.

- 1 Journalists have an axe to grind.
- 2 Most journalists are truly impartial.
- 3 Some journalists are there to sell newspapers.
- 4 A journalist's job is to get proof and ask for evidence.
- 5 Journalists want the truth.
- 6 Good journalists make the case for both sides.
- 7 There are many libel trials because people don't like what is written about them.
- 8 Some journalists 'give others a bad name'.

EXPRESS DOUBT

6 A ▶ 2.5 Listen to three extracts from the debate in Exercise 3A. Tick the phrases you hear for expressing doubt.

- 1 I don't know about that.
- 2 I'm really not sure about that.
- 3 That's debatable.
- 4 I find that highly unlikely.

B Which expression above shows the most doubt?

C ▶ 2.6 INTONATION FOR EMPHASIS Listen to four sentences using the expressions above. Notice the intonation on the modifiers really and highly. Listen again and repeat.

SPEAKING

7 A Read about three real cases of untrustworthy behaviour at work. If you were the boss in these cases, what would you do? What would it depend on? Think of some ideas and make notes.

Case 1 Your company has started using an online management system for all of its business. Your assistant sometimes refuses to use this system and sends you documents the old way (by hand or by email).

Case 2 Someone in your company uses social media to gossip about his co-workers and recently started a blog criticising the company's practices. He doesn't mention names, but it's obvious who he is referring to.

Case 3 A co-worker has been claiming expenses for expensive meals and events. She says she was entertaining clients but you know she was in the office on those days.

B Compare your ideas with other students. If you were the boss, what options would you have? Debate the issues.

C What do you think the bosses really did? Turn to page 159 to find out. Do you think they did the right thing?

- 2 Read the programme information and answer the questions.
- Why is Carissa's achievement special?
 - Who was influential in helping Carissa become a chess master?
 - Why do you think chess masters are becoming younger and younger?

BBC News: The young chess master

For centuries chess has been a game for big thinkers, and those with mathematical minds. However, child prodigies have become a well-known phenomenon in chess. And the age of becoming a chess master is getting younger and younger. Carissa Yip first started playing chess aged six, when her father, an IT architect, taught her. Within a year, she was beating him. Aged nine, she became the youngest American to reach 'expert' level. Now, she has fulfilled another dream, becoming the youngest female U.S. chess master, defeating grandmaster Alexander Ivanov during the New England Open. In this programme, Jane O'Brien meets Carissa and investigates her remarkable story.

- Fewer than _____ percent of chess players in America reach the level of master.
- But Carissa is so unassuming that many others aren't even _____ she plays chess.
- She's just a normal, everyday young _____ going about her business in a middle school.
- Carissa: 'I guess it's no big _____ really.'
- Mum picks her up from school, she hangs out with her friends, and she does _____, eventually.
- But chess is her passion. And at her local club recently she played _____ games simultaneously.
- Chess can also be a lonely game when you're so _____ nobody wants to play with you at all.

B Watch the DVD again to check.

- 5 Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

- Do you think it is a good idea for children to learn games like chess when they are very young? Why/Why not?
- Are your own successes a result of your natural ability (inherited from your parents), your own hard work, or just pure luck?
- Do you think your parents' interests and achievements have shaped your own? Have you inherited personality traits from members of your family?

speakout a panel discussion

6 A  2.7 Listen to someone debating the role of nature versus nurture. Which side of the argument does she present? What examples does she give to justify her ideas?

B Listen again and tick the key phrases you hear.

KEY PHRASES

I'd like to begin by stating that ...
 As I see it .../What I think is ...
 I would say it depends on ...
 What you need to consider is ...
 I think it's ridiculous to suggest ...
 I absolutely reject the idea that ...
 So, to conclude I would have to argue that ...
 Does anyone have a question ... ?/Are there any other questions?
 That's a good question because ...

C Which key phrases are used to:

- introduce the argument? • invite questions?
- justify an opinion? • respond to questions?
- conclude?

7 A Work in groups. Think of points 'for' and 'against' the following statement.

Children should start school younger than they do now.

B Prepare to argue either 'for' or 'against' the statement. Follow the instructions.

- Choose a speaker for your group.
- Help them to prepare their argument.
- Make notes on how to introduce the argument, justify the opinion and conclude. Use the key phrases.

C The speakers take turns to present their arguments. Listen and ask questions at the end. Which case was argued the most clearly?

writeback a summary

8 A Read the summary. What are the key points? Do you agree with the writer's opinion?

Should your child learn a musical instrument?

Anna: Music in a child's life has many benefits. Some even claim that early exposure to classical music for very young children (even before they are born) helps them to become more intelligent, the so-called 'Mozart Effect'. The claims are unsubstantiated, but there is no question that classical music is soothing to the soul. They may not become musical prodigies, but exposing your children to songs and nursery rhymes from a young age will give them a feel for rhythm and language, and encourage them to appreciate the beauty of music as they grow.

At school, children who learn musical instruments are generally more successful and perform better in tests. It may be that learning music also helps children to develop their reasoning skills, learn about problem-solving and decision-making. It can also be great for confidence-building and is a valuable experience which helps to broaden their understanding and appreciation of the world around them.

Obviously, there are costs and commitments involved with teaching a child a musical instrument. But, if you ask me, it's one of the most precious gifts you can offer a child and one which he or she will appreciate for a lifetime.

B Write a summary (200–220 words) of your opinion about one of the issues in Exercises 6A or 7A.

V LEARNING AND EXPERIENCE

1 Find and correct the mistakes in sentences 1–8. There are five mistakes.

- 1 I've only been working here for two weeks so I'm still learning ropes.
- 2 If you're not sure, go with your guts feeling.
- 3 The team's hopes suffered a setback last night.
- 4 I decided to make advantage of the opportunity.
- 5 David didn't need to think because he trusted on his instincts.
- 6 That film had a profound effect on me at an early age.
- 7 I'm still trying to find my feet in my new job.
- 8 It's a difficult course and Frank's on the steep learning curve.

G HYPOTHETICAL CONDITIONAL: PAST

2 A Choose one of the scenarios below. Write as many sentences as you can, using past conditionals and regrets.

- Several years ago you had a great idea for a book, but you were too busy to write it. The story involved a schoolboy wizard and his two friends who fight against evil by using magic. Then the Harry Potter books appeared.
- You have a safe, steady job, but you are totally bored. As a teenager you were a really good dancer and had the opportunity to go to the best dance school in the country. You gave it up because the profession seemed too risky.
- A few years ago you saw a wonderful house for sale. You thought about buying it, but hesitated because of the long commute to work. By the time you decided to make an offer, it was already sold. You frequently dream about living in that house.

B Compare your ideas with other students.

V COLLOCATIONS: OPINIONS

3 A Work alone. Prepare to talk about some of the following topics.

- 1 Describe the national stereotype for your country. Do you think it is an accurate description?
- 2 Name three kinds of prejudice or stereotype people are trying to challenge in your country.
- 3 Describe a person you had a preconception about, who turned out to be very different.
- 4 What do you think leads to people becoming narrow-minded/open-minded about an issue?
- 5 What is the best way to change someone's perspective about a topic?
- 6 Talk about something you decided to do, but then had second thoughts about.
- 7 Describe a film/book which you would consider eye-opening. Why?
- 8 Can you think of any convincing/unconvincing arguments in the media at the moment?

B Work in pairs. Talk about as many of the topics as you can in five minutes.

G VERB PATTERNS

4 A Complete the sentence stems so they are true for you.

- 1 I would never expect ...
- 2 In my school, we were required ...
- 3 I've always been interested in ...
- 4 I'd love to have the chance ...
- 5 Recently, I've been making plans ...
- 6 It's impossible ...
- 7 I don't mind ...
- 8 I'd advise you ...

B Compare your ideas in pairs.

F INTRODUCING OPINIONS

5 A Use a word from each box to complete the conversations.

according can if my

- 1 A: If you want my honest opinion, she should apologise.
B: _____, I agree.
- 2 A: _____ the statistics, we're the industry's most successful company.
B: As far as _____, statistics are worthless.
- 3 A: To _____, the painting hasn't been sold yet.
B: _____ ask me, the price is too high.
- 4 A: From what I _____, there's a lot of corruption in sport.
B: The _____, there's corruption everywhere, not only in sport.

B Play devil's advocate. Choose three of the topics below and write sentences using the expressions in Exercise 5A. Read your sentences to other students. Say what you think of their ideas.

- politics and politicians
As far as I'm concerned, taxpayers should never pay for politicians to have a second home in the capital.
- sport
- technology
- a film or TV programme
- classical music

VOCABULARY

LANDSCAPES

1 A Work in pairs. What comes to mind when you think of the word landscape?

B Match the words in the box with synonyms 1–8.

picturesque tranquil bustling magnificent ancient deserted run-down unspoilt

- 1 shabby, dilapidated, in a bad state run-down
- 2 calm, quiet, peaceful
- 3 stunning, breathtaking
- 4 old, historic
- 5 unchanged, not altered by tourism
- 6 busy, full of people and noise
- 7 beautiful, lovely, pretty, attractive, pleasant
- 8 empty, uninhabited

C Complete the sentences with adjectives from Exercise 1B.

- 1 The flower market was _____ with shoppers.
- 2 The view from the tower was _____.
- 3 We wandered around the _____ walled city. Life there hadn't changed for centuries.
- 4 Tourists haven't discovered the area yet, so the beaches are completely _____.

D Look at the photos. Use the vocabulary to describe the scenes.

Every month the BBC Lonely Planet magazine runs a photo competition. They ask readers to send in pictures they have taken on their travels and tell the story behind them.

1 Taking the plunge: Sangkhlaburi, Thailand

'We were in a long-tail boat crossing the Khao Laem reservoir in Sangkhlaburi, close to the Burmese border in Western Thailand, when our driver took us on a detour to Thailand's longest wooden bridge. As he cut the engine and we idled up to the bridge for a closer look, some local boys were enjoying a bombing (diving) competition. When they saw us, they seized the moment to showcase some of their diving and one after the other plunged into the water. We were only there for a few minutes but this impromptu performance remains one of the highlights of my time in Thailand. This shot embodies the spontaneity of the country, and its people's vibrancy.'

Alistair McDonald was on a two-week holiday in Thailand.

2 Seeing the light: Havana, Cuba

'The Malecón is a five-mile-long, six-lane sea road, laid out by U.S. Marines from 1901 and fronted by nineteenth-century buildings in various states of disrepair. It is where Habaneros* hang out and party at the weekends and is the unique fingerprint of Havana. When I got there, the sun was starting to set. There was a warm breeze blowing and a strong sea swell, with waves crashing against the sea wall. The sun was barely peeping through the clouds when I noticed a 1950s Pontiac approaching in the distance. I waited until it drew closer before pressing the shutter. For me this photo captures the essence of Havana: a uniquely photogenic city frozen in time for fifty years.'

Anthony McEvoy was in Cuba for work and a short holiday.

*Habaneros – people born in Havana, Cuba

3 Time stands still: Matera, Southern Italy

'Nothing could have prepared me for my first sight of the Sassi di Matera. I wasn't sure what to expect from a cave town where the locals live in the same houses as their ancestors did 9,000 years ago. I felt like I'd wandered onto a film set. The jumble of stacked cave houses appeared to tumble down a ravine. Adding to the magic of the place was the fact that I was the only person there and it felt like a ghost town. I left feeling slightly humbled – maybe it was knowing that my hotel room was once a cave dwelling for a family of ten and their livestock!'

Greg Jackson spent his summer holiday last year in Italy.

READING

2 A Where do you think the places in the photos are?

B Read the texts and match stories 1–3 with photos A–C.

C Read the texts again and answer the questions.

- 1 How did Alistair arrive at the scene?
- 2 What example(s) of spontaneity does he mention?
- 3 What is the Malecón and what happens there?
- 4 Which things in the photo and the text capture the essence of Havana for Anthony?
- 5 What is special about the houses in Matera?
- 6 How did Greg feel when he left the town?

D Discuss. Have you ever been to any of these places? Would you like to visit them? Why/Why not?

SPEAKING

3 A Think of a 'snapshot' moment of a special holiday. Where were you? How did you feel? Why is the memory important to you?

B Compare your 'snapshot moments' with other students.

GRAMMAR

NOUN PHRASES

- 4 A Look at the ways in which noun phrases can be modified. Add the underlined sections in the texts to the appropriate category below.

RULES

A noun phrase is a group of words which functions as a unit to describe the noun. Information can be added before or after the noun in different ways.

1 Compound nouns

A noun can be used to modify a noun. Sometimes these are written as two words, sometimes as one word, and sometimes they are hyphenated.

cave houses, fingerprint, candy-floss, ¹ _____

2 Compound adjectives

Adjectives can be used to modify the noun, using hyphens.

long-tail boat (a boat with a long tail)

When the noun part is plural, it becomes singular in a compound.

nine-year-old girl (the girl is nine years old), ² _____

3 Adverb + adjective combinations refreshingly cool breeze, ³ _____

4 Adjectives

When several adjectives come before the noun, they need to be in a specific order.

Value adjectives (which give your opinion) come first, followed by size, age, shape, colour, origin and material.

delicious slice of home-made apple pie, ⁴ _____

5 Prepositional phrases and participle clauses

These occur after the noun.

Prepositional phrases:

a camera for filming short video clips, ⁵ _____

Participle clauses:

waves crashing against the sea wall, ⁶ _____

- 5 Put the words/phrases in the correct order to make sentences.

- home-made / a slice of / chocolate / delicious / on top / cherries / with / cake
- a / mountain bike / bright red / with fifteen gears / heavy-duty / brand new
- Greek / seafood / it's a / of the best / fresh / restaurant / some / small / in the area / which serves
- with / a / soup / traditional / freshly baked / bean / Tuscan / bread
- a / medieval / castle / ancient / steep / on top of a very / hill / fascinating

- 6 A Look at the extra detail added to the noun phrases below. What parts of speech in Exercise 4 have been added each time?

The shop serves tarts and coffee.

- 1 The shop serves custard tarts and good coffee.

custard tarts = compound noun;
good coffee = adjective + noun

- 2 The shop serves delicious hand-made custard tarts and extraordinarily good strong black espresso coffee.

- 3 The shop serves delicious hand-made custard tarts with a sprinkle of cinnamon on top and tiny cups of extraordinarily good strong black espresso coffee.

- 4 The old pastry shop in central Lisbon serves delicious hand-made custard tarts with a sprinkle of cinnamon on top and tiny cups of extraordinarily good strong black espresso coffee.

- B Work in pairs. Add more detail to the following noun phrases.

- The man lives in a house.
- There was a piece of cheese on the table.
- The shop sells furniture.
- The boy enjoyed the cake.
- The streets were empty.
- The bus was crowded.

- C Write three complex noun phrases describing:

- a place you have visited.
- something you have enjoyed eating/cooking.
- something you bought recently.

- D Read your sentences to other students. Can they picture the scene you describe? Ask each other questions to find out more information. Who wrote the most interesting descriptions?

B 3.1 WORD STRESS: compound nouns/adjectives Is the main stress on the first or the second word of a compound noun/adjective? Listen and repeat.

WRITING

A DESCRIPTION OF A PLACE; LEARN TO ADD DETAIL

7 A Read the Lonely Planet guidebook entry for Lisbon. Make notes about the city under the following headings.

- | | | |
|------------|-----------------|--------------------|
| • Location | • Nearby sights | • Things to see/do |
| • History | • Architecture | • Food and drink |

LISBON

Situated on the southwestern coast of Portugal and overlooking the Rio Tejo, Lisbon offers all the delights you'd expect of Portugal's star attraction. Gothic cathedrals, majestic monasteries and quaint museums are all part of the colourful cityscape, but the real delights of discovery lie in wandering the narrow lanes of Lisbon's lovely backstreets.

As bright yellow trams wind their way through curvy tree-lined streets, Lisboêtas stroll through the old quarters, much as they've done for centuries. Village-life gossip in old Alfama is exchanged at the public baths or over fresh bread and wine at tiny patio restaurants, as fadistas (proponents of fado, Portugal's traditional melancholic singing) perform in the background.

Meanwhile, in other parts of town, visitors and locals chase the ghosts of Pessoa (a Portuguese poet) in warmly lit 1930s-era cafés. Yet, while history is very much alive in ancient Lisbon, its spirit is undeniably youthful.

In the hilltop district of Bairro Alto, dozens of restaurants and bars line the narrow streets, with jazz, reggae, electronica and fado filling the air and revellers partying until dawn. Nightclubs scattered all over town make fine use of old spaces, whether on riverside docks or tucked away in eighteenth-century mansions.

The Lisbon experience encompasses so many things, from enjoying a fresh pastry and bica (espresso) on a petite leafy plaza to window-shopping in elegant Chiado or watching the sunset from the old Moorish* castle.

Just outside Lisbon, there's more to explore: the magical setting of Sintra, glorious beaches and traditional fishing villages.

*Moorish – relating to the Moors (Muslim people from Northern Africa)

B Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

- 1 What tense(s) does the writer use to describe Lisbon? Why?
- 2 Do you think the language in the article sounds formal or informal? Why?
- 3 Do you think the writer likes the place? Why/Why not?

8 A What kinds of details did the writer add to improve the sentences below?

- 1 Trams travel along the streets of the old town, where many locals walk.
- 2 In Alfama, people gossip in the public baths, or in restaurants where they enjoy bread, wine and traditional Portuguese music.
- 3 In Bairro Alto, you can find many restaurants and bars which play live music.
- 4 Nightclubs around the town can be found in all kinds of interesting places, near the docks and in old mansions.
- 5 In Lisbon you can do many things, like enjoy a coffee at a pavement café, go window-shopping or visit the castle.
- 6 Outside Lisbon, it is worth visiting the town of Sintra, and also beaches and fishing villages along the coast.

speakout TIP

Add colour. Details help to make your writing more colourful and interesting for the reader. Try to use a rich range of vocabulary and add details (colours, shapes, sounds, smells, tastes, feelings) to help the reader experience your description. Underline the sections in the article which add colourful detail to the description.

B Read the description below.

Underline phrases which refer to the senses and identify each sense.

Approaching the central square, you can hear the voices of the market sellers, advertising their wares. The sweet smell of fruit ripened in the hot sun lingers in the air, mixing with the aroma of strong, fresh coffee and petrol fumes from the small, three-wheeled motorised vans the local farmers, or 'contadini', use to bring their produce to market. Each stall has mountains of different coloured fruits and vegetables, firm red peppers, purple beans, tomatoes of all shapes and sizes. There's a liveliness in the air, as the old ladies haggle over the price of the cherries and wave their arms in rebuke at the younger workers.

9 A Plan a guidebook entry. Choose a place you know well. Make some notes using the headings in Exercise 7A. Think about how you can add some interesting detail.

B Write your guidebook entry (200–250 words).

LISTENING

1 Work with other students. Look at the photos and discuss the questions.

- Why do you think houses are designed and built like this? What are the advantages?
- Do you think they look comfortable? What problems might there be?

2 A 3.2 Listen to an interview with an expert on homes around the world. What is the man's answer to question 1 above?

B Listen again and look at the words/expressions in the box. What do they mean and what does the speaker say about them?

a refuge from wild animals spirits are earthbound wooden stilts acts as an insulator so-called primitive dwellings adorned them with figurines nomads in Central Asia

*A refuge is a place where you can hide from something.
 He describes tree houses as a refuge from wild animals.*

3 Read the extracts from the recording and discuss the questions.

- 'I had a real awakening when I travelled in Africa.'
 What does have an awakening mean? Can you think of a time when you had an awakening?
- 'I saw these enormous tree houses ... and it just took my breath away.'
 What does take your breath away mean? What does it mean when something is breathtaking?
- 'These houses are built in accordance with the habitat.'
 What does this mean? What kind of habitat do you live in?
- 'Houses can be beautiful but in most cultures they're built to be purely functional.'
 Think of three objects that are purely functional.

VOCABULARY

-Y ADJECTIVES

4 A Read descriptions 1–5. Are they from a lecture, an ad, or a piece of fiction? How do you know?

- In hotter climates, people are forced to take refuge in shady dwellings.
- The gloomy room suited her dejected mood. She stared at the dreary, grey carpet and waited.
- Roomy cottage, spacious, good views, airy kitchen with large windows, sleeps eight.
- Native peoples would use animal skins to insulate the house from chilly weather in winter.
- He saw the poky interior – tiny, cramped – was adorned only by a cabinet repainted in gaudy colours: bright red, purple and yellow.

B Underline the adjectives in Exercise 4A. Are they positive, negative or neutral? Think of more examples to describe a place or room.

speakout TIP

Many adjectives end in -y. Some come from the root word, e.g. dirty, noisy, smelly. Others do not have a root word, e.g. happy, pretty, silly. If we don't know the meaning, we need to guess from the context. Do the adjectives in Exercise 4B have a root word?

5 A LONG/SHORT VOWELS Are the bold vowel sounds long or short? Underline the odd one out in each set.

- | | |
|-----------------------|---------------------|
| 1 dreary/city/really | 4 hockey/joke/poky |
| 2 gaudy/body/naughty | 5 shady/ready/daily |
| 3 gloomy/footie/roomy | 6 bury/airy/ferry |

B 3.3 Listen and check. Then listen again and repeat.

GRAMMAR

RELATIVE CLAUSES

6 Read what six people say about homes. Which sentences are true for you?

- 1 Most people who work at home need peace and quiet, but I need noise and chaos. Salih Moustafa, inventor
- 2 My first home was by the sea. It was dreary and poky and chilly in the winter, none of which mattered because the location was perfect, and location is everything. Pablo Anaya, nurse
- 3 A home for me is anywhere I can put my feet up and let my hair down. Hannah Obi, maintenance worker
- 4 You have to separate home from work. I started a company in my garage. A year later, six colleagues were pretty much living there 24/7, at which point I knew we needed an office. Kath Scheidel, entrepreneur
- 5 A home is only a home because of your memories in it. The door on which I drew marks to show my children getting taller is just a piece of wood, but it is priceless to me. Paul Hartfeld, sanitation worker
- 6 The best homes are those whose major characteristic is brightness. Good light can compensate for almost anything. Jiao Cheung, architect

7 A Check what you know. Look at comments 1 and 2 in Exercise 6 and underline the relative clauses. Which relative clause is defining (gives essential information)? Which is non-defining (adds extra information)? Which uses a comma?

B Underline the relative clauses in comments 3–6. Are they defining or non-defining?

C Match descriptions a)–f) with the relative clauses in Exercise 6.

- a) a sentence in which a preposition comes before the relative pronoun (which/who/when, etc.) 5
- b) the possessive whose (used only before nouns)
- c) a fixed phrase (usually three words) with which. It usually starts with a preposition, e.g. by which time.
- d) a relative pronoun after some of, all of, none of, etc.
- e) a defining relative clause with no relative pronoun
- f) a defining relative clause in which the relative pronoun (who, which, etc.) can be replaced by that

D Work in pairs and answer the questions.

- 1 In what kinds of clauses (defining or non-defining) can you sometimes use that instead of who, where, when, etc.?
- 2 If a relative pronoun (which, who, etc.) refers to the object of the sentence, we can sometimes omit it. Which relative pronoun has been omitted from sentence 3?
- 3 Which sentence, a), b), or c) is incorrect?
 - a) I have the thing that you want.
 - b) I have the thing what you want.
 - c) I have what you want.

8 Cross out the incorrect option in each sentence.

- 1 My aunt and uncle, _____ cook well, spend most of their time in the kitchen.
a) both b) both of whom c) who both
- 2 That's the run-down little bar _____ we first met.
a) in which b) where c) which
- 3 The hill _____ overlooks a secluded hotel off the beaten track.
a) on where the castle was built
b) on which the castle was built
c) which the castle was built on
- 4 The group of friends, _____ I've known for ages, went on a yearly holiday together.
a) who b) whose c) a few of whom
- 5 We decided to go home in 2014, _____ we had travelled to thirty-five countries.
a) at which point b) since when
c) by which time
- 6 The food _____ they served was wonderful.
a) – b) that c) what
- 7 We watched the election, _____ was never in doubt.
a) the result of which b) that result
c) whose result
- 8 She was the person _____ for our information.
a) on whom we relied b) whom we relied
c) who we relied on

SPEAKING

9 A Work in pairs. You're going to design a dream 'alternative home'. Where will it be and what will it look like? Think about the following topics and make notes. Design your ideal alternative home.

- shape/type/design of home
- special features
- decoration
- objects/furniture
- size
- view

B Work in groups. Take turns to describe the home.

HOTEL CHELSEA

To say that the Hotel Chelsea has an interesting history would be an understatement.

Since the early twentieth century, the hotel has been home to dozens of celebrities. The fame of the building itself pre-dates its fame as a hotel; when it was constructed in 1883 as a block of flats, it was New York's tallest building. It became a hotel in 1905. Although prosperous at first, during a period of maladministration the hotel began to degenerate. It went bankrupt and changed hands in 1939. Its proactive new managers soon got it up and running again and, in the post-war era, its fame grew.

As a part of the New York artistic scene, the hotel is irreplaceable. Its famous residents have included actors, artists, singers, writers and numerous anti-establishment figures. Frida Kahlo, Jean-Paul Sartre, Jackson Pollock, Marilyn Monroe, Bob Dylan, Jimi Hendrix, Madonna and Uma Thurman all lived there for a while, and the hotel has been immortalised (and some would say overexposed) in dozens of songs, books and films (9½ Weeks, The Interpreter). Always a place of non-conformity, the hotel's management sometimes allowed penniless residents to pay for their rooms with artworks, some of which still hang in its lobby today. Its famous residents have found the hotel conducive to creativity. Arthur C Clarke and Jack Kerouac wrote, respectively, 2001: A Space Odyssey and On the Road while living in the hotel, and Madonna used it for a photo shoot for one of her books. Unfortunately, the hotel is also associated with artistic misbehaviour and tragedy. One of numerous examples of wild adventures behind its closed doors, the poet Dylan Thomas allegedly collapsed in room 205 of the hotel after partying too hard. He died four days later.

VOCABULARY PLUS

PREFIXES

10 Read about a hotel. Why is it famous?

11 A Read the text again. Find and underline an example of a word beginning with each prefix in the table.

prefix	meaning	example
de- ir- im- non- un-	negatives/ opposites/ reverse	degenerate under- over-mal- mis-pre- post-pro- anti-

B Complete the second column of the table with the meanings in the box.

negatives/opposites/reverse size or degree time (before or after) wrong or bad attitude or opinion (for or against)

C What parts of speech do we use the prefixes with?

D Work in groups. Add your own examples to the third column of the table.

12 One statement about prefixes is true. Correct the false statements.

- When we add a prefix to the root word, the spelling of the root word usually changes.
- We cannot add more than one prefix at a time to root words.
- Learning to recognise prefixes helps us to build our vocabulary and guess unknown words.
- There are rules that tell us which prefixes we can add to each root word.

13 A Complete the words by adding prefixes.

- a place that is _____ known to most tourists because it's _____ exposed in the media
- a hotel, restaurant, bar or café that looks _____descript but is _____rated
- a hotel, restaurant, bar or café that you think is _____attractive and a bit _____rated
- a building that is _____inhabitable because it was _____managed in the past
- a threatened habitat that is _____replaceable, but _____possible to save

B Work in pairs. How many examples of places in Exercise 13A can you think of? Compare your ideas with other students.

A place that is unknown to most tourists is Regent's Canal in London. You can walk nine miles along it from Camden Market to Little Venice, and it's great!

VOCABULARY

CITY LIFE

1 A Work in groups and discuss the questions.

- 1 Have you been to any of the cities in the photos?
- 2 What do you think might be good about living in them? What problems might there be?
- 3 What is good and bad about the city or town where you live?
- 4 What other problems connected with urban living can you think of?

B Read the article. Does it mention any of the issues you discussed in Exercise 1A?

Welcome to Perfect City

Environmental psychology looks at the ways in which we are affected by our surroundings. Almost every aspect of the built environment, from the colour of hospital walls to the type of grass used in parks, can have a dramatic impact on crime, health, education, commerce and happiness. BBC Focus magazine reports on how psychologists are teaming up with designers to build safer and healthier spaces.

Classic trick

In the mid-nineties in Montreal, it was discovered that playing classical music through the public address system would drive away crowds of loitering teenagers and cut crime. The idea soon caught on. Now, classical music is played in over 60 London underground stations.

Stop signs

Sometimes less is more – towns such as Bohmte in Germany have found that the best way to slow traffic is to remove all road signs and markings. Without these guides, drivers have to slow down and negotiate rights of way with other drivers, cyclists and pedestrians.

Dipping distractions

Researchers in Manchester found that pickpockets took advantage of pedestrians distracted by confusing environments. With visual clutter removed and spaces made easier to navigate, pedestrians are more aware of their surroundings and less likely to become crime victims.

Delays stress

A study of rail commuters found the highest levels of the stress hormone cortisol among those who perceived their journey as unpredictable. Real-time transport updates, such as a text message letting you know exactly when the next bus will arrive, have been found to reduce stress.

One day in London

BBC

By 2050 it is expected that more than three-quarters of the world's population will live in cities. With more than 8.6 million inhabitants, London is a world in a city; a world-class city to live and study in; a city where over 300 languages are spoken. But what drives its success? And how can it take the best from its past and turn it into a dynamic future? In One day in London, we meet the man who's revolutionised the iconic red double-decker bus; take a trip to the annual Wimbledon championships; and learn about what inspires London fashion designers of the future.

8 A Read the sample proposal. Do you think this pitch would receive funding? Why/Why not?

The music of our heritage

This documentary would examine the importance of the National Folkloric Festival (Festival Nacional de la Mejorana) in Panama. The mejorana is a small guitar, and the music and dance associated with it form an important part of Panama's cultural heritage. Nowadays though, fewer people know how to make the instrument or how to play it.

The aim of the documentary would be to film the four-day festival in order to raise awareness of the mejorana and the consequences of losing this tradition in favour of more modern music.

During the festival, groups from all around the country gather to enjoy Panamanian folklore. There are musical performances, dances, singing, bullfights, traditional competitions and an ox-cart parade. It is a colourful and spectacular occasion. The documentary would highlight the atmosphere at the festival, filming music and dance performances, and interview young and old visitors to gather opinions about the importance of the mejorana and of protecting the traditional customs that are an integral part of Panamanian life.

B Write a short proposal (200–250 words) for your documentary idea. Use the instructions in Exercise 7B.

AMERICAN VIOLET: A CRIMINAL JUSTICE STORY

Based on true events, American Violet tells the astonishing story of Dee Roberts, a courageous young waitress who is prepared to risk everything in a battle for justice that will ultimately change her life forever.

It is the last thing she expects to happen. Dee Roberts, a single twenty-four-year-old mother of four children, is working her shift in the local diner of a small Texas town, when police storm into the café and drag Dee out in handcuffs. Arrested for suspected drug offences, Dee is left in the county prison, where she learns that police have raided the housing project where she lives, and arrested a number of people. Dee soon discovers she is being charged as a drug dealer, based on evidence provided by a single, unreliable police informant, who is facing his own drug charges.

GRAMMAR

INTRODUCTORY IT

6 A Look at the sentences from the text. What does it refer to?

- 1 It is the last thing she expects to happen. (line 6)
- 2 It is regular practice for these types of raids to take place. (line 32)
- 3 It seems that the more guilty plea agreements that are signed ... (line 37)

B Check what you know. Add it in the correct place(s) in sentences 1–10.

- 1 I could hardly believe when the police officer told me what had happened.
- 2 Has been reported that a number of people in the area were affected.
- 3 Is no use! I've looked everywhere for my wallet but I can't find anywhere.
- 4 We would appreciate if you didn't tell anyone about this.
- 5 Is surprising how quickly I was able to master the skill.
- 6 Is no wonder you couldn't find your bag. You left in the café.
- 7 A: How much further is? B: Is not far now.
- 8 Is a pity that you won't be able to make to the lunch.
- 9 Was a warm day for the time of year.
- 10 Appears that someone has made a mistake.

Although she has no previous convictions, and no drugs are found on her at the time of her arrest, or in any other subsequent searches, Dee is offered an impossible choice: plead guilty to the charges and be allowed home as a convicted criminal, with a ten-year suspended sentence; or stay in prison to fight the charges and risk a much longer prison sentence if she loses her case. Everybody, from her mother, who is looking after her children, to her lawyer who offers little hope of winning the case, urges Dee to accept the deal, and plead guilty to a crime she hasn't committed. But Dee's sense of justice prevails, and she decides to risk her own freedom and the custody of her children, to stand up for what she believes is right. She chooses to fight the district attorney who ordered the racially motivated drugs raid, and refuses to confess to something she did not do.

Working together with a lawyer from the civil liberties union, and a previous narcotics officer, Dee discovers that it is regular practice for these types of raids to take place, and that the war on drugs in the USA means that local police forces get more money according to the number of convictions they make. This situation leads to arrests being made based on little or no evidence, and pressure being put on those arrested to sign plea agreements. It seems that the more guilty plea agreements that are signed, the easier it is for the district attorney to build a record as a crime fighter, even though in reality it is really he who is committing the crime. Those who are arrested often have little choice but to agree to the guilty plea, and accept the conviction. They simply don't have the courage and the resources to be able to fight the system and prove their innocence.

The film American Violet, which is based on the true story of Regina Kelly who fought her case against the criminal justice system and won, highlights dysfunctions within the system, and shows how difficult it can be for poorer people to defend themselves.

7 Look at Exercises 6A and 6B again. Find examples of it used for the following purposes.

RULES

Use it at the beginning of a sentence:

a) to talk about the weather, a situation, dates, times, distances, etc.

(it + verb)

It rains a lot in September.

b) to express opinion or emotion.

(it + adjective/noun phrase)

It's extraordinary how often we have the same ideas.

c) to talk about what you understand from the evidence.

(it + verb + clause)

It appears that someone broke into the office.

d) to report what someone else thinks or says.

(it + be + past participle + clause)

It has been reported that the police decided not to pursue the case.

Use it in the middle of a sentence:

e) as a substitute object for transitive verbs, to be expanded on later in the sentence.

I'd appreciate it if you would help with our enquiries.

f) as part of a set phrase.

I can't help it.

speakout TIP

A lexical chunk is a group of words commonly found together. They include collocations, but while collocations tend to consist of content words only, lexical chunks are more phrasal and may include grammatical words like prepositions and articles, e.g. miscarriage of justice. Lexical chunks may act as discourse markers or adverbials, e.g. at that time, in her own way. Find a lexical chunk in Exercise 9B which acts as a time adverbial.

Dr Richard Kimble, a well-known Chicago surgeon, returns home one night to find that his wife has been viciously murdered in their own home. When police find Kimble at the scene of the crime, he is arrested, and later charged and convicted of his wife's brutal murder. However, on the way to the prison, a failed escape attempt by other prisoners gives Kimble his chance of freedom. While on the run from U.S. Marshall Samuel Gerard, Kimble's only hope of proving his innocence and clearing his name is to find out for himself who was responsible for his wife's death, and to lead the team of detectives on his trail to the real perpetrator.

WRITING

A PROBLEM-SOLUTION ESSAY; LEARN TO USE PARALLELISM

- 9 A Which items in the box would you expect to find in a problem-solution essay?

personal information dialogue anecdotes reference to research facts and figures a description of a problem a conclusion rhetorical questions a plan of action

- B Read the example essay and answer the questions.

- 1 What issue does it deal with?
- 2 What do you think of the writer's idea?
- 3 Which features in Exercise 9A does it contain?

Could New Technology Be the Solution?

- 1 How many people are killed with guns every year? Let's take a round number – one million – and look at the figures for gunshot deaths. In Japan, 0.7 people per one million inhabitants are killed by gunfire in a year. In South Korea it's 1.3; in England it's 4.6; in the Netherlands it's 7; in Spain it's 9; in Kuwait it's 12.5. In the United States, it's 152.2. That's not a misprint. The figure illustrates one of today's most important issues: gun control.
- 2 One of the causes of this figure in the USA is the citizens' 'right to bear arms' (carry weapons) written into the U.S. constitution. The country has an extremely violent past and this has resulted in an ingrained sense of the need to protect oneself and one's family. Another reason is the rate of gun ownership. Around forty-six percent of families in the USA have a gun in the house.
- 3 How can countries – the United States in particular – reduce the number of gun deaths? A complete ban on guns is barely imaginable in the USA. However, there are a number of other options. These include developing better systems for registering guns and ammunition, instigating background checks for prospective gun owners and introducing tougher prison sentences for people who own guns illegally. The problem is that these solutions have already been proposed, passed into law and denounced as failures.
- 4 One possible solution that hasn't been tried yet is 'ID tagging' on guns. Each gun would be registered to one person's fingerprint and only that person would be able to fire the gun. If someone else attempted to fire it, the gun wouldn't work. This would mean that stolen guns would be useless. Also, the police would have fewer problems identifying the killers.
- 5 In conclusion, the solution proposed here is one for the future. The idea would not bring an end to gun deaths. Until guns are completely banned, it is unlikely that anything could reduce that number to the magic zero. But the idea of using new technology (ID tags) to defeat the ills brought about by old technology (guns) is not just a shot in the dark. It could become reality sooner than you think.

- 10 Look at the expressions below for different parts of a problem-solution essay. Tick the expressions used in the model essay.

In South Korea it's 1.3; in England it's 4.6; in the Netherlands it's 7 ...

These include developing better systems for registering guns and ammunition, instigating background checks for prospective gun owners and introducing tougher prison sentences ...

- B Why do you think writers use parallelism? Which idea below is not a good answer?

- 1 It gives symmetry and consistency to the writing.
- 2 It gives ideas equal weight.
- 3 It uses balance and rhythm to deliver the message.
- 4 It helps us write better introductions.

- C Complete the sentences with the option that uses parallelism.

- 1 The protest against gun laws was led by a number of civil rights groups, social justice campaigners and _____.
a) other people
b) human rights activists
c) those people who believe in fighting for human rights
- 2 In a few years, the powers-that-be may know everything about gun owners: the films they watch, the food they eat, _____.
a) the air they are breathing
b) and the air they breathe as they walk around
c) the air they breathe

- 12 Work in groups and choose a topic. Use your own idea or a topic in Exercise 2A. Follow stages 1–5 below.

- 1 What exactly is the problem? Write it in one sentence.
- 2 Brainstorm possible solutions and make notes.
- 3 Discuss which solutions are the best.
- 4 Make an outline for your essay. Use the expressions in Exercise 10.
- 5 Write your problem-solution essay (300–350 words).

3 Read a true story and discuss questions 1–3.

- 1 What decision did Ann Timson have to make?
- 2 Do you think she was a hero?
- 3 What would you have done in her situation?

SUPERGRAN BASHES BURGLARS

A seventy-year-old grandmother became a hero when, armed with just a shopping bag, she defied six hammer-wielding jewellery thieves on motorbikes. Ann Timson was talking to a woman on the street when she heard a commotion. She looked across the road and saw six men smashing the windows of a jewellery store in broad daylight. Seeing that other bystanders were doing nothing, Ms Timson decided to act. She dashed across the road and started to hit one of the robbers with her shopping bag. He fell off his motorbike and was pinned down by several members of the public before the police arrived. Amazingly, all of this was captured on film by a freelance cameraman who happened to be nearby. The footage became a YouTube sensation. Asked later if she saw herself as a hero, Ms Timson said no, but 'somebody had to do something'. It turns out that Ms Timson has been 'doing something' for years. She has confronted drug dealers and other criminals before, putting her own safety at risk in order to aid the community. Although she does not generally believe that the public should take on robbers – 'it's dangerous' she says – her actions have inspired others, and made at least a few would-be thieves think again.

4 A 4.5 Listen to two people discussing the story. Would the speakers do what Ann Timson did?

BBC News: The Con Artist

BBC

This BBC news programme tells the story of a painter who used his talent to commit a series of crimes in the art world. Wolfgang Beltracchi and his wife Helene embarked on a criminal scheme which resulted in prison sentences for both of them. In this programme, a journalist interviews the couple, as well as one of the people responsible for catching them. She attempts to find out what lay behind the Beltracchis' scheme, how they were caught, and what they now think of their crimes.

- 8 A Read a short article based on the fact file in Exercise 6A.

The Garden Shed Gang

Shaun Greenhalgh left school at 16 with no qualifications. He wasn't from a wealthy family and had no useful connections in the art world, but within little more than ten years he was producing forgeries of paintings, ceramics and sculptures that fooled experts at some of the UK's foremost institutions. His range was astonishing. He could produce anything from ancient Roman coins to 17th-century paintings to 20th-century sculptures.

He made these works in a garden shed in the family home which he shared with his parents. When the police eventually inspected the home they were shocked firstly at the number of artefacts littering the house – old coins, paintings, a bust of George Washington – and secondly at the fact that a family making hundreds of thousands of pounds lived in relative squalor.

Shaun's father, George, was a major part of the scam. A World War II veteran, he went to museums and auction houses in a wheelchair, playing the role of an innocent old man. The family cleverly provided documents to prove the provenance of the artworks they tried to sell, and George usually pretended not to know the true value of the artefacts.

Eventually they were caught when Shaun attempted to create an Assyrian relief from 600 BC. He made several mistakes, the most glaring of which was a horse's reins in the wrong style and a spelling mistake on an inscription. At first the family protested their innocence, but when the scale and variety of their forgery began to become apparent, Shaun came clean. While his parents were considered too elderly and infirm to endure prison sentences, Shaun served over four years in jail. Like many ex-forgers he is now trying to make an honest living selling his own art.

INTERVIEWS

Are you good at keeping secrets?

LISTENING

- 1 Work in groups and discuss the questions.
 - 1 Why do people keep secrets? If someone tells you something in confidence, are you likely to keep their secret or to tell someone else?
 - 2 Who would you talk to if you wanted to tell someone your innermost thoughts? Who would you definitely not talk to?
- 2 A Read the radio programme listing. It says that society has become more 'confessional'. What do you think this means? Do you agree with the statement?

Everyone has a secret at some point in their lives and most of us will be told a secret and asked to keep it quiet. As society allegedly becomes more 'confessional', are we far too willing to talk about matters that should be kept hidden? Are we losing the ability to keep secrets? When is it appropriate to divulge a secret and how should it be done? Are there types of secret that should never be revealed?

This BBC radio programme asks members of the public about their secrets, and Jenni Murray takes up the discussion with Eva Rice, whose new novel is called The Lost Art of Keeping Secrets.

- B 5.1 Listen to the programme. How many secrets do they mention? What are they?
- C 5.2 Listen to the interview again and answer the questions for each section.
 - 1 What would have made the presenter's father furious?
 - 2 A girl revealed her friend's secret. Was she forgiven?
 - 3 What secret did the wife want to know from her husband?
 - 4 Is the woman who had another relationship still married?
 - 5 What kind of secret would the author keep?
- D Discuss. How would you react if someone revealed a secret you'd asked them to keep? Would you like to read the book? Why/Why not?

- 1 As a child, my grandmother would often tell me stories. Stories of times gone by. And I would listen with eager fascination, especially to the stories of her childhood. One story I will always remember was of my 'Auntie Madge', my great-aunt. She was a quiet, unassuming woman, who I once met as a child. My grandmother told me how Auntie Madge had been a dazzling young lady. How all the boys in the neighbourhood had wanted to take her out. But Auntie Madge only had eyes for one very nice young man, who she had fallen in love with.
- 2 Although the young couple planned to spend the rest of their lives together, there was a problem: my great-great-aunt Ada, Auntie Madge's mother. Ada had a reputation for being a bit of a dragon and wanting to control everything. Ada didn't approve of the young man in question and she wasn't at all happy to let her daughter marry him.
- 3 After some persuasion, however, she reluctantly made a deal with Auntie Madge, saying, 'OK. If the two of you are determined to marry, then all I ask is that you stay away from each other for one year. During that time, you shouldn't see each other, speak to each other or write each other letters. And if, after a year, he writes to you and still wants to marry you, then I will accept. I'll consent.'
- 4 It was a long year, but the couple kept their promise. But, after a year, Auntie Madge never heard from the young man and had to assume that he'd found someone else. She subsequently married another man, but the marriage was very unhappy and eventually ended in divorce. From then on, Auntie Madge lived alone, and never had children.
- 5 Years later, when her mother died, Madge found a box belonging to her mother ...

B Work in pairs and discuss. What do you think of Ada's behaviour? Can you think of a good title for the story?

10 A Which features 1–10 are often found in narrative writing?

- 1 an introduction to set the scene
- 2 detailed descriptions of people, places or objects
- 3 detailed statistics and evidence
- 4 descriptions of feelings/actions to suggest mood
- 5 direct speech and adjectives/adverbs for impact
- 6 a summary of the main events
- 7 narrative tenses and time phrases to show the sequence of events
- 8 an unexpected end to the story

B Read the story in Exercise 9A again. Which features in Exercise 10A does it contain?

11 A Look at the extract from the story. Underline the time phrase.

During that time, you shouldn't see each other, speak to each other or write each other letters.

B Underline the time phrases in paragraphs 4 and 5 of the story in Exercise 9A.

C Complete sentences 1–8 with the time phrases in the box. There may be more than one possible answer and you don't have to use all of the phrases.

after as soon as the moment afterwards meanwhile ever since originally while instantly previously subsequently eventually immediately in the meantime from then on

- 1 _____ she entered the room, she knew there was something wrong.
- 2 The experience haunted me for years _____.
- 3 Cromwell, _____, picked up his hat and dusted it off.

- 2 He recognised her immediately. Previously, ...
- 3 She arrived on a boat from Costa Rica. As soon as ...
- 4 It was a long and tedious journey. Eventually, ...

12 A Follow stages 1–4 to draft a narrative of your own (200–250 words).

- 1 Identify an experience to write about (e.g. a childhood experience, a challenge, achieving a goal) and think about why it is significant.
- 2 Make notes about the experience, including details (sounds, colours, etc.).
- 3 Create an outline of the story.
- 4 Use the outline to write a first draft.

speakout TIP

After drafting your narrative, spend some time away from it. Then try reading it out loud. This helps to highlight any missing or repeated words or missing punctuation. Can you add any more detail to improve it? Are there any details you can remove because they distract from the main story?

B Check your draft. How many correct features from Exercise 10A did you use? Try to make some improvements and redraft your story.

READING

1 A Read the introduction to the article below. Can you think of any commonly held beliefs that are actually myths?

B Work in pairs. Student A: read the myths below and answer the questions. Student B: turn to page 160.

- 1 What is the myth?
- 2 Which myths were disproved by experiments?
- 3 What is the truth about the myth?

C Tell your partner what you learnt. Then read your partner's section of the article quickly.

Is it true?

Does sugar make kids hyperactive and does cold weather really give you a cold? Conventional wisdom says 'yes', but what does science say? Are these commonly held perceptions of the world we live in really true or are they fallacies? We've spoken to experts to verify the rumours and uncover the truth.

1 Sugar makes kids hyperactive

Not one study has conclusively shown that children with a sugar-laden diet behave differently from those with a sugar-free diet. Most of the studies come from the USA with titles such as Hyperactivity: is candy causal? but time after time, no link has been found. Despite the evidence, parents simply can't believe this is a myth. In an experiment where they were told their children had been given a sugar-loaded drink, parents rated the children as 'significantly more hyperactive' than parents whose children had received a sugar-free drink. In reality, the children had been given the same sugar-free drink. The difference in behaviour was all in the parents' minds.

2 Get cold and you get ill

One professor uncovered the truth by studying volunteers who were asked to dunk their feet in cold water. He discovered that being chilled does make a cold more likely. But it's not quite as simple as that. The crucial requirement is that your body is harbouring a cold virus in the first place. No virus, no cold.

3 Turning your PC off without shutting it down damages it

According to tests in the USA, as long as your PC isn't in the middle of an epic video editing project or full of unsaved documents, bypassing the full shutdown rigmarole shouldn't cause any major harm. After you've hit the power button, Word and Excel easily recover your previous spreadsheets and musings.

4 Reading in the dark ruins your eyesight

Reading in the dark can make your eyes tired, but won't damage them as it causes no permanent changes to your eyes' structure. You might get eye strain, but this goes away when you turn up the lights.

VOCABULARY

TRUTH OR MYTH

2 A Find the expressions below in the articles on this page and on page 160 and answer the questions.

conventional wisdom a commonly held perception a fallacy

GRAMMAR

THE PASSIVE

3 A Read the statements. Are any of them true?

- 1 The Great Wall of China is the only man-made object visible from space.
- 2 Caesar Salad is named after Julius Caesar.
- 3 Eskimos have over one hundred words for snow.
- 4 Chewing gum takes seven years to pass through the digestive system.
- 5 A sudden shock or great stress can suddenly turn your hair white.

B Check your answers below.

- 1 False. The Great Wall of China cannot be seen from space with the naked eye, but cities can be made out, especially at night.
- 2 False. Caesar Cardini, a restaurateur, invented the recipe in Tijuana, Mexico, in 1924. He had the dish named after him.
- 3 False. It is claimed by linguists that Eskimos actually have about as many words for snow as we have in English (sleet, blizzard, slush, powder, etc.) – nothing like one hundred.
- 4 False. Chewing gum is processed through the body like any other food.
- 5 False. Hair isn't expected to change colour suddenly, but some people's hair turns white quickly even in a stress-free situation.

C Check what you know. Underline examples of passive forms in Exercise 3B. Why do we use passive forms?

D Which sentences contain examples of:

- a) a passive used when the important information in the sentence is the object of the verb? 4
- b) a passive used to show that we are not certain about a statement?
- c) a pattern that uses have/get + object + past participle to describe something that is done to the subject?
- d) a passive used because we do not know who performs the action (or it is not important), and we are interested in the action itself?
- e) a passive infinitive (to be + past participle + to + verb)?

4 Work in pairs. Which phrases in italics would be better in the passive? Change them as appropriate.

One piece of conventional wisdom that people have passed on throughout the generations is that Friday 13th is unlucky. No one knows where this superstition came from, though some people have attributed it to the fact that on Friday 13th October 1306, King Philip of France arrested the Knights Templar and began torturing them.

People know the fear of the number thirteen as triskaidekaphobia, and people consider thirteen unlucky in many cultures. We can see this superstition in different contexts: in the United States, many skyscrapers don't have a thirteenth floor and several airports don't have a thirteenth gate. Hospitals and hotels regularly have no room number thirteen. In Italy, the organisers omit the number thirteen from the national lottery, while on streets in Florence people give the house between number 12 and 14 the number 12½. Other countries have different 'unlucky numbers'. In Japan, people often omit the unlucky number four from hotels, hospitals and apartment blocks.

MULTI-WORD VERBS

6 A Discuss. Which of the activities below have you done in the last twenty-four hours? Which do you do at least once every twenty-four hours?

send a text message play a video game eat fast food go on a social networking website hang out in a shopping mall talk on a mobile phone listen to music on a mobile device

B Read the book review and answer the questions.

- 1 What is the message in Steven Johnson's book?
- 2 Do you agree with this idea?

The media is full of warnings about teens and modern life: too much technology and video games and fast food. Journalists and social theorists have looked back to the golden age before kids stood around texting and have decided enough is enough! Take away their iPods! Switch off their mobile phones! But writer Steven Johnson has thought it over and come to a different conclusion. His book, Everything Bad is Good for You: How Today's Popular Culture is Actually Making us Smarter, boils down to one message: kids can carry on gaming and texting because as the world speeds up, these skills are turning them into quick-thinking, multi-tasking 21st-century citizens. Who's right? Could the doom-mongers be wrong? Read the book and find out for yourself.

7 A Read the review again and underline multi-word verbs with back, around, away, off, over, down, on, up and out.

B Look at some common meanings of particles in multi-word verbs. Complete the table with the meanings in the box.

removal or disposal think or talk about ~~continue~~ remove, cancel or end something with no direction or aim ~~increase or improve~~ return (to the past) be in the open decrease or reduce

preposition	meaning	examples
up	increase or improve	speed up, brighten up, jazz up on	continue	go on, carry on, keep on off		pension off, cry off, call off, switch off out		find out, speak out, stand out, call out down		slow down, narrow down, crack down away		put away, blow away, take away back		bring back, think back, look back, cast (your mind) back around		mess around, stand around, hang around over		mull over, pore over, look over, think over

C Which examples in the third column are new to you? Look them up in a dictionary and make a sentence with them.

speakeout TIP

Knowing some general meanings of particles can help you to understand multi-word verbs when you read or hear them. However, many multi-word verbs have several meanings which depend on the context. It is a good idea to learn these and write them down as they arise.

8 A Complete the sentences with the correct particles.

- 1 The government cracked _____ on illegal immigration because the situation couldn't go _____.
- 2 I bought some new curtains for my bedroom to jazz it _____.
- 3 We mulled _____ the candidates and narrowed them _____ to a shortlist of three.
- 4 I've thought it _____, and I'm not going to accept the job.
- 5 I don't think the weather's going to brighten _____ before the match starts. Perhaps we should call it _____.

B  5.5 STRESS: multi-word verbs

Listen to the answers to Exercise 8A. Where is the stress on the multi-word verbs: on the verb or the particle? Is there a pattern? Practise saying the sentences quietly to yourself and then aloud.

9 A Underline the correct alternatives.

- 1 Cast your mind back/Narrow down/Talk over to your childhood. Who taught you your most important lessons?
- 2 How do you carry on/think back/find out if a journalist or other writer is telling the truth?
- 3 When faced with many possible truths, how can we call out/narrow down/speed up our options to one?
- 4 Is it always useful to mull over/mess around/speak out difficult issues with other people?

B Choose two questions in Exercise 9A. Work in pairs and discuss your answers.

VOCABULARY

JOURNALISM

1 A Work in pairs. What do you know about the website WikiLeaks? Answer the questions.

- 1 What kind of information is published on the website?
- 2 Who sends the information?
- 3 What effect does it have on governments and large organisations?

B Read the article to check your ideas.

IN SEARCH OF THE TRUTH ...

The problem with investigative journalism is that scoops are increasingly hard to come by. Big companies, celebrities and governments frequently take out injunctions to protect information which they want to be kept secret, to prevent it from being published. But that doesn't stop websites like WikiLeaks.

The whistle-blowing website WikiLeaks has at times dominated the news with its steady drip feed of secret documents. WikiLeaks was responsible for the release of thousands of documents containing sensitive information from governments and other high-profile organisations, including classified military records. In just three years, WikiLeaks published more scoops than the Washington Post managed in thirty years.

However, the site has divided opinion. For some it is seen as the future of investigative journalism; described as the world's first stateless news organisation. But for others – particularly the governments and corporations whose secrets it exposes – it poses a huge risk.

WikiLeaks allows anyone to submit documents anonymously. A team of reviewers, journalists and WikiLeaks staff decide what is published. The site then uses advanced cryptographic and legal techniques to protect its sources by using a network of servers around the world.

The more people who use the network, the harder it becomes to unpick. However hard the authorities may try to stop websites like WikiLeaks, it seems that one of the new powers of the internet is that, one way or another, the truth will out.

2 Match the words/phrases in bold in Exercise 1B to the definitions below.

- 1 When a journalist made a news story public before anyone else had heard about it.
- 2 If someone doesn't want you to publish information about them, they might use this legal procedure.
- 3 When a journalist thoroughly investigates a single topic of interest, often involving criminal practice by an organisation.
- 4 Exposing unethical or illegal actions by an organisation.
- 5 Keeping the identities of the people who provide information to journalists secret.
- 6 Information which, if disclosed by unauthorised people, could cause problems for a company or government, etc.

Does the speaker sound aggressive (A) or polite (P)? Repeat the phrases copying both types of intonation.

SPEAKING

6 A Write down your answers to two or three of the questions below. Think of ideas to justify your position.

Has the internet changed the nature of journalism for the better or the worse?

Is it justifiable to obtain information by phone or email tapping?

Does the public have a right to know about the private lives of people in positions of power?

Should governments/the police/big organisations be allowed to keep information secret?

B Work in groups and discuss the questions. Try to use the phrases from Exercise 5B. Then report back to the class.

DVD PREVIEW

1 A Work in pairs. Check you understand the words in bold.

- 1 Would you be happy to spend time on a deserted island? Why/Why not?
- 2 Why might an area become abandoned or uninhabited?
- 3 What kinds of people might need rehabilitation?
- 4 For what kinds of illnesses might someone require quarantine?

B Answer the questions.

2 Read the programme information. What has the island previously been used for?

New York's Abandoned Island

BBC

Imagine a place within easy reach of busy New York where there are no people, and very little noise. Located in New York City's East River, North Brother Island was once the site of a quarantine hospital, treating patients with infectious diseases such as tuberculosis. Later, it housed returning war veterans and their families, and then it was used as a rehabilitation centre for drug addicts.

However, now the island is abandoned, and has been uninhabited for more than fifty years. It's one of New York's best-kept secrets. A dense forest of thick vegetation conceals the disintegrating hospital buildings, and birds nest among the abandoned rubble. The island is designated as a bird sanctuary and is off limits to the general public.

The photographer Christopher Payne was granted rare permission to visit the island to take photographs. His images can be seen in the book, North Brother Island. The Last Unknown Place in New York City.

- B Work in groups. Take turns to describe your secret places and ask follow-up questions.

writeback secrets guide

- 8 A Read the secrets guide. Which of these places would you choose to visit, and why?

Edinburgh's best-kept secrets

Edinburgh is Scotland's city of secrets. Here is our guide for discovering the magic and mystery of this beautiful place.

- 1 Did you know Edinburgh has a river? The green, leafy footpaths and cycle ways along the Water of Leith offer a peaceful escape from the buzz of the city.
- 2 Edinburgh is a city of villages and Grassmarket is a wonderful neighbourhood to explore. Historically, this is where poets like Robert Burns and Wordsworth would meet in public houses. Now, with its pedestrian streets lined with fashionable boutiques, bars and restaurants it's a great place to breathe in the city's history.
- 3 Take a trip to Cramond Island. At low tide on a sunny day, you can walk out to this small island, about a mile out to sea. The island is abandoned but hidden amongst the woods you can still find a ruined farmhouse and some old buildings from World War II. Be careful to get back before the tide rises though!
- 4 Secluded off bustling South Bridge is Dovecote Studios. The building used to be a Victorian swimming pool, but is now home to a tapestry studio. You can watch the talented weavers at work, peruse art in the gallery, or just enjoy an excellent cup of coffee.
- 5 Feeling a little peckish? Why not pop in to I. J. Mellis Cheesemonger's in Stockbridge Market? You'll feel like you're walking back through time as you enter, but this is a great place to pick up some local farmhouse cheeses and freshly baked bread. It's one of my favourite morning stops.

- B Write your own secrets guide (250 words) for a city you know well/the area where you live. Try to include five secrets about the place. You can use your own ideas and information gained from listening to other students.

IDIOMS: SECRETS

INTERVIEWS

 Do you follow trends in music and fashion?

Years from now	Future predictions
3,000	If civilisation collapses, most buildings, bridges and dams are going to be a distant memory . The signs are that most words commonly used today will become extinct due to the rapid evolution of language.
4,000	The days of living on islands will be over . The ice in Greenland will have melted because of extreme global warming, and sea levels are going to be six metres higher than today.
10,000	According to some estimates, we'll be living out our final days. With overpopulation, disease and global warming, people may not survive beyond the year 10,000.
20,000	Chernobyl, the place in which a nuclear accident occurred in 1986, will finally be safe.
50,000	The KEO Time Capsule, which will have been floating in space for 50,000 years, will re-enter the Earth's atmosphere. Niagara Falls will have become a thing of the past . The remaining 32 kilometres to Lake Erie will erode and the waterfall will cease to exist.
100,000	The titanium in your laptop will begin to corrode. A global disaster may well have happened: either a super-volcano or a large climate-altering asteroid may have affected Earth.
500,000	A new Ice Age will probably be occurring.
1,000,000	Monuments like the Pyramids of Giza and Mount Rushmore might still exist, but all other man-made objects will be gone. All glass created up until now will have decomposed.
10,000,000	The Red Sea will have flooded the Rift Valley, dividing Africa, and a new ocean is likely to have formed. The planet will be bathed in gamma radiation from a supernova, triggering mass extinctions.
50,000,000	The Mediterranean will be gone. Africa will have collided with Eurasia, sealing off the Mediterranean and creating a mountain range similar to the Himalayas. The ice will have melted in the Antarctic, raising the sea level by 75 metres.
150,000,000	America and Africa will start moving back together.
250,000,000	All continents will be fused together as one land mass.
600,000,000	One of three types of photosynthesis will no longer be possible. As a result, 99 percent of species will die out.
100 quintillion	Earth will die, consumed by the sun.

READING

1 A You are going to read a text that predicts the Earth's future 1,000 years or more from now. What do you think it might say about the following?

buildings language global disasters monuments like the Pyramids of Giza the Earth's temperature

B Read the text to see if you were correct.

2 A Work in pairs and answer the questions.

- The text says gamma radiation will trigger mass extinctions. What is a trigger? What does the verb mean here?
- The text says 'Africa will have collided with Eurasia' and 'all continents will be fused together'. What is the difference between 'collide' and 'fuse together'? Which is the more violent action?
- The text says an area of land will 'erode', titanium will 'corrode' and glass will 'decompose'. What is the difference between these verbs?
- One synonym for 'cease to exist' is 'die out'. Find two other synonyms in the text with the same meaning. They both use the verb become.

B Discuss with other students.

- Do you think the text is optimistic, pessimistic or realistic? Explain your opinion.
- Which of the predictions do you think are based on things that have happened before?

Most words that were used 1,000 years ago are no longer used.

VOCABULARY

PREDICTIONS

3 A Look at the expressions in bold in the text. Which refer to:

- predictions with a link to the past? (2 expressions)
a distant memory
- predictions that are highly possible? (2 expressions)
- the evidence for a prediction? (1 expression)
- a situation that will stop because of changing conditions? (1 expression)

B Look at the expressions below. They are similar to two of the expressions in Exercise 3A. Which two?

- The facts suggest/The figures point to
- is bound to/is destined to

SPEAKING

4 Work in pairs. Tell your partner about:

- a prediction in the text that may well come true.
- something good that you think is likely to happen to your country or town/city.
- something that people used frequently, but which is now a thing of the past.

GRAMMAR

FUTURE FORMS

5 Check what you know. Match sentences 1–5 with rules a)–e).

- 1 Earth will die.
- 2 The time capsule will have been floating for 50,000 years.
- 3 Sea levels are going to be higher than today.
- 4 The ice in Greenland will have melted.
- 5 We'll be living out our final days.

RULES

- a) Use be going to + infinitive to make a prediction based on current evidence.
- b) Use will + infinitive to make a prediction.
- c) Use the future continuous to describe an activity that will be in progress at some time in the future.
- d) Use the future perfect to describe something that happens before a time in the future.
- e) Use the future perfect continuous to describe something in progress for a period up to a specified time in the future.

6 Read about three other ways to talk about the future. Look at sentences 6–8 and choose the correct option to complete rules f)–h).

- 6 Time travel could be a reality by 2075.
- 7 Robot intelligence is due to surpass human intelligence by 2100.
- 8 The government is to introduce a new law.

RULES

- f) Use could/might/may + infinitive to describe a prediction that is not certain/certain.
- g) Use be due to + infinitive to describe something that is expected to happen or arrive at a particular time/unlikely to happen soon.
- h) Use be + to + infinitive to describe an informal plan/an official arrangement or order.

7 A 6.1 CONNECTED SPEECH: auxiliary verbs

Tick the sentences you hear.

- 1 She'll be running. / She'll have been running.
- 2 I'll see him later. / I'll be seeing him later.
- 3 I'll be there. / I'll have been there.
- 4 We're going to be there at 1.00. / We're to be there at 1.00.

B Notice how some grammar words (e.g. auxiliary verbs) are pronounced in connected speech. Listen again and repeat.

She'll have been running. /ʃɪləvbiːn/

8 A Are both alternatives in sentences 1–8 possible? If so, is the meaning different?

- 1 By 2020, eighty percent of city dwellers will be working/are to work from home.
Both are possible. We use 'will be working' to make a prediction. We use 'are to work' to describe an order from an authority.
- 2 Europe might/will become a united state in the next ten years.
- 3 Families will be/will be being racially very mixed.
- 4 By 2030, scientists are finding/will have found cures for most illnesses.
- 5 Cars will/are due to be banned from city centres.
- 6 In fifty years' time, most rich people will live/will have been living until they are over 100.
- 7 By 2030, English is going to be/will have become the world's third language.
- 8 By 2050, it's possible that governments will censor/will have been censoring the web for years.

B Say the correct sentences out loud, using shortened forms of auxiliary verbs.

C Do you agree with statements 1–8? Discuss with other students.

SPEAKING

9 Read about some ideas of the future below. Discuss the questions.

- Which ideas do you like?
- Which do you think will come true?
- What problems would the inventions solve?
- What would the consequences be if these ideas became reality?

MACHINES OF THE FUTURE

Driverless car

A car that drives itself safely everywhere, navigating the roads by using artificial intelligence and information provided by satellites.

A recycler that makes drinks

A machine that recycles all food waste by blending it with proteins and chemicals to produce a nutritious drink. The drink can be used as a supplement for undernourished populations.

Body parts regenerator

A machine that grows human tissue to replace damaged body parts. It can be used to treat soldiers, accident victims and anyone with a major injury.

'Experience' implant

An implant that records everything you do, see and hear every day. It allows you to watch, hear and feel any sensation from any time in your past.

VOCABULARY PLUS

PREPOSITIONAL PHRASES

10 A Work in pairs. Read some predictions about global developments. Complete the paragraphs with suitable prepositions (one or two words). Use one preposition for each paragraph, once in every sentence.

India is ¹ on track to surpass China as the most populated country by 2035. In India, 48,000 babies are born every day ² on average. In future, India's resources such as schools and hospitals will be permanently ³ on trial as they try to keep up with rising demands.

Millions of children are ⁴ at risk of contracting diseases from dirty water. Only sixty percent of the world's population has easy access to drinking water ⁵ at present. In the future, it is hoped that ⁶ at least ninety-five percent of people will have running water in their homes, but there are no guarantees of this.

As humanity's need for resources and industries has grown, it has become clear that man is ⁷ the far the most destructive animal on Earth. We are, ⁸ of nature, extraordinarily prolific polluters of the planet. In future, everyone will have to monitor their pollution ⁹ under law.

While the number of humans has risen, the number of wild animals such as lions has been ¹⁰ a decline for decades. We are now preserving the genetic codes of animals that are ¹¹ in danger of extinction. In future, we hope to be able to, ¹² to effect, 'recreate' these animals.

In the early twenty-first century, corruption in business has started getting ¹³ under control. Corporations have tried to keep a number of scandals ¹⁴ out of sight. In future, ¹⁵ as a necessity, stricter anti-corruption laws will be passed.

B Look at all the prepositional phrases you completed in Exercise 10A and try to work out what they mean.

speakout TIP

Prepositional phrases are short, fixed phrases (usually two or three words) that begin with a preposition. They are often followed by a noun, e.g. at war, by accident. When you notice prepositional phrases, write them down in a complete sentence. This will help you to remember them.

11 A Replace the underlined words below with prepositional phrases from Exercise 10A. Then use your own ideas to complete as many of the predictions as you can.

- In the future, people will be vulnerable to catching a new disease called ... at risk of
- Birth rates are falling fast, so soon ...
- Inflation will get completely crazy, which will lead to ...
- By 2040 there will be a minimum of ten billion people alive, and this will cause ...
- In future, legally people will have to register their ...
- To protect animals that are close to becoming extinct, we will ...
- People will, generally, have only one ...
- Right now, robots aren't very intelligent, but by 2040, ...

B Choose a topic you are interested in (e.g. the environment, sport, technology, etc.) and do stages 1–4.

- Write down three predictions about this topic.
- Note some consequences of these predictions (problems or benefits).
- Explain your ideas to other students.
- Say which predictions you agree/disagree with and why.

- Why do you think English has become a 'lingua franca', used by people around the world to communicate? What factors contributed to its rise as a _____ language?
- Think of three ways to improve your _____ of a language and one situation where you need to _____ your language.
- What happens when you experience a language _____? Do you think these will still exist in the future? Why/Why not?
- Can you name an ancient or _____ language? Can you name a country where the _____ language used for legal purposes is different from the _____ language spoken on the street? Do you think this is a problem?
- Would you ever use _____ language? In what kinds of situations?

LISTENING

- 2 Work in pairs. Read about the radio programme and answer the questions.

- What do Stephen Fry and David Crystal discuss in the programme?
- What are the two main reasons given for why English is changing?
- What kinds of changes are mentioned?

Stephen Fry's English Delight

As the use of English as a lingua franca continues to grow and spread around the world, the language itself is changing – adapting to how its speakers use it. The number of people who speak English as a second language has now grown to far outweigh the number of native speakers. Professor David Crystal, a world authority in language change, thinks sounds which some speakers find difficult to pronounce might disappear. And the vocabulary will certainly change, too.

The other huge influence on the way English will change relates to technology. With computers that 'read' text and automatic person-to-person translators, will computers soon be joining the swelling billions who use and change English? In this BBC radio programme, Stephen Fry and Professor David Crystal discuss the evolution of English.

- 3 A 6.2 Listen to part of the programme. Tick the topics that are mentioned.

- new Englishes
- culture and identity
- the type of English spoken by computers
- local languages/brands of English
- changing pronunciation
- English as a mother tongue
- English as a foreign language

B What do they say about each point?

Language is linked to your culture and identity because everything that makes up your identity (plants, animals, history etc.) has to be expressed with language.

- 4 A Two of the sentences below are incorrect. Listen to the programme again and correct them.

- The way English continues to move across the globe gives us a whole range of Englishes.
- In the beginning, there was just British English and American English, and then came Australian English, South African English, Indian English and so on.
- When a country adopts a new language, it changes it to suit its local needs.
- English has been adopted by more than sixty countries around the world.
- There are about 400 million first language speakers of English.
- Around the world, one fifth of the population speaks English as a second or foreign language.

B Discuss. How do you think English will change in the next 200 years? Do you think it will continue to be a global language? Do you think other languages will become more important?

GRAMMAR

CONCESSION CLAUSES

5 A Check what you know. Read the predictions about the future of English. Underline the correct alternatives.

- 1 While/Despite English is still the dominant language on the internet, other languages (like Mandarin, Russian, Spanish and Portuguese) will become increasingly important.
- 2 In spite of/Although 27.3 percent of internet users are English speakers, this number is closely followed by Chinese speakers (22.6 percent). Though/Despite we may find it hard to believe, the global language of the future might be Chinese or Arabic.
- 3 Difficult though it may be/Strange as it seemed for students, in the future many school and university subjects are likely to be taught in English, using English materials.
- 4 However/Whichever way you look at it, children need to start learning English when they are as young as possible.
- 5 Even though/In spite of increasing numbers of English speakers, the global predominance of English is likely to change.
- 6 Even if/Despite being able to use simultaneous translation on their phones to speak to each other, people will still want to learn another language.
- 7 Whilst/Whichever people continue to use English to communicate on the internet, the language itself will continue to change.

B Work in pairs. Do you agree or disagree with the statements above? Why?

6 A Use the rule below to help you identify the main clauses and concession clauses in sentences 1–7 above.

RULES

Concession clauses are used to introduce information which contrasts with information in the main clause.

B Answer the questions.

- 1 What punctuation separates the clauses?
- 2 Do the linkers in italics introduce the main clause or the concession clause?
- 3 Most of the linkers in italics are followed by a verb clause. Which two are followed by a noun/-ing form?

C  6.3 INTONATION: concession clauses Listen to the sentences. Which part of the sentence uses the higher intonation: the concession clause or the main clause? Listen again and repeat the intonation patterns.

7 A Write one sentence to connect each pair of ideas. Use the words in brackets. Think carefully about the punctuation.

- 1 I always try to speak to people in their local language / I don't speak it very well (even if)
I always try to speak to people in their local language, even if I don't speak it very well.
- 2 I spend a lot of time studying grammar / I still make mistakes (though)
- 3 It is difficult / I always try to believe what people tell me (difficult though)
- 4 It doesn't matter which way you look at it / technology is changing education (however)
- 5 I agree that English is important / I think students need to learn several languages (while)
- 6 It may seem strange / I find it hard to remember facts and figures (strange as)
- 7 It is a fact that I enjoy travelling / I don't get the opportunity very often (despite)
- 8 Learning a language is difficult / it doesn't matter which method you choose (whichever)

B Choose three of the linkers in italics from Exercise 5A (even if, while, although, etc.) and write sentences which are true for you (your language, your family, your job/studies etc.). Compare your ideas in pairs. Are any of your sentences similar?

SPEAKING

8 A Work in groups of three and read about three ideas for language learning. Student A: read the text below. Student B: turn to page 159. Student C: turn to page 162. Take turns to explain the ideas you read about.

Robot teachers

English-teaching robots, called 'Engbots', have been introduced in schools in Korea. It is expected that in the future these robots should be able to teach on their own, so that there will be no need for English teachers in the classroom.

B Discuss the pros and cons of each idea. Which language learning ideas do you think are likely to be popular in the future?

Whilst the robot teacher would work for free, it would take away jobs from humans. Despite the appeal of the robots for children, I don't think this idea will be very popular.

WRITING

A REPORT; LEARN TO DESCRIBE TRENDS

- 9 A Look at the graph. What does it tell you about which languages will be important in the future? Can you make any predictions based on the evidence provided?

- B Read the first part of a report about languages on the internet. Answer the questions.

- Which language does the writer think may become the dominant internet language of the future? Why?
- Which other languages do you think are important to mention in the report? Why?

This report will look at the changing importance of various languages on the internet and draw conclusions about the implications for language learners around the world. The graphic shows the top ten languages used on the internet, and gives information about the rate of growth of each language and the total number of users.

It is quite clear from the data that languages other than English are becoming increasingly important on the internet. There has been a huge surge in demand for Chinese, for example, which has increased by 1910.3 percent in the last thirteen years and is now not far behind the use of English in terms of total numbers of users. Whilst there are 800.6 million users of English on the internet, Chinese is fast catching up, with 649.4 million users. If the current trend continues, Chinese will soon become the most dominant language on the internet.

Another popular language on the internet is currently Spanish, with 222.4 million users, making it the third most dominant language. Spanish users have also shown a steady increase in growth (1123.3 percent) over thirteen years, indicating the continued importance of Spanish as an internet language.

However, there are other languages which show an increasing influence. In particular, ...

- 10 Read the guidelines for writing a formal report. Which guidelines 1–6 are followed in the report in Exercise 9B? What would you expect to find in the remaining part of the report?
- 1 Introduce the report so that its purpose is clearly demonstrated.
 - 2 Organise your report into paragraphs or sections under different headings/subheadings.
 - 3 Refer to statistics, graphs and other data.
 - 4 Give recommendations or draw conclusions about the information in your report.
 - 5 Use formal language (objective structures like the passive, full forms rather than contractions, formal vocabulary and register).
 - 6 Use linking words and phrases to help support your ideas.
- 11 A Look at sentences 1–6. Which alternative is not possible according to the graph in Exercise 9A? Cross out the incorrect alternative.

- 1 The importance of Chinese as a global language has increased dramatically/risen sharply/dropped alarmingly.
- 2 There has been a surge/a drop/an increase in the use of Chinese on the internet.
- 3 Numbers of people using Arabic on the internet have plummeted/soared/grown in recent years.
- 4 There has been a relative surge/decline/drop in the percentage of people using English online, as numbers of people using languages such as Chinese, Russian and Arabic have declined/increased/grown.
- 5 Numbers of Chinese speakers with access to the internet have rocketed/exploded/collapsed.
- 6 There has been a steady/sharp/gradual increase in the use of Spanish online.

- B Use the prompts to write sentences describing trends in education. Use the present perfect tense.

- 1 explosion / demand for / mobile technology / language learning
- 2 number / people / communicating regularly / social networks / increase / dramatically
- 3 number / students / attend / private language schools / study English / plummet
- 4 sharp increase / ability / learners / access / learning materials / internet
- 5 gradual decline / appeal / traditional teaching methods

- 12 Complete the report in Exercise 9B by continuing the last paragraph and adding a conclusion (150 words). Use the language in Exercise 11A to help.

VOCABULARY

TRENDS

1 A Discuss the questions.

- 1 How would you describe the people and things in the photos?
- 2 Do any of the images look out-of-date?
- 3 How do trends start and spread?

B Read the text about how trends spread. What is the main idea of the text? What is your answer to the question at the end of the text?

→ The best way to understand how trends take off might be to think of them as epidemics. How is it that unknown books suddenly become bestsellers, TV programmes become instant classics, toys that were adored by generations suddenly lose their appeal? The answer is that trends spread like viruses. Somehow they capture the imagination and strike a chord with the public. Take the rise of the shoe brand, Hush Puppies. Sales of Hush Puppies had stagnated to just 30,000 pairs a year. Suddenly, the shoes became the latest thing in Manhattan clubs and stylists began to use them as accessories in fashion photo shoots. It turned out to be more than just a passing trend. In 1995, Hush Puppies sold 430,000 pairs, and in 1996, 1,700,000 pairs. Or look at the technology revolution led by Apple Inc. The number of Apple users has risen dramatically in the last ten years. How do these changes happen? Some say it's a combination of word of mouth and pure luck, while marketers think it's something we can control. Who is right?

2 A Read the text again and find the words that complete the phrases in bold.

- 1 When trends suddenly become popular, they take ...
- 2 When a product goes out of fashion, it has lost its ...
- 3 One way that fashions spread is they capture the ...
- 4 When people identify with something, it strikes a ...
- 5 When a product or trend is suddenly popular, we say it becomes the latest ...
- 6 When something is popular for just a short time, we say it's just a passing ...
- 7 When there is more of something now than before, we say the number has ...
- 8 When something becomes trendy because people tell each other about it, it spreads by word of ...

B Work in pairs. Think of examples of:

- something that was a passing trend.
- something that has captured the public imagination.
- something that has taken off recently.

- 7 A Read a description of crowdfunding from a wiki. Have you ever been involved in crowdfunding?

Crowdfunding

Crowdfunding democratises the growth of innovations. Here's how it works. First, you need a great idea. It could be a creative project or a task. Then you reach out over the internet, explaining your idea through an online presentation, perhaps using video. Then friends, family, acquaintances and complete strangers can decide if they want to fund you. Their donation can be anything from one euro to thousands, and they can donate anonymously if they wish. Big donors usually, but not always, get something in return.

- B  6.7 Listen to two people discussing whether to invest in an innovation. What is the gadget and what do they think of it?

- C Listen again. Which key phrases do they use?

KEYPHRASES

One of the biggest benefits is ...
 It'll go on the market for two pounds/a hundred pounds/ten euros.
 Can we see any drawbacks?
 I don't think it'll catch on.
 I can't really see any negatives.
 It seems like a great investment.
 It's a start-up.
 My initial reaction is ...
 It has a lot of potential.
 It's a money-spinner.

- 8 You are going to decide which tech trends to fund. Work in two groups. Group A, turn to page 164. Group B, turn to page 162. Read the information and then follow instructions a)–c) below.

- Describe the trends to a member of the other group.
- With your new partner, discuss which trends will take off and which will not. You have €1,000 to donate. Together, decide on how you will divide the funding. You may choose to fund all, a few, or just one idea.
- Tell other students what you decided and why.

writeback describe a trend

- 9 A Read an online article about a trend. How might it help the whole world?

THE MAKER MOVEMENT

People have always created their own objects, but today the practice is growing and it even has a name: The Maker Movement.

The movement uses a DIY (Do-It-Yourself) ethic and is notable for people sharing their creations and getting together in Fab Labs (Fabrication Laboratories) or Maker Spaces to collaborate on their designs. The people involved are a curious mix of computer hackers, skilled artisans with an eye for good design, and tinkerers – the type of people who used to spend their Sundays building toy railway sets.

Most of the objects they create are simple. Schoolchildren might make toys from recycled cardboard and plastic or model bridges from dry spaghetti. But in some areas – notably San Francisco – the Maker Movement is using advanced technology to create things that may benefit all of humanity. Recent products include prosthetic arms for war victims, 3D models of wild habitats that allow us to predict climate change, and robots to help the disabled in the home. Many such products can be seen in the Maker Fairs held around the world.

Traditionally, innovators made things in their garage. This is where so many start-ups and famous businesses began. But the Maker Movement is increasingly being recognised and practised in schools. Teachers have noted that Maker projects combine elements of maths, science, and art, as well as creativity and critical thinking – essential skills in the twenty-first century.

- B Write about one of the trends you discussed in Exercise 8. Invent any details necessary (200–250 words).

V PREDICTIONS

1 Complete the text by adding one word in each gap.

The idea of resurrecting extinct species used to be science fiction, but this development ¹_____ well come true. The science already exists. The recent explosion ²_____ genome research tells us that the recipe for making a creature lies in its DNA. Creating animals from a genome sequence is impossible now, but the ³_____ are it will happen soon. When an animal dies in a dry cave or in ice, we can find intact genome sequences. We then need a surrogate species to give birth to the animal. If we wanted to bring back a mammoth, the surrogate would be an elephant. As a result of this development, fears about the extinction of some species could become a ⁴_____ memory. As the science gathers pace, conservationists are getting ready; they have begun freezing tissue samples of these animals. The days of campaigns to save the whale and so many other species could ⁵_____ over, as extinction becomes a ⁶_____ of the past!

G FUTURE FORMS

2 A Work in pairs. Student A: you are an optimist. Student B: you are a pessimist. Complete the sentences according to your role.

- By the time I'm old, I hope I will have done many things, such as ...
- Tomorrow I'm going to ...
- By 2020, I will have been ...
- If everything goes to plan, I will ...
- If my plan falls through, I might ...

I'd like to ... whatever ...
As hard as I try, ...
No matter what happens, ...
Despite feeling ... I ...

F DESCRIBING CAUSE AND EFFECT

5 A Correct the mistakes in sentences 1–7. What trends do they describe?

- These can be tracing back to the 1700s, when a Dutchman attached tiny wheels to strips of wood and nailed them to his shoes.
- This fashion item is often attributed by British designer Mary Quant in the 1960s, but ancient Roman soldiers wore a similar garment!
- This musical style was popularised in New York in the 1970s, but it has the origins in the 'talking' style of West African musician-poets.
- These have their rooting in ancient China, though they were popularised in the USA in the early 1900s when actors wore them to avoid being recognised in public.
- When an American engineer, Sherman Poppen, invented a toy for his daughter by fastening two skis together and attaching a rope to one end in 1965, it lead to a new sport.
- The first type was produced in the 1960s for the University of Florida's American football team, nicknamed 'the Gators' (short for alligators). This resulted on the brand name Gatorade.
- 'Weblog' was first used in 1997, but Peter Merholz divided this word into two, which gave rise of the term that describes a popular form of electronic writing.

B Check your ideas. Match the trends below with 1–7.

 What makes you feel free?

THE CASE OF THE DISAPPEARING MAN

When a man walked into a police station in London, claiming to be suffering from amnesia, he told officers, 'I think I am a missing person.' He apparently had no recollection of his whereabouts or events over the previous five years. What police didn't initially realise was that the man in front of them was in fact John Darwin, 'the missing canoe man'.

When John Darwin, a married father of two, initially went missing five years previously, a massive search and rescue mission was launched along the northeast coast of the UK, near to where he was last seen. Prison officer John Darwin had been spotted paddling out to sea with his kayak early in the morning on 21st March, but it was only when he failed to arrive at work for a night shift that evening that the alarm was raised. The rescue teams searched extensively, but to no avail.

Several weeks later, when the shattered remains of John's kayak were found washed up on the beach, John Darwin was presumed dead. More than a year later, his wife threw flowers into the sea to mark the anniversary of her husband's disappearance. At an inquest, the coroner recorded an open verdict, which allowed the family to 'move on'. However, no trace of Mr Darwin's body was ever found.

On his reappearance in London, his family were informed. His two sons, Mark and Anthony, were thrilled to be reunited with their father. And his wife Anne – who had sold up her properties in England and moved to Panama three months before his reappearance – expressed surprise, joy and elation at the return of her missing husband.

However, nobody could have predicted what would come to light over the following days. When John Darwin appeared at the police station, he claimed memory loss, but otherwise he appeared both fit and well, and he was also suntanned (a little unusual for December in the UK). An investigation was immediately launched into his disappearance.

READING

1 A Look at the photos and the title of the story. What do you think might have happened?

B Read the text to find out.

C Answer the questions.

- 1 Why do you think John Darwin was tanned?
- 2 What might have happened to his canoe?
- 3 Where do you think Mr Darwin had been during those five years?
- 4 What do you think happened next?

D Turn to page 161. Read part two of the story and check your ideas.

2 A Work in pairs. Complete the sentences using information from part two of the story.

- 1 The circumstances that led John Darwin to consider faking his own death were ...
- 2 John Darwin managed to live secretly at home by ...
- 3 In Panama, the Darwins had hoped to ...
- 4 The deception was uncovered by ...
- 5 As a punishment for their crime of fraud and deception, the Darwins ...

B Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

- 1 What do you think of what John Darwin did?
- 2 What do you think was the most difficult part of the deception for the Darwins?
- 3 Do you think it was right for the Darwins to go to prison?
- 4 What do you think Anne Darwin should/shouldn't have done?

CLEFT SENTENCES

3 A Sentences 1–4 express ideas in the story, but are phrased slightly differently. Rewrite them using the prompts in italics.

- Police didn't initially realise that the man in front of them was John Darwin, 'the missing canoe man'.
What police ...
- The alarm was raised only when he failed to arrive at work for a night shift.
It was only when ...
- He spent the next few years hiding inside the house and rarely leaving.
What he did then ...
- A colleague of Anne Darwin's eventually put the pieces of the puzzle together.
It was a ...

B Check your answers in the stories on pages 80 and 161.

C What is the effect of starting the sentences with the phrases in italics? Read the rule to check.

RULES

To add emphasis or focus attention on one part of a sentence, we can add certain words or phrases to the beginning of the sentence using another verb (e.g. It was .../What he knew was .../The reason why ... is .../The person who ... is ..., etc.). This is called a 'cleft sentence'.

- 2 The second speaker says 'you just go with the flow'. What does this mean? What normally flows? In what circumstances might you go with the flow?
- 3 The third speaker says 'it's a remnant of childhood'. Remnant has a similar meaning to remains. What do you think 'a remnant of childhood' means?

D Which person's method of relaxation is closest to yours? Which would you most like to try? Why?

GRAMMAR

PARTICIPLE CLAUSES

5 A Read about someone who found true freedom by learning a new skill. What did she learn and how did she do it?

Feeling jaded from life at a desk and armed with nothing but a love of Argentinian culture, I decided to learn the tango. Having listened to the music as a child, I already knew the rhythms, so I felt excited walking into my first tango class. However, the tango was harder than it looked and after the first class, my feet were sore and my knees ached. Not wanting to give up, I decided to take matters into my own hands (and feet!). Using a CD lent to me by a friend, I practised at home and after a while, I improved. Encouraged by my teacher, I went to a café where you could hear the music and eventually, having struggled with it for months, I got the hang of it. People looking for something a bit different always love the tango. When you're doing it you feel completely free; the world disappears – it's just you, your partner and the music.

B Check what you know. Underline the present and past participles in the text. The first two have been done for you.

6 A Match example sentences 1–4 with rules a)–d).

- Encouraged by my teacher, I went to a café where you could hear the music.
- Not wanting to give up, I decided to take matters into my own hands.
- ... a CD (that was) lent to me by a friend ...
- I felt excited walking into my first tango class.

RULES

Participle clauses can:

- replace relative clauses.
- have an active meaning (when they begin with a present participle).
- have a passive meaning (when they begin with a past participle).
- describe actions happening around the same time or one immediately after another.

B Read rules e) and f). Find an example of each in the text.

RULES

e) Having + past participle can be used to give background information or show the cause of a second action.
f) The past participle can be used as an adjective to add extra information.

WRITING

A LEAFLET; LEARN TO USE SUBHEADINGS

9 A What is the purpose of leaflets, brochures and information sheets? What are their typical features?

B Read the guidelines to check.

- 1 Leaflets, brochures and information sheets inform us about something. They can also advise, warn or persuade. Businesses and organisations use them to promote events, places, services and products.
- 2 The title must be bold, eye-catching and give a clear idea of the topic.
- 3 Use short, clear subheadings. They must stand out in a different font.
- 4 Break the text up into short sections in a logical order.
- 5 Don't use language that is too complex. The message must be clear and easy to understand.
- 6 Lay the text out using spaces between sections. Use bullet points for lists of features and include illustrations, charts and photos if appropriate.

10 Read a leaflet about a place to relax and answer the questions.

- 1 Who is the intended audience?
- 2 Does the leaflet follow the guidelines above?
- 3 Would you like to go there?

11 A Find a heading, a subheading and a slogan in the leaflet. How are they different? Think about the types of words that are used and their purpose.

B Why do you think subheadings are useful? Tick the ideas you agree with.

- 1 They help the writer, when he or she is planning the piece, to see what to include and what to leave out.
- 2 They show the reader how the piece is organised.
- 3 They allow the reader to jump to the specific information he or she is looking for.
- 4 They reveal the writer's opinion of the topic.
- 5 They visually break up blocks of text so that the piece is easier to read.

C Read the additional information about Sparngall Spa Retreat. Think of a suitable subheading.

Sparngall Spa Retreat is accessible by car or train. The nearest railway station is Sparngall Station. From there it is a ten-minute taxi ride to the retreat. We are happy to arrange transport to and from the station for you.

12 A Read the scenario and think of an idea you can write about. Make notes and think of subheadings.

You own a place where people go to switch off from their daily routine. What type of place is it? Do people go there to learn something or just to relax? What services and facilities do you offer? Is food and accommodation included? How expensive is it?

B Write a promotional leaflet for your idea (250 words).

7.3 » FREE TO MAKE MISTAKES

- F exchanging opinions
- P polite tone
- V risk

When a New York journalist, Lenore Skenazy, wrote about how she had deliberately left her nine-year-old son in central New York and let him take the subway home alone, she unleashed a media frenzy. Her son, Izzy, whose idea the expedition had been, was happy. He had arrived home safely, ecstatic with independence. He'd been nagging his mother for weeks to be allowed to travel unsupervised. She'd given Izzy a subway map, twenty dollars and a few quarters in case he needed to make a phone call. She hadn't given him a mobile phone (in case he lost it). But Ms Skenazy's actions landed her in a huge row. She was labelled 'crazy' and 'America's worst mom'. 'My son had not climbed Mount Fuji in flip-flops,' she wrote subsequently.

'He'd simply done what most people my age had done routinely when they were his age: gone somewhere on his own.' She now runs a blog called Free Range Kids, which encourages independence in children and says, 'The problem with this everything-is-dangerous outlook is that over-protectiveness is a danger in itself. A child who thinks he can't do anything on his own eventually can't.' So, are we living in a risk-averse culture where we stifle our children's ability to deal with danger by never allowing them to take reasonable risks? Does Western society mollycoddle its children? Or did Ms Skenazy's actions expose her son to real and unnecessary danger? What do you think?

VOCABULARY

RISK

1 Work in pairs and answer the questions.

- What risks do you think you take in your daily life?
- Do you think that, as a society, we have become afraid to take risks? Why/Why not?
- When is it OK to break the rules (at work, driving, at school, etc.)?

2 A Read the article and answer the questions.

- What did the journalist let her son do?
- What was her reason for doing this?
- What kinds of reactions did she receive when she wrote about the experience?
- What does Ms Skenazy think is the problem with protecting children too much?

B What do you think the words/phrases in bold in the article mean? Use some of them to complete the sentences below. You may need to use just part of the phrase, or adapt it to fit the context.

- It's a good idea to get children to cook for themselves from an early age, because it encourages _____.
- If parents _____ their children by indulging them all the time, the children will never learn to look after themselves.
- No rational parent would _____ try to _____ their child to unnecessary danger.
- Children should be encouraged to take _____, like learning how to use sharp knives. This way, they will learn to do things _____.
- The problem with _____ parents is that the child doesn't learn to deal with problems they will face in the real world.
- The fact that your coffee cup is labelled 'Caution: contents hot' shows that we are living in a _____ society.

C Do you agree with the statements in Exercise 2B? Why/Why not?

FUNCTION

EXCHANGING OPINIONS

3 7.4 Listen to people talking about the story in Exercise 2A. Who agrees with the following statements, the man (M) or the woman (W)?

- It was a brilliant idea for the mother to leave her son to go home alone.
- The boy could have got lost, or been attacked.
- As parents we have to take a stand against mollycoddling.
- Doing things by yourself at a young age teaches you how to protect yourself and be streetwise.
- Children should be thrown in at the deep end.
- New York is one of the most dangerous cities in the world.
- It's too dangerous to leave a nine-year-old alone in a city without a mobile phone.
- We're in a hurry to push our kids to grow up too soon.

4 A Listen again and complete the phrases you hear.

CONVINCE SOMEONE

5 A 7.5 POLITE TONE Listen to the speakers trying to convince the listener of their opinion. How does the speaker try to sound polite?

- 1 The point is that he was only nine years old.
- 2 Surely you don't think he should never be allowed out?
- 3 That's the whole point. We need to encourage independence.
- 4 All I'm trying to say is New York is a dangerous city.
- 5 I just think we're too risk-averse.
- 6 Oh come on! You can't really think that.

B Listen again and repeat the phrases, copying the tone.

6 A Use the prompts in brackets to write responses which try to change A's opinion.

- 1 A: Everyone should be a vegetarian.
B: _____?
(surely/think/people/never/eat/meat)

B: _____!
(come/not make sense)

B Practise the conversations in pairs. Focus on polite tone.

SPEAKING

7 A Look at the situations below. Who do you think should decide in each case? Why? Think of arguments to support your case.

B Work in groups and discuss the situations. Try to convince others of your opinion.

The state versus the individual

Who should decide:

- whether you are allowed to smoke in a public place?
- whether you should be allowed to eat junk food?
- how much exercise an individual should do?
- whether you should be allowed to keep a gun in your house?
- the age at which a child should go to school?
- how often you use your car or how fast you can drive in certain areas?
- the minimum age that someone can start work?

DVD PREVIEW

- 1 Discuss with other students: what do you know about the topics in the box?

The history of India	India today
the British Empire	Mohandas Gandhi
Jawaharlal Nehru

- 2 Read sentences 1–8 about Mohandas Gandhi's life story. What do you think the words and expressions in bold mean?

- 1 Gandhi rose to prominence at a time when India was still subject to colonial domination.
- 2 He is revered all over the world for his leadership.
- 3 He was India's figurehead during the struggle for independence.
- 4 The British were responsible for a violent clampdown.
- 5 The world looked upon these actions with outrage.
- 6 He galvanised the nation to action.
- 7 His crowning moment was to come later.
- 8 The nation's hopes rested on his shoulders.

- 3 Read the programme information. True or false: the programme will describe how Gandhi helped India gain independence.

Gandhi: The Road to Freedom

BBC

India is the world's largest democracy, and a country with a tumultuous history. While it is famed for its cultural achievements and astounding diversity, India also has a legacy of violence, struggle and inequality. This BBC documentary looks at the life of the 'father of the nation', Mohandas Gandhi (also known to his followers as Mahatma, 'the great-souled one'), and asks how he managed to win India its freedom from the British Empire.

DVD VIEW

- 4 Look at Exercise 1 again. Watch the DVD. What new information do you know now? Compare your ideas with other students.

- 5 Watch the DVD again and answer the questions.

- 1 Why did Gandhi go to Britain in 1931?
- 2 What was his 'crowning moment'?
- 3 What led to 'outrage' and acclaim for Gandhi?
- 4 How does the narrator describe Gandhi's manner?
- 5 What impressed Tony Benn about Gandhi?
- 6 What happened on August 15th, 1947?

- 6 Work in pairs and retell Gandhi's story. Use as many of the words and phrases from Exercise 2 as you can.

- 7 Read the extracts from the programme and discuss the questions with other students.

- 1 'Today, Gandhi is revered as the most important Indian of all time ... He became the figurehead of the battle to free India.' Is anyone from your country revered like Gandhi? Are they regarded as figureheads?
- 2 'The hopes of a nation rested on Gandhi's shoulders.' In your country, in your lifetime, is there a figure who was/is regarded as the nation's great hope?
- 3 'The modesty of his lifestyle ... made ... a big impression.' Are there any public figures who have made a big impression on you? Who? Why?

speakout freedom

- 8 A Read some answers to the question: 'What does freedom mean to you?' Which of these answers do you like?

It's about living without fear that someone will arrest you or persecute you for following your beliefs.

Kwezi

Freedom is about choices. If I want to speak my own language in public, go to work with my hair dyed bright blue, or wear ripped jeans, no one stops me. That's freedom.

Agnieska

Freedom, to me, means doing what I want, when I want, with whomever I want.

Colin

I'm legally blind. To me, freedom is being able to walk in an open space without traffic or too many people.

Lee

Freedom means not having to worry about time. I only get that feeling when I'm alone in the wilderness or on a beach.

Hana

- B  7.6 Listen to two people discussing what freedom means to them. Who mentions the topics below: the man or the woman?

writeback what freedom means to you

- 10 A Read one person's description of what freedom means to them. Is it about personal or political freedom, or both?

WHAT FREEDOM MEANS TO ME

I have three jobs and a young family and I also study part-time in the evenings for a degree in Social Science. So you could say I'm quite busy! On my own, I'm bringing up three kids, all under the age of thirteen, and I really have very little time for myself. I haven't read a book for pleasure or watched TV alone or gone on a date for the best part of a decade. So when I think about freedom, what springs to mind is me with my feet up, no kids to take care of, no assignments to hand in, and just some quiet music playing in the background.

- B Write your own description of what freedom means to you.

 What is the best time of life?

READING

- 1 A Read the introduction to the text. What objects would you put in a time capsule to represent your culture?
- B Read the article about time capsules. Are any of your ideas mentioned?
- 2 A Read the article again quickly to find out who, what or when the underlined words refer to.
- He must be a famous Brazilian singer.
 - Maybe there's a lot of hunting in that place.
 - It is probably a really well-known restaurant in the area.
 - Maybe there's a lot of surveillance there.
 - The recordings were put there because it was probably safer than the Paris Opera House.
 - He believed his capsule would survive over 6,000 years.
 - They collaborated to create time capsules.
 - Only at that time will his grandchildren know exactly what Davisson put in the capsule.
- B Discuss. What do the contents of the time capsules tell us about the different societies in the text?

VOCABULARY

- In years, we will remember this as a golden age.
 - Scientific breakthroughs don't happen intervals; they occur irregularly.
 - AIDS probably dates the early 20th century, but began to spread rapidly in the 1980s.
 - We are enter an age of natural disasters.
 - From, the internet was able to unite people around the world.
 - Poverty will be with us for foreseeable.
- C Do you agree with statements 1–6? Compare your ideas in pairs.

Imagine you're burying a time capsule for hundreds of years. When it's finally opened, what will the people of the future find inside it? What will they think of those artefacts? Will they even recognise them? The last few decades have seen more and more time capsules being prepared for the future. Here are some of the things that different cultures have chosen to represent them.

- People in Curitiba, Brazil, chose a recording of the songs of Antonio Carlos Jobim; processed, packaged meat; an indoor toilet; a pair of jeans and a local tree with yellow flowers.
- People in Bulawayo, Zimbabwe, chose a bottle of soil, a plastic cup used by beggars, an akierie (a walking stick used for hunting) and a pair of Bata 'Toughees' school shoes.
- People in Fountain, Colorado, USA, chose a piece of barbed wire, a packet of cigarettes, a brick, a high school code of conduct, an issue of Girl's Life, a hearing aid, a recording of a high-speed car chase, Prozac, Valium, a TV remote control and a menu from Ralph's Fine Dining.
- People in Bharatpur, India, chose a bag of soil, a closed-circuit TV camera, a chillum, a gold nose ring and a pair of flip-flops.
- The idea of 'history in a box' probably dates back to ancient Egypt, when the pharaohs were buried with their possessions. Since then, there have been numerous examples of time capsules, all with their own stories attached.
- On Christmas Eve 1907, members of the Paris Opera placed twenty-four musical recordings into two containers made of iron and lead. They were going to leave these untouched in the opera house's basement for 100 years, but in 1912 they added more recordings, plus a gramophone with instructions on how to use it. The time capsule was supposed to be opened in 2007. However, in 1989, when a new air-conditioning system was about to be installed, it was discovered that someone had broken into one of the capsules and the gramophone was missing. The remaining recordings were taken to France's National Library and opened eighteen years later.

B Work in pairs. Take turns to read your sentences. Guess which of your partner's sentences are true.

7 Another time capsule was devised by Professor Thornwell Jacobs of Oglethorpe University, Georgia, USA, in 1940. While researching ancient history, he realised historians' lives would be easier if there were more artefacts available, so he created the Crypt of Civilization. He gathered hundreds of objects and sealed them in a waterproof room with a stainless steel door welded shut. His capsule was to remain hidden for the foreseeable future: Jacobs optimistically stipulated that the crypt wasn't meant to be opened until 8113.

8 In 1968, two Japanese companies, Panasonic and Mainichi Newspapers, worked together to create two identical time capsules. One of them would be opened at regular intervals to check the condition of the contents, but the other wasn't going to be touched for 5,000 years. Inside the capsules were 2,090 items, ensuring that in years to come people would find objects like a glass eye, false teeth, dead insects encased in resin, an origami instruction book, fake money and handcuffs.

9 It isn't just big organisations that do it. Harold Keith Davisson, from Nebraska, USA, made a time capsule in 1975 because he wanted his grandchildren to know what life was like in the 1970s. He put it on his front lawn. Of approximately 5,000 items inside it, there was a suit and even a car. From the outset, it was to have been the world's biggest time capsule, but then Davisson learnt that other people were building bigger ones. Deciding that actions speak louder than words, in 1983 he built a second capsule on top of the first, including a second car! The capsule will be opened in 2025.

B What are proverbs? Think of a definition and compare your ideas.

speakout

Proverbs are short statements that express a general truth or give advice. They often come from literary sources or refer to ways of life in the past, so may use old vocabulary. It's essential to use proverbs at the right moment and with the exact words. Do you know any proverbs in English? Tell other students.

9 A Work in two groups. Group A: when would you use the proverbs below? Match proverbs 1–6 with situations a)–f). Do you have equivalents in your language? Group B: turn to page 162.

- 1 A picture is worth a thousand words.
- 2 Better safe than sorry.
- 3 Out of sight, out of mind.
- 4 Home is where the heart is.
- 5 Practise what you preach.
- 6 Rome wasn't built in a day.

- a) I've enjoyed this trip, but I've had enough now.
- b) You should leave early. There may be heavy traffic.
- c) You told us to arrive on time, but you were late!
- d) The photo of the flood sent a powerful message.
- e) I'd been away only a month, but I'd already forgotten my ex.
- f) To fulfil your ambitions, you'll need to study hard.

B Work with a student from the other group. Take turns. Show your list of proverbs to your partner. Explain them in any order. Your partner guesses the proverb you are describing.

LISTENING

1 Work in pairs. What do the smells in the box make you think of?

candles cigarettes vinegar fresh bread coffee perfume disinfectant sun cream lemons petrol paint

2 A Read the radio programme listing. What kinds of memories are evoked by particular smells? What is this phenomenon called?

What does the smell of sun cream remind you of? Does it evoke strong memories of blue skies and happiness? Then perhaps you have experienced what psychologists have termed the Proust phenomenon. Why is it that particular smells bring back powerful childhood memories? In this BBC radio programme, Claudia Hammond explores the link between smell and memory.

B 8.2 Listen to the programme. Which smells from Exercise 1 are mentioned? What do the speakers say about each smell?

3 8.3 Listen to the programme again, in three parts. Decide if the statements are true. Correct any mistakes.

Part 1

- The smell of mint sauce reminds the man of Sunday lunches in his childhood home.
- One man remembers his nursery school when he smells privet (a type of hedge).

Part 2

- Psychologists think memories associated with photos are stronger than those evoked by smells.
- Professor Chu uses unfamiliar smells to trigger autobiographical memories.
- The woman used mints (polos) and perfume to cover up the smell of cigarettes.

Part 3

- When the man smells candles, he is reminded of when he played the church organ.

4 A Complete the extracts with the phrases in the box.

evocative smell evoking memories takes me back in time

B: Yes, I do actually. ▲ The smell of my grandmother's perfume.
 - A: The smell of pine trees reminds me of holidays in Greece.
B: Does it ▲? I've never been there.
 - A: ▲ Got any photos of your family?
B: Yes, ▲ lots.

B Read the rules and answer the questions.

RULES Use ellipsis to leave out a word, or words, when the context is obvious. In informal speech, we often leave out the beginnings or endings of common phrases.

- Which words have been left out of the phrases/questions below?
Ever been to Spain?
See you.

RULES Use substitution to replace a word or phrase with a single word (e.g. so, do, many, one, these, some, it, them, there, this, that) in order to avoid repetition.

- What does so replace?
A: Got everything you need?
B: I think so.

6 A Underline the correct alternatives.

- A: Are you coming to the party?
B: Yes, I think do/so/not.
- A: Did you just delete the file?
B: I hope not/such/do.
- A: Do you want to try this perfume?
B: No, but I'll try that some/much/one.
- A: Do you think we'll have enough time to discuss this later?
B: We'll have so/a little/one time.
- A: Are you going away on holiday this year?
B: No. Ann Marie doesn't have enough money and more/nor/so do I.
- A: Are you sure you've got enough copies for everyone?
B: Yes, I've got none/one/lots.

B 8.4 Cross out any words which could be left out of the conversations in Exercise 6A. Listen and check your answers.

C CONNECTED SPEECH Listen to the conversations again. Notice the smooth pronunciation in connected speech. Notice how sounds change and words link together.

You coming to the party?
Yes, I think so.

D Repeat the conversations with a smooth pronunciation.

WRITING

A PERSONAL STORY; LEARN TO IMPROVE DESCRIPTIVE WRITING

10 A Read the story on page 97. Answer the questions.

- Why was the fig tree so important?
- What happened to the house?

B Read the advice for writing a story for a magazine. Does the writer of The Fig Tree follow the advice?

- Remember your audience (who is going to read this?) and use a range of structures and vocabulary.
- Use an informal, chatty style. It makes your article more personal, so the reader can identify with you.
- Capture the reader's attention with an anecdote, something surprising or a strong image.
- 'Close the circle': the ending could echo the beginning or refer to the wording in the task.

11 Read guidelines a)–d) for descriptive writing and follow instructions 1–4 below.

- a) Include precise language. Use specific adjectives and nouns and strong action verbs (verbs that carry a specific meaning) to give life to the picture you are painting in the reader's mind.

The lion ate (weak) the antelope.

The ravenous (specific) lion devoured (strong) the antelope.

- b) Include all the senses. Remember to describe sounds (using onomatopoeia – where the sound of the word imitates the meaning being described), smells, tastes and textures.

The car screeched to a halt.

The murmuring of innumerable bees.

- c) Make use of contrasts. Describe how someone's mood changed from good to bad, or describe a location at different times of year.

- d) Use figurative language (metaphor, simile, personification). Imagery can help to engage a reader.

The stars danced playfully in the sky.

(personification – giving human qualities to something which is not human)

Her home was a prison.

(metaphor – when you say one thing is another thing)

She felt as free as a bird.

(simile – when you say one thing is like another thing)

- 1 Find examples of specific adjectives and strong action verbs in the story The Fig Tree.
- 2 Find an example of onomatopoeia. Where does the writer describe a texture?
- 3 How does the writer use contrast in this story?
- 4 Find an example of personification of an object and an example of metaphor.

speakout TIP

It's important that you communicate to your reader exactly what you mean in the clearest possible way. Using strong verbs and adjectives helps you to paint accurate pictures of what you mean in the reader's mind. How do the verbs change the meaning of the following sentences? 'I love you,' he said./'I love you,' he screamed./'I love you,' he whispered./'I love you,' he mumbled. Keep a list of strong verbs.

12 Read the instructions and write a personal story.

- 1 Work alone. Think about any particular people, objects or places which hold special memories for you. Can you remember particular sights, sounds, smells or textures associated with them?
- 2 Make notes about the memory, including personal details (how you felt, why it was special, etc.).
- 3 Write your story (220–250 words). Add a title.
- 4 Check your writing. Try to improve the description by using more precise language.

I remember we used to visit my grandmother's house at weekends. It was a huge house with gardens leading down to a field, and it seemed almost like a palace to me. At the bottom of the field was an orchard, planted with apples, and twenty-one walnut trees. In the middle of the field stood an ancient fig tree. It was here, in the tree, that my cousins and I would sit and play for hours on end. I can remember the smell of the green leaves, the sticky sap that would leak from the leaves and the figs as they ripened. We each had our own special branch and we would climb up and then sit looking out over the countryside. I can almost feel the warmth of the sun on our faces and the feeling of safety and security as we hid among the branches. In that tree, we would sit and chatter about life, feast on sweet, crunchy apples, hold meetings, tell jokes, read books, make plans, have fig fights and discuss what we wanted to be when we grew up. The fig tree knew all our secrets.

When I was twelve, my grandmother moved into a small flat and we stopped going to the house. But a few years ago, I was in the area, so I drove back there to see if it was how I had remembered it. The house was almost unrecognisable. It had been turned into a doctor's surgery, with signposts all around and cars parked all over the drive. The gardens had been redesigned, and there were pathways to walk along and benches to sit on and enjoy the views. Gone was my grandmother's wild flower garden. But behind the house, in the middle of the field, just as if time had never passed, stood the fig tree, full of lush green leaves, and juicy figs. Its branches hung heavily towards the ground, almost beckoning me to climb up. Just standing in the field brought all the memories of my grandmother and our life there flooding back to me. And touching the smooth bark on the trunk, it was all I could do to resist sprinting to the end of the field to pick an apple or two and then back to the fig tree to enjoy the rest of the warm afternoon.

- B Discuss questions 1–6 with other students.

FUNCTION

DISCUSSING IDEAS

- 3 Work in pairs. Read about three ways to save time at work. Which do you think are good ideas?

Time-savers that will put years on your life

Prioritise: Some tasks are important and urgent. Others are important but not urgent. Most are neither. Forget about them until they become important and urgent.

Don't multi-task: You think you're doing lots of things well at the same time. You aren't. You're doing lots of things badly at the same time, which will need re-doing later once you realise you've made a bad job of them. Focus on one thing at a time and do it properly.

Kill distractions: Ignore email, leave the mobile in your car, unplug the phone and remove all TVs within sight. If you want to work, work.

- 4 A  8.5 You are going to listen to the beginning of an interview with a time management consultant. What do you think the job involves? Listen and check.

B Work in pairs. Listen again and discuss. What does John say about the things in the box?

what he does who he works with observing resources how people typically start their working day lists distractions

- 5 A Read audio script 8.5 on page 173. Find expressions for acknowledging an idea or introducing an alternative. Write them in the correct column of the table below.

acknowledging an idea	introducing an alternative
Right. OK.	Having said that, ...

- B Work in pairs. Add the expressions in the box to the correct column of the table.

That's true. Mind you, ... That's interesting.
 But you could argue that ... That makes sense.
 Exactly. I'm with you there.

- 6 Cross out the incorrect alternative in each sentence.

- Shopping online is quicker. On the other hand, / Mind you, / That's true, you're taking a risk because you don't see the product or the vendor in the flesh.
- So you think we should bring a map? I know what you mean; / But looking at it another way, / I'm with you there; it's easy to get lost in these parts.
- Eating fast food saves time, but I never thought of that, / looking at it another way, / on the other hand, it's unhealthy.
- So you think we should leave early in the morning? That's a good idea. / Yes and no. / That makes sense. The traffic gets really bad later in the day.
- Do you really think I should delegate more? Having said that, / I never thought of that. / That's interesting. I thought I had to do everything myself.
- I'm always pushed for time. Having said that, / Mind you, / Alternatively, my time management is terrible! I do everything at the last minute.

Whilst _____ seeks to understand reality through the observation of emotions and the sharing of human experience, _____ relies more on logical reasoning and detailed analysis.

B Compare your answers in pairs. In general, which approach do you tend to accept?

- 2 Read the programme information. What concept is discussed in this episode?

Wonders of the Universe

BBC

Who are we? Where do we come from? For thousands of years, humanity has turned to religion and myth to answer these questions. But in this BBC series, Professor Brian Cox presents a different set of answers – answers provided by science. In this episode, Brian seeks to understand the nature of time and its role in creating both the universe and ourselves. Using the Perito Moreno glacier in Patagonia, Argentina, Brian explores the concept of the arrow of time, describing how time is characterised by irreversible change, and why sequences happen in the order they do.

DVD VIEW

- 3 Watch the DVD. Number the ideas in the order they are mentioned.

- There's a scientific reason for why the world doesn't run in reverse.
- It's human nature to want to find the answer to these fundamental questions.
- Permanent change is a fundamental part of what it means to be human.
- The glacier has been moving down the valley for tens of thousands of years.

- 4 A Complete the extracts.

- Events always happen in the same order. They're never _____ and they never go backwards.
- We never see waves travelling across lakes, coming together and bouncing chunks of ice back _____.
- We are compelled to travel into the _____.
- And that's because the arrow of time dictates that as each moment passes, things _____.
- I suppose it's kind of the joy and _____ of our lives.
- In the life of the universe, just as in our lives, everything is _____.

B Watch the DVD again to check.

- 5 Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

- What do you think about the point Professor Cox is trying to explain? Do you think the glacier is a useful metaphor for the arrow of time?
- Are you someone who relishes or resists change?

speakout a turning point

6 A  8.7 Listen to someone talking about major turning points in her life. Answer the questions.

- 1 What were the three important decisions?
- 2 Does she regret the decisions she made?
- 3 How is her life different from her sister's?

B Listen again and choose the correct alternatives to complete the key phrases.

KEYPHRASES

My parents gave me the option to go to a specialised theatrical school/stay at home.

There was a lot of pressure on me to .../no pressure either way.

I made the decision to go to a theatre school/go to a comprehensive school.

Luckily for me, it's panned out/it's turned out OK.

I found myself faced with a dilemma/another decision.

The next major decision ... was whether to move house/have children or not.

I ... wonder what would have happened if ... /if I made the right decision.

7 A Prepare to talk about a turning point in your life. Think about the questions and make notes.

- 1 What was the decision? Who was involved? Did anyone or anything influence your decision?
- 2 How did the decision affect what happened afterwards?
- 3 How might things have been different now had you made a different decision?

B Work in groups. Discuss your decisions and how they have affected your lives.

writeback a major decision

8 A Work in pairs and read the forum entry. Do you think Jason made the right decisions?

Tell us about a pivotal moment in your life

Jason, Australia: I'd say that the major pivotal moment of my life early on was when I was eleven years old and my parents decided to divorce. It was up to me to decide who I wanted to live with. At that time, my dad was living in a completely different part of Australia to me and my mum. After some deliberation, I chose to go and live with my dad.

Looking back, it was a hard decision to make for an eleven-year-old, and I do sometimes wonder if I made the right choice. If I could turn back time, I wonder if my relationship with my mother would be any better now had I made a different choice. I suppose I have a sense of regret about that.

However, if I hadn't gone to live with my dad, I wouldn't have met my girlfriend at the time. We were together for over three years and when she wanted to move to England I gave up a really good career in Australia to move with her. That was fine for a while, but we eventually split up and then there was nothing to keep me in the UK.

I came back to Australia, but it hasn't been easy to rebuild my career. At the end of the day, I think your guiding principle should be that blood is thicker than water, and it's usually best to put your family first.

B Write about a major decision in your life (250–300 words).

V TIME EXPRESSIONS

1 A Write sentences about your classmates.

- For the foreseeable future, _____ will probably ...
- _____ is about to ...

G FUTURE IN THE PAST

2 A Underline the correct alternatives.

Here are some excuses made by absent or late employees.

- I ¹ meant to/supposed to be in the office at 8.00, but my dog was stressed out after a family reunion.
- I ² was on the verge of/was to have written the report at the weekend, but my finger got stuck in a bowling ball.
- My husband and I ³ were meant/were for to go away for the weekend, but we had car trouble. It's now fixed so we're going today (Monday).

And some excuses for bad behaviour in relationships.

- I was ⁴ to go to/going to call you, but my three-year-old niece dropped my phone in a swimming pool.
- I ⁵ had been/was planning to break up with you in person, but I thought you'd prefer this email.

And finally, two excuses for neglected homework.

- I read the questions, but I didn't realise we ⁶ were supposed/were suppose to answer them.
- I ⁷ meant for/was going to do it, but I started worrying about the oil crisis and I couldn't focus.

B Write excuses for the situations below. Use the future in the past. Compare your ideas. Who has the best excuses?

- You were absent from work.
- You forgot to meet a friend.
- You didn't do your homework.

G ELLIPSIS AND SUBSTITUTION

ADJECTIVES: THE ARTS

1 A Look at three works of art that have been displayed in Trafalgar Square, London. What do you think of each 'statue'?

B Look at the words in the box and answer questions 1–4.

unconventional thought-provoking bleak compelling charming well-received poignant overrated offbeat stylish striking subtle

- Which words do you know? Use a dictionary to check the meaning of unknown words.
- Which art forms do you think these words usually describe?
- Which words can be used about people?
- Can you use any of the words to describe the art in the photos?

C Think of films, books, music or works of art that you can describe with the adjectives in Exercise 1B. Think of as many as you can in two minutes.

I think the X-Men films are overrated!

D  9.1 IRREGULAR SPELLINGS Say the words in Exercise 1B aloud. Which three words are spelt differently from their pronunciation? Listen to check your answers. Then listen and repeat.

thought-provoking ...

speakout TIP

English is well known for its irregular spelling. Sometimes combinations of letters in the middle of words are pronounced in unpredictable ways. What are the silent letters in the following words: whistling, cupboard, leopard, plumber, fascinating, mortgage, foreigner? Now say the whole word.

READING

2 A Read the title of the article. What do you think it is about?

B Read the article to check your ideas.

3 Match paragraphs 1–6 with headings a)–f).

- The first and the last
- Charming or thought-provoking? What the 'artists' did
- Up on the plinth – the artists' viewpoint
- Antony Gormley's One and Other
- What to do with the fourth plinth
- The computer's choice: art for everyone by everyone

4 Find words/expressions in the article with the following meanings.

- show (paragraph 1)
- leading to (paragraph 1)
- organise (paragraph 1)
- worries or concerns (paragraph 2)
- people who are watching (paragraph 2)
- unsystematically (paragraph 3)
- range (n) (paragraph 3)
- went on longer than (paragraph 4)
- calm (two words) (paragraph 6)
- as if someone enjoys watching other people's private lives (paragraph 6)

5 Discuss. What do you think of the project? What would you have done for your hour on the plinth?

Sixty minutes of fame: LIVING STATUES

1

In London's Trafalgar Square stand three statues on plinths. These depict historical figures who helped build Britain's empire. The fourth plinth (the base on which a statue stands) stood empty for years, engendering a national debate about what should go on it. Should it be a statue of another British hero – Winston Churchill, for example, or John Lennon? Should it be a striking piece of modern art or something representative of modern multicultural Britain? While the debate went on, Antony Gormley, one of Britain's best-known sculptors, was asked to orchestrate a project to fill the plinth for 100 days.

2

Gormley decided to offer the plinth to members of the public, who would stand, sit or lie on it in their own piece of performance art. While there, they could speak of their preoccupations, stand up (literally) for their beliefs, reveal their fantasies, or simply enact their everyday lives in front of onlookers. It was an unconventional project, bringing the world of reality TV onto the street. It was called One and Other and would have a different person occupying the plinth every hour for twenty-four hours.

3

To get a spot on the plinth, the public had to submit their names, which were then chosen at random by a computer. Fourteen thousand five hundred people applied, ranging in age from sixteen to eighty-three. Their professions covered the full spectrum of British life, from professors to blacksmiths to rubbish collectors.

4

The first 'living statue' was housewife Rachel Wardell. She did it 'to show my kids that you can do and be part of anything'. The last was a medical photographer, Emma Burns, who read out a moving short story about the ninety-six victims of a disaster at a British football stadium in the 1980s. She overran her hour, but as there was no one to take her place, she was allowed to finish.

5

In between Wardell and Burns, there were 2,398 others. They came up with wildly different ways to spend their sixty minutes of fame, some thought-provoking, some poignant, some charming. Darren Cooper performed a silent disco for an hour, while fifty of his friends stood below, listening to the same music at the same time on their headphones. Jane Clyne dressed up as a bee to highlight the decline in the numbers of bees due to environmental damage. David Rosenberg, a designer from London, used a folding pink bicycle to generate electricity to light up his suit.

6

And what was it like up on the fourth plinth? Did the performers have to put up with nerves and noisy onlookers? 'I was quite nervous at first,' Darren Cooper said, 'but once I started dancing, the nerves went away and I had the best time.' Rachel Lockwood said, 'It felt very peaceful and serene on the plinth looking down at everyone living their lives. All I could hear was the noise of the fountains and the traffic below. I felt like I was isolated and in a bubble.' Martin Douglas said, 'It was strangely voyeuristic watching people go about their daily lives. Not many people look up, you know!'

GRAMMAR

TENSES FOR UNREAL SITUATIONS

6 A Read some comments on the One and Other project. Which ones do you agree with?

- 1 This is great. It's about time people realised that art is for everyone.
- 2 These are normal people acting as if they were artists, but what they're doing isn't art.
- 3 I wish I was brave enough to do something like that in front of everyone. I admire them for their courage.
- 4 Imagine you had sixty minutes to perform in public. I think it would be hard.
- 5 I'd rather nobody noticed me in public. I'd hate to be up there.
- 6 What if I had been on the plinth? I'd have done something about world peace.

B Look at the underlined clauses in the comments above and answer the questions.

- 1 What is the tense of the final verbs in each underlined clause? One of the verbs is a different tense. Which one?
- 2 Do the underlined clauses refer to a) the past, or b) an imaginary/hypothetical situation?

- 5 I'd _____ nobody knew about my plans.
- 6 Hey, _____ you could speak twenty languages! Wouldn't that be amazing?
- 7 What _____ you could retire right now? Would you?
- 8 I _____ sooner do a research paper than take the exam.

8 Answer the questions. Then compare your answers with other students.

- 1 Would you rather somebody took you to a film or to the theatre? A rock concert or a ballet?
- 2 Imagine you could own any painting or sculpture in the world. Which would you choose?
- 3 Supposing you were asked to act in a soap opera. Under what conditions would you accept?
- 4 If someone from your home town said, 'It's time we did something cultural,' what would you suggest?

SPEAKING

- B Compare your ideas with other groups.

VOCABULARY PLUS

THREE-PART MULTI-WORD VERBS

- 10 A Read three extracts from the article on page 105 and answer the questions below.
- While there [on the plinth], they could ... stand up for their beliefs.
 - They came up with wildly different ways to spend their sixty minutes of fame.
 - Did the performers have to put up with nerves and noisy onlookers?
- Underline the multi-word verbs. What do they mean?
 - Is it possible to split three-part multi-word verbs? (Can we say: he came up with an idea and he came up an idea with?)
 - Where is the main stress on three-part multi-word verbs?
- B Read the advice for learning multi-word verbs. Which pieces of advice do you agree with?
- Write full examples of multi-word verbs in your notebook because they are best understood in context.
 - Learn all the meanings of the most common phrasal verbs by heart. The top ten are go on, carry out, set up, pick up, go back, come back, go out, point out, find out, come up.
 - Never use phrasal verbs in formal English.
 - Don't learn long lists of multi-word verbs because there are too many and they have different meanings. Instead, 'discover' them in texts.
 - Learn the general meanings of some particles (see page 61) because you can sometimes guess the meaning of the multi-word verb from the particle.
 - Group the multi-word verbs either by topic (e.g. friendship: get on, fall out), main verb (e.g. get up, get over), or particle (e.g. come up, eat up) in your notebook.

- 11 Choose the correct multi-word verb to complete each sentence.

- You stole the money, but you'll never get away with/get round to it!
- I've been meaning to write to Sally but I never get away with/get round to it.
- I don't really go along with/go in for dangerous sports; I prefer golf.
- I'm happy to go along with/go in for your plans.
- Because of the price, I don't know if we'll buy the flat; it'll all come up with/come down to money.
- We have twenty-four hours to come up with/come down to a plan to save this company!
- I'm not going to put down to/put up with this noise for one minute longer!
- He had problems reading, which he put down to/put up with his poor education.
- You have to stand up for/stand up to that bully, or he'll walk all over you.
- My father taught me to stand up for/stand up to my beliefs.
- I hope to catch up with/catch on to you at the party next month.
- The police will never catch up with/catch on to this little scam!

- 12 Choose three questions to answer. Compare your answers in pairs.

- Is there anything you've wanted to do for a long time but haven't got round to?
- When you need ideas desperately, how do you come up with them?
- What irritations of modern life do you find difficult to put up with?
- Is there anyone from your past you'd love to catch up with?
- Do you go in for any dangerous sports or do you prefer a quiet life?
- Can you think of a time when you stood up for your beliefs?

LISTENING

1 A Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

- Where do you think people in different jobs might find inspiration, e.g. musicians, artists, business people, chefs, architects?
- Write a list of six ways to find inspiration.

B ▶ 9.2 Listen to four people talking about where they get their ideas. Make notes about what their job is and where they get their inspiration.

C Did the speakers mention any of the ideas from your list in Exercise 1A?

2 A Answer the questions.

- Why does Speaker 1 like to do the washing up?
- What happens when Speaker 2 goes skiing?
- Why does Speaker 3 enjoy using old recipe books that he has had for a while?
- What did Speaker 4's teacher tell her? How has this helped her?

B Listen again to check your answers.

C Discuss. What do you think of the ideas suggested? What do you do when you're looking for ideas or trying to solve a problem?

4 A Which phrases in Exercise 3B could you use to talk about the following situations?

- Your younger brother is thinking about going to university, but isn't sure if he wants to.
- Your business has a new product and is looking for some new ideas for ways to sell it.
- You've been wondering what to do for your birthday, and when you were out today you suddenly had an idea.
- You organised a family walk, but the weather turned bad and now everyone's in a bad mood.

B Think of examples from your own life where you or someone you know has had a bright idea/a ridiculous idea/an original idea. Tell your partner.

How do you get your

INSPIRATION?

1 Cultivate your imagination. Write everything down. Charles Darwin kept a rigorous system of notebooks _____ and he reread them frequently. These days, we have Google Docs. Use a 'spark file' to keep track of interesting ideas and websites you come across.

2 Create a 'coffee house' culture in your brain by extending your sphere of interests with hobbies. Many great inventors worked on several projects _____. Darwin had no fewer than sixteen hobbies.

3 Take a reading sabbatical. Bill Gates takes two weeks off _____ just to read. This isn't practical for most people, but you can adopt the principle. Save up everything you want to read around a topic and then take a long weekend to do nothing but read.

4 Learn to share. George Bernard Shaw said, 'If you have an apple and I have an apple and we exchange these apples, then you and I will still each have one apple. But if you have an idea and I have an idea and we exchange these ideas, then each of us will have two ideas.' Share your ideas _____, both online and offline.

5 Spend time _____. Every once in a while, find space and time to just relax and be by yourself. Solitude bears surprising fruit.

6 Try new things. Doing the same thing every day does little to spark your creative genius. Put yourself in new situations and try new experiences. This will _____ allow your brain to make new and interesting connections.

GRAMMAR

ADVERBIALS

6 A Read the text. What information do you think could go in the spaces? What do you think of the ideas?

B Look at the adverbial phrases below. Match phrases in box A with phrases in Box B with possible similar meanings.

A on your own almost certainly a year readily record his ideas simultaneously

B most probably alone at the same time to keep track of his observations willingly annually

C Complete the text using the words/phrases from box B in Exercise 6B.

7 A Read the rule and answer the questions.

RULES

An adverbial gives us additional information about a verb, an adjective or another adverb. It can be a single word (frequently, eventually) or a group of words (on your own, for his ideas) which act together to give detail.

Which adverbials in the text describe:

- 1 how something happens/should happen? (adverbial of manner)
- 2 when something happens? (adverbial of time)
- 3 how often something happens? (adverbial of frequency)
- 4 the probability of something happening? (adverbial of probability)
- 5 why something happened? (adverbial of purpose)

B Find at least three other examples of adverbials in the text.

8 A Expand sentences 1–6 using the adverbials in a)–f). Make sure you put each adverbial in the correct position.

1 I ¹totally forgot to call you ²yesterday ³to tell you about this great idea I've had.

2 We ¹_____ go walking ²_____ ³_____.

3 I can ¹_____ change the appointment ²_____ ³_____.

4 I ¹_____ like to chat with friends on Facebook ²_____ ³_____.

5 I ¹_____ like to take things easy ²_____.

6 I'll ¹_____ try to visit my family ²_____.

a) to make it more convenient / easily / for you

b) to find out what they've been doing / generally / in the evenings when I'm at home

c) next time I'm in the area / probably

d) totally / to tell you about this great idea I've had / yesterday

e) at the weekend / usually

f) in the mountains near our house / regularly / during the holidays

B Choose two sentences from Exercise 8A. Expand them in a different way to make them true for you. Compare your sentences in pairs.

A REVIEW; LEARN TO USE A RANGE OF VOCABULARY

10 A Read the review of an exhibition and answer the questions.

- 1 What kind of exhibition is this?
- 2 Who is it suitable for?
- 3 Is the review positive or negative?
- 4 Would you visit this exhibition based on the review?

B Read the guidelines for writing a review. Which ones does the British Invention Show review follow? How could it be improved?

- 1 Try to be both informative and entertaining.
- 2 Give an account of the subject in question (the book, film, play or event) and offer a reasoned opinion about its qualities. Report on the content, the approach and the scope of the work.
- 3 Your audience may or may not have heard about the work in detail. Make sure your review caters to all.
- 4 Even with a short review, try to follow a clear structure. Include:
 - a brief introduction.
 - a description of contents.
 - an assessment of value.
 - a comparison with others.
 - a conclusion.

The British Invention Show

From the sublime to the ridiculous, The British Invention Show has everything. Designed as an exhibition to showcase ideas for new inventions from around the world, this is the place to come if you're looking for financial backing for your latest eccentric gadget idea. Combining technology with innovation and invention, the show is held annually and lasts for four days.

As a gadget fan myself, I was really delighted to be able to check out some of the new ideas. The first to catch my eye was a plant pot that moves around in search of the sun. Initially, I thought this was a joke, but actually the pot has wheels and a solar panel, and it wheels itself around your garden or balcony looking for a sunny spot. Clever.

Next, I spotted a pillow you can write messages on, and later erase them. This idea had come from Barcelona, and although entertaining, it's perhaps not that useful. In fact, it seems that many of the ideas being presented are here simply because of their entertainment value.

Among the 200 exhibits, there are some really fascinating and highly intelligent ideas too though, like the hydrogen-powered car, and the new stereo systems. My personal favourite? An absolutely stunning James Bond-style submarine. The only problem with this is that you'd need to be a millionaire to buy one.

If you like technology and you've got a good sense of humour, the British Invention Show is an entertaining day out. Definitely worth a visit.

11 A Work in pairs. Think of synonyms for the words/phrases below.

- | | |
|-----------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 1 unusual/peculiar | 5 extremely interesting |
| 2 very pleased | 6 very clever |
| 3 at first | 7 extremely attractive or beautiful |
| 4 funny and enjoyable | |

B Find synonyms for words/phrases 1–7 in the review. Compare them with your own ideas.

speakout TIP

Make your review interesting by using a variety of adjectives, e.g. good = excellent, superb, top-quality, terrific, exceptional, etc. Qualify the adjectives you use in a review with adverbs, e.g. absolutely gripping, completely credible, quite heavy-going. Find examples of adverb + adjective combinations for 1–7 in Exercise 11A in the review.

12 You have been asked to write an exhibition review for a magazine. Read the exhibition description below. Then turn to page 164 and read some notes about it. Write a review based on the notes (200–250 words).

Exhibition: Iconic Inventions

Folio Society Gallery, The British Library Price: FREE

In a celebration of great ingenuity, this exhibition explores the stories behind some iconic inventions. Whether they are changing the world of sport, fighting climate change or just making life a bit easier, each inventor has challenged the established way of doing things. From Dyson's revolutionary bladeless fan to President Obama's favourite dog bowl, trace the journey of an idea from that first spark of inspiration to the development of a business. See original drawings, patent specifications and the finished products.

USE COMMENT ADVERBIALS

5 A ▶ 9.6 Listen to extracts from the rants/raves in Exercise 2B and complete the sentences.

- 1 _____, it drives me up the wall.
- 2 I have, in the past, _____ raised my voice at tourists.
- 3 I'd _____ go back there again.
- 4 She was _____ good, honestly.
- 5 The restaurant was _____ overpriced.
- 6 _____, it's hard to cook for a lot of people.

speakout TIP

Listen out for comment adverbials (absolutely, definitely, obviously, totally, simply, undoubtedly, completely, surprisingly, incredibly, etc.) to help you understand someone's viewpoint. Also, when you are talking, comment adverbials which come at the beginning of the sentence can give you thinking time (Honestly, Basically, Seriously, etc.).

B Choose the correct alternatives.

- 1 Honestly/Undoubtedly, I have no idea where you could possibly find more delicious chocolates!
- 2 Incredibly/Basically, he's just lazy.
- 3 Clearly/Completely, this was one of the more luxurious hotels.
- 4 Not clearly/surprisingly, with high unemployment young people are struggling to find jobs.
- 5 It's quite basically/simple the most ridiculous idea I've ever heard.
- 6 Undoubtedly/Completely, this is one of the top bands of the moment.

C Work in pairs. Are the sentences in Exercise 5B rants or raves? Choose one of the sentences and develop it into a short conversation. Include two more comment adverbials.

SPEAKING

6 A Choose two or three topics from the list below. Prepare to rant or rave about each topic. Make notes and try to use comment adverbials.

- a restaurant you've enjoyed/been disappointed by
- a spectacular/ugly place you have visited
- an item of clothing you love/hate
- an actor or film you love/hate
- a piece of music/album you love/hate
- something you bought recently which was a success/disaster

B Work in groups. Take turns to talk about your topics. Do you agree with the other students? If not, offer your own opinion.

DVD PREVIEW

1 A Look at the pictures and the lesson title. What type of person do you think of when you hear the word philanthropist? What job might a philanthropist have?

B Read the programme information. Were you correct about this philanthropist?

BBC News: The vegetable seller

This BBC News clip tells the story of an extraordinary woman named Chen Shu-chu. Shu-chu is a vegetable seller in Taitung City, Taiwan. Although she has experienced a lot of hardship in her life and is not a rich woman, she gives away a large proportion of the money she earns and has become a famous philanthropist, contributing to schools and various other charitable causes. The recipient of several awards and now in her sixties, Shu-chu remains humble and continues to give away her money.

speakout an award nomination

- 5 A Read about an award. What is it for and who can nominate candidates?

The Inspiration Award recognises an individual for their ability to make a difference in the lives of others. The award-winner will be someone who has demonstrated commitment to a cause through organising, developing projects and/or showing leadership skills. Anyone may nominate a candidate for the award. Go to our website for more information.

- B 9.7 Listen to a speaker talking about a nominee for the award. How has the nominee helped others? What personal qualities are mentioned?

- C Listen again. Tick the key phrases the speaker uses. Which phrase is an idiom? What does it mean?

KEYPHRASES

He ... goes under the radar.
 has made a huge difference to people's lives.
 is my hero.
 has worked tirelessly.
 provides moral support.
 is an example to us all.
 must have helped thousands of people.
 would be a worthy winner.
 is a shining light.

- 6 A Choose someone you'd like to nominate for the award. Make some notes on who they are and why they'd be a worthy winner.

- B Work in groups. Take turns to describe your nominee. Decide on who should win the award and tell the class.

writeback an inspiring person

- 7 A Read the description of an inspirational person below. Who has she inspired? How?

My Inspiration: Simin Behbahani

Simin Behbahani was one of Iran's greatest modern poets and a tireless advocate for human rights. She was twice nominated for the Nobel Prize in Literature, and Barack Obama quoted one of her verses when addressing the Iranian people in 2011.

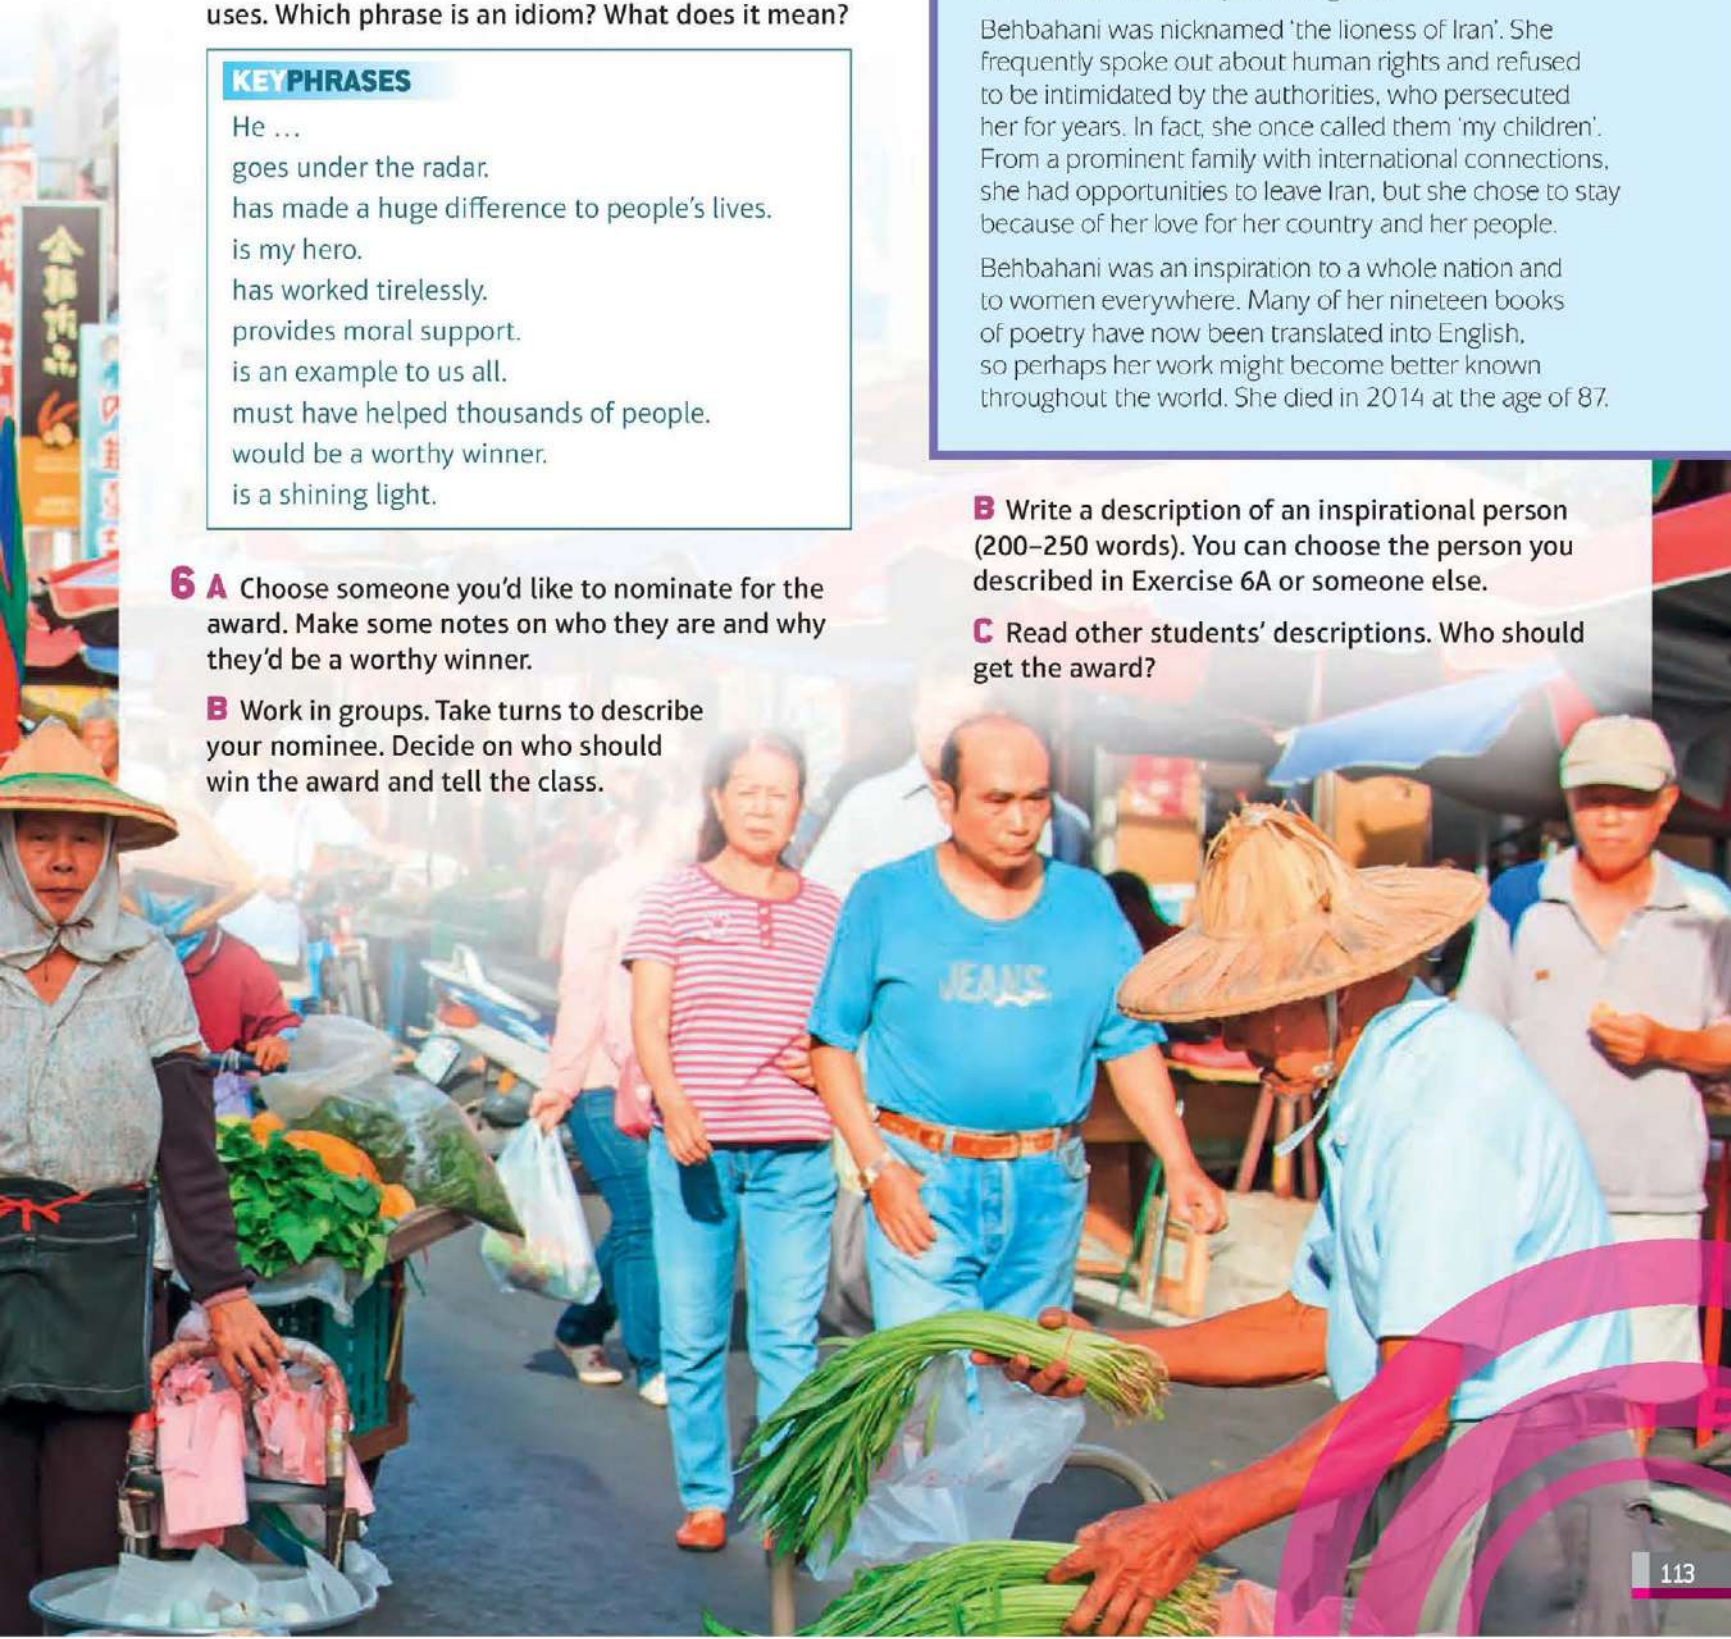

As a writer, she was best known for reviving an ancient type of sonnet used by the classical Persian poets. However, her subject matter was the daily lives of Iranians: the challenges they faced and their hopes and dreams. She was often called Iran's national poet because she spoke for the people. Her most famous poem is probably My Country, I Will Build you Again, which has been widely anthologised.

Behbahani was nicknamed 'the lioness of Iran'. She frequently spoke out about human rights and refused to be intimidated by the authorities, who persecuted her for years. In fact, she once called them 'my children'. From a prominent family with international connections, she had opportunities to leave Iran, but she chose to stay because of her love for her country and her people.

Behbahani was an inspiration to a whole nation and to women everywhere. Many of her nineteen books of poetry have now been translated into English, so perhaps her work might become better known throughout the world. She died in 2014 at the age of 87.

- B Write a description of an inspirational person (200–250 words). You can choose the person you described in Exercise 6A or someone else.

- C Read other students' descriptions. Who should get the award?

V ADJECTIVES: THE ARTS

1 Underline the correct alternatives.

- I thought the painting was striking/overrated. I'm amazed it won an award.
- What a compelling/well-received programme. I couldn't stop watching.
- The song is very poignant/subtle. It reminds me of some hard times.
- Her photos are really charming/unconventional. She breaks all the rules!
- The novel was quite bleak/offbeat. It was full of bizarre surprises.
- That actress is extremely stylish/thought-provoking. She always dresses well.

G TENSES FOR UNREAL SITUATIONS

2 A Read about a wish list for the arts. Find and correct six mistakes.

It's high time art forms like opera are made accessible to the public. Tickets should be cheap, and free for children. Opera and theatre are treated as though they're for the elite, but they're about the same things that are in the papers every day: jealousy, passion, murder and blood feuds, and it's about time the public is having a chance to enjoy them.

I'd sooner TV isn't overtaken by sites like YouTube. The do-it-yourself culture has its benefits, but people talk as if anyone can make a masterpiece on camera. They can't, and that's why TV will survive.

Finally, it's time schoolteachers will think outside the box. What if circus skills were taught in schools? Supposing kids having a chance to learn how to juggle, swing on a trapeze and be real clowns? I'm sure millions of kinaesthetic learners would rather they are spending their days doing this than sitting at desks doing worksheets.

B Write three sentences to describe your own wish list for the arts. Remember to use language for unreal situations.

V IDEAS

3 A Choose the correct option to complete the sentences.

- Oh no! The whole bookcase has fallen over now. Whose _____ idea was it to move it?
a) toy b) novel c) bright
- We were completely at a loss until we _____ on the idea of renting out the office.
a) hit b) had c) held
- A: What _____ him the idea of becoming a circus performer?
B: I have no idea.
a) hit b) gave c) had
- If we don't know what to do, I suggest we _____ a few ideas.
a) toy b) original c) brainstorm
- I've never heard of that before. What an _____ idea!
a) original b) origin c) originate
- I've never heard of such a _____ idea in all my life.
a) ridiculous b) ridicule c) ridiculously

B Work in pairs. Test each other on the phrases above.

A: We thought it was a good idea at the time ...

B: It seemed like a good idea.

A: Correct.

G ADVERBIALS

4 A Work in pairs. Try to expand the sentences as much as possible by adding different adverbials.

- I eat chocolate.
A: I always eat chocolate.
B: I always eat chocolate at the end of the day.
A: I always greedily eat chocolate at the end of the day.
- I like music.
- He left the office.
- We agreed to pay.
- We went there.
- I love the way she speaks.
- He cooks.

B Compare your sentences with other students.

F RANTING/RAVING

5 A Complete the conversations with the words in the box.

- 3 What did he learn from his trial trip to Africa?
- 4 What gave Gunther the idea to go travelling in Africa?
- 5 How do you think Gunther's attitude has helped him?
- 6 Would you consider going on a journey like this? Why/Why not?

GUNTHER, CHRISTINE AND OTTO: A Love Story

How a man met a woman and they set off on an epic journey across six continents in one amazing unbreakable car

It's an hour before sunset in northern Madagascar.

The bush stretches to the horizon and surges up to the edge of the road. Light floods the scene from left to right and pours through the open window.

Another vehicle is coming towards Gunther Holtorf without slowing. It's going to be a tight fit.

He brakes and steers the Mercedes G-Wagen towards the edge of the road.

The ground is soft, and the thick vegetation conceals a steep slope. Slowly the car slips, then starts a slow-motion roll. Mid-roll, it stops for a second, then it turns again – but hits a tree, just strong enough to hold it in position on its side.

¹ _____ There have been minor incidents – a kangaroo flying into a side door, an Indian lorry reversing without looking – but in 177 countries and 884,000km (549,000 miles), nothing worse than a dent.

Holtorf, seventy-six, undoes his seat belt and lifts himself out of the open passenger window. He's unharmed – not a scratch.

For most of this epic journey, Holtorf was accompanied by his fourth wife, Christine. They formed an extraordinary twenty-year partnership, in which Otto the car was a third and equal member.

B Plan your own dream adventure. Where would you go and what would you do? Read the information below and plan a trip for your group.

There is one constraint: you can only make one journey by commercial aeroplane. For the rest, you can use any other means of travel. Think about the following questions.

- How are you going to travel?
- What countries will you visit?
- What will be the main aim of your trip?
- How long will the trip take?
- Could you use the trip to highlight any particular issues? Which ones? How?
- What problems do you think you might have? How will you deal with them?

C Tell the class about your plans. Which group has the most interesting idea for a dream adventure?

² _____ It had been a valuable learning experience, with two immediate consequences.

First, the couple split up. Then, Holtorf got Otto refitted, creating a spacious storage area under a comfortable bed.

³ _____ They hit it off, and before long he had a question for her: 'I said, "Why don't we do a little bit of travel?"'

Christine agreed, and in November, once her son had been settled in a boarding school, Otto set off for Africa again. Holtorf was fifty-three, Christine thirty-four.

The plan was to spend a couple of years touring the continent, spending as little time as possible in towns or cities, and as much as possible out in the wild.

In thirty years working for Lufthansa, more than twenty of them in offices overseas, Holtorf had spent hour after hour in the air looking down at roads. After quitting his job, he decided this was where he wanted to be. The couple headed straight for the Sahara desert.

⁴ _____ He met other Western travellers who were, he says, 'addicted' to the Sahara, returning again and again, and he can understand why.

'The Sahara doesn't mean sand, only 13 percent is sand, the rest is gravel, rocks, dry nature. There is no grass, no animals, no insects, no wind,' he says. 'You can listen to the silence.'

One of the secrets of travelling off the beaten track, Holtorf says, is patience. ⁵ _____

All problems can be solved in time, he believes, and malaria – which he has now had eight times – is one that he reckons to overcome in two days.

'Fifty percent of sickness is sickness you have mentally,' he says. 'You get malaria and mentally you add another malaria – but I cut it by 50 percent.' ⁶ _____ There are some people who, faced with ninety-nine positive things and one negative, focus on the negative thing, he suggests. 'I am the other way round. If there are ninety-nine negative and one positive, I focus on the positive.'

INVERSION

6 A Read the text. What is so special about Otto the car?

OTTO THE CAR

When Gunther Holtorf first embarked on what was supposed to be an eighteen-month tour of Africa in his Mercedes called Otto, he had no idea that the same car would take him 550,000 miles, on a twenty-six-year-long journey. Never before has a car travelled so many miles. The Mercedes has been to more single countries than any other car. It's a world record. And one that Holtorf says would have been impossible to achieve had he tried with a modern car. Holtorf says he drove the car like a granny, and mastered the mechanics himself. Not once did the car break down so badly that he couldn't fix it. He carried huge numbers of spare parts, and a healthy dose of patience. Having finished its epic journey, the car is now in a museum in Stuttgart.

B Read the sentences. What do you notice about the word order? Rewrite the sentences beginning with if.

- Had the car been a modern car, it would never have completed the journey.
- Had he not mastered the mechanics himself, they might have experienced more breakdowns.

C Choose the correct alternative to complete the rule. Then find another example of inversion in a conditional clause in the text.

RULES

In formal/informal written texts, the word order in conditional clauses may be inverted.

D Look at sentences 1–4. Notice how inversion is also used after negative adverbials to add dramatic effect. Find two examples in the text in Exercise 6A.

- No sooner had they finished one trip than they were planning another.
- Rarely/Never before/Seldom had they seen such scenery.
- Not once/At no point did they stop to question their decision.
- Only later/Not until the journey was finished did they appreciate some of the places that they had visited.

7 A Complete the second sentence so that it has the same meaning as the first.

- He didn't think about leaving until they argued. Not until ...
- I then saw the danger that we were in. Only ...
- As soon as we left the tent, it collapsed. No sooner ...
- If we had remembered, we would have taken extra fuel. Had ...
- They had never ridden motorbikes for such extended distances. Never before ...
- They did not consider giving up the expedition at any point. At no point ...

B Think about a difficult journey you have experienced. Complete the sentences for you and tell a partner.

- Had I known ... then ...
- Never before had I ...
- No sooner had I ... than ...
- Not only ... but also ...

C Write a short description of your/your partner's journey using inversions where appropriate.

- journey: trip, tracker, expedition
- conceal: hide, cover up, extract
- gripping: thrilling, exhilarating, dull
- embark on: undertake, complete, set off on
- spacious: minuscule, extensive, immense
- master (v): train, grasp, get the hang of

speakout TIP

Use a thesaurus to help you expand your vocabulary range. Look up the word interesting in a thesaurus. How many alternatives does it offer? Think of example sentences for each word and write them in your notebook.

9 Replace one word in each sentence with the correct form of a synonym from Exercise 8. Do not change the meaning of the sentence.

- He hid the documents under his coat.
- The book is a thrilling account of his journey.
- He began a new career as a photographer.
- I never quite grasped the art of walking in high heels.
- He went on a journey to Borneo to film the wildlife there.
- Exhibitions are regularly held in the spacious reception area.

2 Read three answers to question 3 above. Which phrases in bold mean a small difference and which mean a big difference?

- My life would be barely any different to now.
- Life would be significantly more stressful in the public eye.
- I'd receive far more opportunities to make money.

LISTENING

6 A Read about a writer called Frank McCourt and discuss questions 1–3.

- 1 Why do you think Frank McCourt published his first book only when he was in his sixties?
- 2 How do you think his life changed after Angela's Ashes became a bestseller?
- 3 Who do you think he met after becoming famous?

Frank McCourt came from an extremely poor Irish-American family. His ambition was to be a writer, but the longer he waited, the more unlikely it seemed that his dream would come true. So, having spent most of his adulthood as a teacher, he was delighted when his memoir, Angela's Ashes, was published. By now in his sixties, he was every bit as surprised when the book became a bestseller. Life became a good deal better for him with his sudden fame. He went on to write two more books: 'Tis (1999) and Teacher Man (2005), which cemented his reputation as a first-class memoirist.

WRITING

A 'FOR AND AGAINST' ESSAY; LEARN TO DESCRIBE PROS AND CONS

11 A Work in groups. Read the quotes and discuss questions 1–4 below.

'If you become a star, you don't change; everyone else does.'

[Kirk Douglas, actor]

'A celebrity is a person who works hard all their life to become well known, then wears dark glasses to avoid being recognised.'

[Fred Allen, comedian]

- 1 Do you think the quotations are true?
- 2 What is 'celebrity culture'?
- 3 Do you read gossip columns or magazines about celebrities? Do you watch chat shows or look at websites that focus on celebrities?
- 4 Do you think celebrity culture is a good or a bad thing?

B Read the essay. What arguments does the writer give for and against celebrity culture?

Celebrity culture – a blessing or a curse?

The world's first celebrity was Alexander the Great. Not only did he want to be the greatest man in history, but he also wanted everyone to know it. Alexander employed historians, sculptors and painters to tell his story for posterity, and they succeeded. But of course his achievements were astonishing. Today, many people become celebrities by doing little more than craving to be the centre of attention. With so many magazines, chat shows and websites needing content, such 'celebrities' fill a void, but many would argue that they fill a void with another void. The question is, does celebrity culture matter? Is it just harmless fun or does it erode our values?

On the one hand, there is the fame industry: Hello and OK magazines, gossip columns, Oprah Winfrey-style chat shows. These give us insights into the rich and famous. They show us the ups and downs of people whose lives seem far larger than our own. Most of us enjoy a bit of gossip, and what could be better than hearing about some superstar finally getting what he deserves (whether good or bad)? This view sees celebrity culture as a branch of the entertainment industry. In addition, fame has become democratised. On reality shows like Big Brother, the participants needn't have any talent and many see this as a good thing. Not everyone can be an Einstein or a Messi.

On the other hand, there are those who believe celebrity culture has got out of control. They argue that people now idolise mediocrity. It is no longer the greatest who win our hearts, but the loudest. A recent poll discovered that almost fifty percent of teenagers simply want to 'be famous', without specifying the profession and presumably without making any effort to learn a skill. The danger is that fame can be confused with achievement. Appearing on TV is not the same as spending years mastering an instrument or working for peace or inventing a cure.

So, is celebrity culture a blessing or a curse? Those in favour say it entertains us, sells newspapers and allows us to dream. Those against say it promotes 'fame for fame's sake' and doesn't value effort or skill. One thing we know is that the actions of most of today's celebrities will soon be forgotten, while real achievements won't. William Shakespeare, Joan of Arc, Helen Keller, Mahatma Gandhi, Nelson Mandela: their work will live on. And we're still making movies about Alexander the Great two thousand years after he died.

12 'For and against' essays often follow the structure below. To what extent does the essay in Exercise 11B follow this structure?

- | | |
|------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| 1 Introduction to the issue | 3 Points against (plus examples) |
| 2 Points for (plus examples) | 4 Conclusion |

NEGOTIATION

- 1 Think about the questions. Then discuss them in groups.
 - 1 Why might the people in the photos need to negotiate?
 - 2 What negotiations do you think the following people sometimes have? What experience do you have of these types of negotiations?
 - parents and children
 - bosses and employees
 - companies and customers
 - 3 What do you think makes a good negotiator?
- 2 A Read seven tips for negotiating. Which three are the most important for you?

- 1 Approach the negotiation in the right way. Don't think of the other negotiator as your enemy. There are bound to be similar things that you both want, so try to establish common goals.
- 2 Be realistic when haggling or bargaining. Don't start with an insultingly low offer. This will only annoy the other party and make a successful conclusion less likely.
- 3 Be aware that you won't get everything you want. You will need to surrender some points. This means you need to make compromises.
- 4 Always be tactful and diplomatic. Never talk badly about anyone or anything. If you do, it may come back to haunt you.
- 5 Don't be afraid to postpone or defer a decision. As the negotiation progresses, you may find that the conditions aren't right. You can always come back the next day and start again.
- 6 Don't bluff. If you don't know something, say you don't know. If you say 'this is my final offer', it must be your final offer. If you are caught bluffing, you will lose your credibility as a negotiator.
- 7 Keep your eye on the main goal. Once the main deal is done, make concessions on small details. The idea is not to 'win', but to make sure both parties are happy.

B Can you think of any other tips for negotiating?

C Which words/expressions in bold in the text can be replaced by definitions a)–g)?

- a) let the other person have something in order to reach an agreement
- b) careful about what you say so that you don't upset or embarrass anyone
- c) pretend something in order to achieve what you want
- d) delay (until a later date)
- e) accept less than what you originally wanted in order to reach an agreement
- f) find out what you both want
- g) arguing to agree on the price of something

Wildest Dreams

BBC

Wildlife film-making is one of the most difficult jobs on earth. Thousands want to do it, but few get the chance. The BBC has chosen nine people with ordinary jobs to see if one of them has what it takes to become a wildlife film-maker. Presented by Nick Knowles, Wildest Dreams puts them through their paces in one of the natural world's greatest arenas – Africa – with the ultimate prize for just one of them: a job at the BBC's prestigious Natural History Unit. In this episode, the hopefuls face their first challenges in the vast swamps of Botswana's Okavango Delta. If any of them aren't good enough, this will be the end of their journey and they'll be sent home.

Do you want to apply for your dream job?

If you want to be sure of getting the job, send us a short paragraph explaining why it's your dream job and how your skills and experience qualify you.

Francesca: My absolute dream job by far would be an _____. I've always been fascinated by people who taste food and drink for their jobs, like chocolate tasters, restaurant critics, etc. I'd like to think that I have a very fine palate. I'm what you'd call a real foodie, always cooking and enjoying fine food. Perhaps that's because of my Italian background. In the summer, one of the things I most enjoy is going out in the evening with a few friends to have an ice cream. In Italy, there's an ice cream shop on nearly every street corner, selling a frightening number of different flavours of ice cream. I think I've tried them all, including some of the strangest combinations, like English trifle and pistachio. To my mind, my passion for flavour combined with my creative instinct would make me ideal for the job.

F NEGOTIATING

- 5 A Sentences a)–g) are from a meeting about a company's annual party. Cross out the extra word in each sentence.

- OK, so you'd like to take everybody to Sweden instead of having a party. Can you go into the more detail?
- Get in to touch if anything needs clarifying.
- Welcome, everybody. By the time end of the meeting, we want to have some concrete plans for our Christmas party. 1
- If that you can pay for some of the trip, I can ask the board to subsidise the rest.
- Good. That sounds acceptable for to me.
- Firstly, can you tell me a little about what you have taken in mind?
- I'm not of sure we can do that because of the cost.

- B At what stage of the meeting did the sentences occur? Put them in a logical order. The first one has been done for you.

- C What do you think were the responses from the other people in the meeting?

Response to sentence c): 'Fine. That sounds good.'

GRAMMAR

1.1 the continuous aspect

An aspect is a way we look at something. With verb forms, there are three aspects: simple, continuous and perfect. The simple aspect emphasises that an action is complete. The perfect aspect emphasises that an action is completed before another time.

The continuous aspect focuses on the action and its duration (how long it lasts), rather than the result. It is used to show that an activity is temporary and its duration is limited.

In contrast to the continuous aspect, we usually use simple tenses to talk about facts, permanent situations, finished actions and habits. Some verbs – called state verbs – are not usually used in the continuous, e.g. verbs that describe personal feelings (love, prefer), the senses (hear, smell) and thoughts (believe, understand).

Use the continuous aspect to talk about:

- actions that we see happening over a period of time.
They've been waiting here for an hour.
- actions in progress when another thing happens.
John was crying when I arrived.
- temporary or incomplete situations.
He's living with his parents until he can find a house.
- repeated actions (that may be annoying).
She's always playing her music loudly.
- situations in the process of changing.
The economy is getting worse.
- plans (often using the past continuous).
I was thinking of going home this weekend.
- tentative ideas (to avoid being too direct with a request).
I was wondering if I could borrow some money.
- actions in progress at a particular time.
Everyone seems to be working at the moment.

1.2 describing habits

Use will to describe present habits and behaviour (both good and bad).

She'll tell you everything she has done during the day, even if you're not interested.

He'll always bring me flowers.

Use the present continuous + always, keeps + -ing and will keep + -ing in the same way. This often implies annoyance.

He's always telling me what to do. She keeps texting me.

They will keep nagging me to go and visit them.

Use used to/would to describe past habits and behaviour (both good and bad).

My parents wouldn't drive me to parties on Saturday nights.

They used to make me stay at home.

Note: We can only use will/would to describe habits, not states.

He would get angry very easily.

NOT He would be angry very easily.

Use past continuous + always, kept + -ing and would keep + -ing in the same way.

They were always complaining.

We kept asking for a refund, but we were ignored.

He would keep going on about his brother. It drove me mad.

Use keep on to emphasise that the action is repeated frequently.

Sorry, I keep on forgetting your name!

Use tend to to describe typical states.

She tends to shout a lot.

My parents tended to be very laid-back.

spoken grammar

Will and would may be stressed to emphasise the annoyance at a habit.

He will turn up late.

They wouldn't listen to me.

other expressions

I'm inclined to .../I have an inclination to .../I'm happy to ...

I tend to .../I have a tendency to ...

I'm prone to ...

- 7 A: Have you seen that Rafael and Lina have got a smart new car?
B: Yes, they _____ the impression of having plenty of money.

GRAMMAR

2.1 hypothetical conditional: past

The most common conditional sentences refer to permanent facts (zero conditional), future possibility (first conditional) or imaginary situations (second conditional).

hypothetical conditional: past (third conditional)

Use to talk about something that could have happened, but didn't, or should not have happened, but did.

If I hadn't eaten that shellfish, I would have been fine.

other forms with a third conditional meaning

Supposing you'd met the president, what would you have said?

Imagine you'd missed the flight, what would you have done?

In more formal contexts, it is possible to replace if by inverting the subject and had. Had I known her, I would have said hello.

Or replace if with but for + noun (+ gerund)

But for Wilkinson's heroics, they would have lost the match.

mixed conditional

Use to say how, if something had been different in the past, the present or future would be different.

If she'd listened to me, she wouldn't be in debt now.

regrets

Use regret + gerund, if only + past perfect or wish + past perfect to say we want something in the past to have been different.

I regret going out last night.

If only I hadn't left the oven on.

He wishes he'd gone to university.

Use if only + past simple or wish + past simple to say we want something to be different now.

If only we had some matches!

I wish you were here.

Note: After if only and wish, we often use were instead of was.

Were is considered more correct in formal English, although was is often used in spoken English.

Use if only + would or wish + would to show we are annoyed by something now.

If only you'd be more sensible!

I wish you would be quiet!

2.2 verb patterns

verb + -ing

Many verbs can be followed by a verb in the -ing form.

Some of these verbs are related in meaning: like, dislike, adore, love, detest, can't bear/stand. Some can also be followed by the infinitive, but the meaning may change.

We regret to inform you ... (We are sorry before we speak.)

He regrets telling her ... (He is sorry after he speaks.)

Prepositions are followed by an -ing form.

Are you still interested in buying the property?

-ing forms when they function as nouns (gerunds) are often the subject of a sentence. Smoking is bad for you.

infinitive with to Use an infinitive with to:

- after certain verbs including appear, decide, fail, need, offer, refuse, want, wish. Verbs with a future meaning (hope, expect, promise, etc.) are often followed by the infinitive.
They hoped to negotiate a better deal.
- after certain verb + object combinations, e.g. advise, allow, ask, cause, encourage, forbid.
The police asked everyone to remain calm.
- with some nouns, often as part of semi-fixed phrases (It's time to ..., etc.).
- after most adjectives. I was happy to help.

passive infinitive or -ing form

Use the passive -ing form (being done) to describe actions which are done to the subject.

I hate being told what to do.

Use the passive infinitive (to be done) after some verbs (especially reporting verbs).

He was considered to be the right person for the job.

perfect infinitive or -ing form

Use the perfect -ing form (having done) or the perfect infinitive (to have done) to emphasise when one action happened before another.

She mentioned having seen him leave.

They seem to have solved the problem.

After verbs of preference (would like/love/hate/prefer/rather) we can use the perfect infinitive to talk about an action in the past.

We would hate to have lost the match.

negative infinitive or -ing form

Not + infinitive and not + -ing are also important.

It's quite common not to understand at first.

Not understanding is quite common.

Infinitives can be the subject of a sentence.

To learn is important.

Not to thank her would be impolite.

2.3 introducing opinions

Use the following phrases to introduce opinions or knowledge.

If you want my honest opinion, ...	Quite frankly, ...	The reality is, .../In reality, ...
According to (the statistics), ...	From what I can gather, ...	As far as I'm concerned, ...
To my knowledge, ...	Look at it this way.	If you ask me, ...

PRACTICE

2.1 A Complete the sentences with the correct form of the verbs in the box. Use the negative form where necessary.

take over know be spend find cause stay pull die become tell arrive win listen call cook

- If you _____ to my advice, you _____ in such a terrible situation now.
- I regret _____ a manager so young; I wish I _____ more time in the industry first.
- We _____ your house if we _____ you on the mobile.
- Imagine if Donner Textiles Ltd _____ the company, it _____ all kinds of problems.
- Had they _____ us about that hotel, we _____ there now, instead of in this dump!
- But for the emergency services _____ so quickly, many more people _____ in the fire.
- If I _____ she didn't eat wheat, I _____ pasta.
- It's such a shame: had she _____ a muscle, she _____ the race.

B Rewrite the sentences using the word(s) in brackets.

- We gambled on red. We lost.
(If/won) _____.
- They only asked him to the party because he's famous.
(wouldn't) _____.
- The boys feel bad about borrowing your car.
(regret) _____.
- She didn't know you were a vegetarian! She bought fish!
(Had) _____.
- I forgot my keys. Now we're locked out!
(If only/wouldn't) _____.
- I'm working in a boring, low-paid job. I shouldn't have dropped out of university.
(If) _____.
- Ahmed is sorry he didn't speak to you before you left.
(wishes) _____.
- He had an injury. We would have won otherwise.
(But for) _____.

2.2 A Underline the correct alternatives.

We all know how important ¹*make/making/to make* a good first impression is. We've heard the statistics: when you meet someone for the first time, only seven percent of their impression is based on what you say, thirty-eight percent on how you say it, and a massive fifty-five percent on your appearance and manner. So, it's vital not ²*underestimate/underestimating/to underestimate* the importance of choosing your clothes carefully when you go to that key meeting or job interview. This is your opportunity ³*impress/impressing/to impress*. On ⁴*walk/walking/to walk* into the room, most people are likely ⁵*to have form/to have forming/to have formed* an opinion of your character based on your appearance in less than three seconds. It's difficult ⁶*say/saying/to say* why people insist on ⁷*judge/judging/to judge* by appearances, even when we know that it's so unreliable ⁸*do/doing/to do* this. Even in courtrooms, juries and judges appear ⁹*give/giving/to give* lighter sentences to people who are well dressed.

B Find and correct the six mistakes in sentences 1–8.

- I can't bear seeing people smoke in cars.
- I don't know why you waste all your time sit in front of the computer.
- Cooder was encouraged play the guitar by his father.
- They hoped meet up with some of the stars after the show.
- They were rumoured to have get married in secret.
- I gave up the idea of go into politics when I was in my thirties.
- We were tempted ask if we could stay the night, but we thought it might seem rude.
- I would prefer to have seen it for myself.

2.3 A Match the sentence halves.

- | | |
|-------------------|--|
| 1 If you want my | a) honest opinion, there isn't much evidence to support this theory. |
| 2 The reality | b) frankly, this is the best film of the decade. |
| 3 Look at it | c) is, we can't keep sending them money. |
| 4 As far as | d) gather, he's very well established in his field. |
| 5 If you ask | e) knowledge, Yum Yums is the best brand for baby food. |
| 6 According to | f) me, you should put aside more time for your family. |
| 7 Quite | g) the boss, we're making a profit of €100,000 every month. |
| 8 From what I can | h) I'm concerned, this company is living on borrowed time. |
| 9 To my | i) this way: we must do something now or things will get worse. |

GRAMMAR

3.1 noun phrases

A noun phrase is a group of words which function as a unit to describe the noun. Information can be added before or after the noun to add further information about it.

before the noun (pre-modification)

Compound nouns are formed when another noun is added to help describe the main noun. These can be written as two words, with a hyphen, or as one word. coffee cup build-up fingerprint

Compound adjectives can be used for expressions of measurement.

Note: Plural expressions become singular.

a forty-five-minute journey (It takes forty-five minutes.)

a six-year-old boy (He is six years old.)

Adverb + adjective combinations can be used to give more information about the noun. an amazingly simple process

Adjectives before a noun need to be in a specific order.

determiner	value	size	age	shape	colour	origin	material	compound	noun
two	lovely		old			French			vases
my	shabby				black		leather	biker	jacket
some		small		oval			silver	ear	rings

after the noun (post-modification)

Prepositional phrases can be used to help modify the noun.

the light from the setting sun

a suggestion for how to arrange the meeting

Participle clauses also give more description.

people rushing in and out of their offices

Relative clauses can also be used to modify the noun phrase. See 3.2 below.

the man whom I spotted in the restaurant

Sometimes, the relative clause can be rewritten as a noun phrase.

research that has been conducted recently → recent research

3.2 relative clauses

defining relative clauses

Defining relative clauses give essential information about a noun. Compare:

1 My uncle, who lives in New York, is coming to Oxford.

2 My uncle who lives in New York is coming to Oxford.

In sentence 1, who lives in New York is a non-defining relative clause. It gives extra non-essential information about the uncle. In sentence 2, it is a defining relative clause. The speaker has more than one uncle so he/she identifies which uncle he/she is talking about.

In defining relative clauses, we can omit the relative pronoun if it is the object of the verb.

I've eaten the cake (which) I made yesterday.

non-defining relative clauses

Non-defining relative clauses give extra information about a noun. Use a comma before and after the relative clause.

That project, which I started years ago, still isn't finished.

relative pronouns

Use: who for people, which for things/groups of people, where for places, whose for possessions belonging to people and things. That can replace any pronoun except whose in defining relative clauses.

Use a relative pronoun after some of, all of, a few of, none of.

She has four sisters, none of whom are married.

fixed prepositional phrases and relative clauses

There are a number of fixed phrases which use a preposition in a non-defining relative clause.

The company ran out of money, at which point I quit my job.

He may work late, in which case I'll get home first.

We watched the final, the result of which was never in doubt.

In informal sentences, the preposition stays with the verb.

In formal sentences we put the preposition before the relative pronoun. Compare:

He completed the book which he'd been working on. (informal)

He completed the book on which he'd been working. (formal)

3.3 making a proposal

introducing your proposal

Just to give a bit of background information, ...
To start with, I'm going to talk briefly about ...

stating the purpose

The aim of the project is to ...
The main goal/objective of our proposal is to ...

describing your idea

What we plan to do is ...
We're going to build/develop/come up with ...

justifying your idea

This solution will help us to ... This idea is feasible because ...

listing the benefits

In the first instance, this would mean ...
The short-term/long-term benefits include ...

summarising your proposal

So, basically, what we're proposing (to do) is to ...
To sum up, we're proposing ...

soliciting questions

Does anyone have any questions?
Is there anything that needs clarification?

PRACTICE

3.1 A Make one sentence by adding the information in brackets to the noun phrase. Pay attention to word order.

- 1 I like coffee. (black / strong / small cups of / freshly ground)

- 2 He bought the house. (by the river / little / pretty)

- 3 She made cakes. (with strawberries and fresh cream on top / delicious / dark chocolate / two)

- 4 He smokes cigars. (which Juan gives him / hugely expensive / Cuban / those / enormous)

- 5 They carried the books. (ridiculously heavy / massive pile of / all the way up seven flights of stairs)

- 6 It was a dog. (incredibly smelly / hairy / guard / but rather friendly)

B Rewrite the sentences to make one sentence with a complex noun phrase.

- 1 I went to the shop. It sold shoes. It was advertised on television.
I went _____.
- 2 The man was old. He was walking with a stick.
He was _____.
- 3 We ate the cakes. They were home-made. They were absolutely delicious. We were sitting in the sunshine.
We ate _____.
- 4 They rented a house. It was nice. It was near the airport. It had a swimming pool.
They rented _____.
- 5 We went to a restaurant. It was big. It was a pizza restaurant. It was on the outskirts of town. It was run by two Italian brothers. They were called Gino and Rino.
We went _____.

3.2 A Complete the text with one word in each gap.

In my early twenties, ¹ when I was a student, I used to hang out in a few places, none ² _____ which were exactly posh. There was one seedy dive called Schubert's, ³ _____ an acquaintance of mine, ⁴ _____ name I've forgotten, played the piano. But my favourite haunt, ⁵ _____ which I remember everything including the decor (a Matisse poster ⁶ _____ edges were peeling off the wall), was Johnny Bee's Café. The table ⁷ _____ I regularly sat faced a window from ⁸ _____ you could see the street. I must have gone to Johnny Bee's every day until I graduated, by which ⁹ _____ I was virtually living there. Most of the dissertation ¹⁰ _____ which I was working was conceived in Johnny Bee's. I went back last year and saw the same people, none of ¹¹ _____ had changed except for a few grey hairs.

B Complete the second sentence so it has a similar meaning to the first. Use the word in brackets.

- 1 There were lots of children there and all of them sang really well. (whom)
There were lots of children there, _____.
- 2 When the fire alarm went off, the lesson ended. (point)
The fire alarm went off, _____.
- 3 We stayed in that woman's house. (house)
That's the woman _____.
- 4 Clare's the person I learnt the most from. (whom)
The person _____.
- 5 If you get a scholarship, you won't need to pay. (case)
You may get a scholarship, in _____.
- 6 There are two photocopiers in the office, which are both out of order. (of)
There are two photocopiers in the office, both _____.

3.3 A Underline the correct alternatives to complete the proposal.

Just to give a bit of ¹*background information/ information background*, we're computer programmers who have travelled all over the world and have contacts everywhere. To start ²*up/with*, we're going to talk briefly about our plan for a website to organise student trips abroad.

The main goal ³*to/of* our proposal is to get funding for this internet start-up, and the ⁴*target/aim* of the project is to help students travel abroad for life-changing trips.

OK, ⁵*how/what* we plan to do is create personalised trips according to the client's interests. We're going to come ⁶*up with/down to* a menu of travel options linked to the client's profile.

This idea is ⁷*possible/feasible* because students book everything online and they love travelling, but they also want to avoid the problems of independent travel. This ⁸*opportunity/solution* will help them to realise their dreams.

Here are the benefits: in the first ⁹*instance/case*, our idea would mean the client didn't have to organise anything. Secondly, there is the ¹⁰*term-long/long-term* benefit of security. We will plan safe itineraries and we'll always know where the traveller is.

So, basically, ¹¹*that/what* we're proposing is to tailor holidays for the client using our contacts abroad. To ¹²*sum up/the sum up*, we want to provide amazing experiences for future generations, and you can be a part of this by providing start-up funds for our site.

GRAMMAR

4.1 introductory it

Use it as an 'empty' subject to introduce or identify something later in the phrase.

'What's the problem?' 'It's nothing. It's just that I'm worried about work.'

Use it + be to talk about:

- weather.
It's a bit chilly for this time of year.
- time/dates.
It's about half past two.
- situations.
It's a very peaceful place.
- distance.
It's about thirty kilometres away.

Use it before some phrases to describe probability.

It looks as though we're going to lose.

Use it before some phrases to report events.

It would appear that they have left without us.

Use it as an 'empty' object after certain verbs to introduce a clause.

(subject + verb + it + complement + infinitive/clause)

I'd appreciate it if ...

I find it impossible to ...

other common expressions with it

it + be + adjective

It's hard to know if ...

It's easy to believe that ...

it + verb phrase

It always amazes me that ...

fixed expressions

It's no wonder/no coincidence that ...

It's considered rude to ...

It's pointless/no use + -ing ...

4.2 the perfect aspect

The perfect aspect looks back from one time to another and emphasises that an action is completed before another time. In some cases, the exact time may be unimportant or unknown. Sometimes the event is incomplete. It started in the past and is still relevant now.

present perfect

Use the present perfect to look back from now to a time before now.

I've been here since June.

Use the present perfect continuous to focus on the length of time the action takes.

She's been waiting for hours.

past perfect

Use the past perfect to look back from a time in the past to a time before that.

I had to go back because I'd forgotten my passport.

Use the past perfect continuous to focus on the length of time the action takes.

She'd been doing the same job for fifteen years.

future perfect

Use the future perfect to look back from a time in the future to a time before that.

By next week we will have finished the project.

Note: We also use will have + past participle to make predictions about the present or the future.

Don't call the house, she'll have left for work by now.

Use the future perfect continuous to focus on the length of time the action takes.

In 2020, I'll have been living here for fifty years.

perfect infinitive

Use the perfect infinitive after verbs like seem and appear to look back to a previous time period.

He seems to have forgotten us.

It can be used with different time periods.

It's great to have finished my exams.

He said he was sorry to have missed your party.

We hope to have done the work by 5.00.

4.3 expressing hypothetical preferences

Use the following phrases to express hypothetical preferences.

hypothetical preferences
If it was up to me, I'd .../I'd have (+ past participle)	Far better to ... than ...
I'd sooner (+ infinitive)	This would be by far the best option.
I'd just as soon (+ infinitive) ... as	My preference would be to ...
Given the choice, I'd ...	Without a shadow of a doubt, I'd ...
If I ever found myself in this/that situation, I'd ...	No way would I (+ infinitive).

PRACTICE

4.1 A Add it/it's in the correct place(s) in sentences 1–8.

- 1 I can't stand when all does is rain for days on end.

| 10 If it was up to | j) I ever steal anything. |

GRAMMAR

5.1 modal verbs and related phrases

Use modal and semi-modal verbs and phrases to express degrees of obligation or whether or not something is necessary, desirable, permitted or forbidden. Modals are also used to refer to people's abilities.

have to, must, should, ought to, had better for obligation

We ought to set the alarm for an hour earlier.

Had better is stronger than ought to and implies a warning.

We'd better leave now. We don't want to be late.

need for talking about obligation or lack of it

We needed to ask for directions. (If we had done this, we wouldn't be lost.)

Notice the difference between didn't need to and needn't have.

We didn't need to ask for directions. (We had a map.)

We needn't have asked for directions. (We asked for directions, but it was unnecessary as we found a map.)

can, (be) allowed to, (be) supposed to, (be) permitted to for talking about what is permissible/possible

We couldn't leave the premises after 6p.m.

(It wasn't allowed.)

Be supposed to implies that someone expects you to do this (maybe it's a rule). We can use this when we don't obey the rule.

We're supposed to leave the key on the desk when we finish.

(But we may not, we may take it with us.)

other phrases which can be used with modal meaning

(be) allowed, (be) permissible; (be) forbidden, (be) banned;

(be/feel) compelled, (be) compulsory; (be) forced to,

(be) obligatory; have the courage to, dare to

They were forced to wear army uniform.

(Army uniform was compulsory.)

We weren't allowed to contact the teachers.

(It wasn't permissible to contact them.)

5.2 the passive

Use the passive to sound objective and impersonal. The passive is particularly common in formal writing, e.g. academic writing and news reports.

Use the passive to emphasise the important information at the beginning of the sentence.

Penicillin was discovered by Fleming. (The most important point is the invention of penicillin.)

Use the passive if who performs the action is unknown or unimportant. The emphasis is on the action itself.

The museum was built in the seventeenth century.

(We aren't interested in who built it.)

Use the passive to show that we are not certain.

It is believed that this ancient society used aspirin.

(There is no proof. It's just a theory.)

Use the passive to distance ourselves from a statement.

It's said that it's unlucky to walk under a ladder.

(The speaker might not believe this.)

The passive is often used in formal English to describe rules, processes or procedures.

Membership cards must be shown at the door before entry.

It is common to use the passive with an infinitive or with to have + past participle.

She was thought to be the best swimmer in the city.

He is known to have been present during the crimes.

We can use a causative form with a passive meaning.

The form is have/get + object + past participle.

We had the walls painted blue.

He had his laptop upgraded.

spoken grammar

Get is more informal than have.

A spoken form of the causative have is common in the USA.

I had the mechanic fix my car.

5.3 making a point

making a point	clarifying a point	challenging a point
There are several reasons why I think that ...	What I'm basically saying is ...	Do you think that's always the case?
The reason (why) I say that is ...	The point I'm trying to make is that ...	Can you be sure about that?
The facts suggest .../The evidence shows ...	Actually, .../In fact, ...	Is there any way/evidence to prove that?
After all, ...	Let me put it this way ...	But that's not the point.
The point is ...	I think you'll find that ...	I don't see how you can say that.
If you think about it, ...		But that doesn't take account of the fact that ...

PRACTICE

5.1 A Complete the second sentence so it has a similar meaning to the first. Use the correct form of the word in brackets.

- 1 We couldn't bring our own food to school. (allow)
We weren't _____.
- 2 I wish I hadn't told him that I cheated in the exam. (should)
I _____.

- 5 I didn't have the courage to tell them the truth. (dare)
I didn't _____.
- 6 They aren't allowed to have their lights on after 10p.m. (supposed) They're _____.

B Find and correct the mistakes in sentences 1–8. There is one mistake in each sentence.

- 1 You didn't need rush. There's another five minutes before the film starts.
- 2 We'd better to leave plenty of time to get to the airport in case of heavy traffic.
- 3 You didn't have got to buy a present. That's very kind of you.
- 4 You should don't drive a car if you're tired.
- 5 We didn't had to stop at all on the way.
- 6 They were supposed deliver the furniture today.
- 7 You ought to trying this programme – it's very good.
- 8 You shouldn't to talk to people like that. It's rude.

5.2 A Complete the second sentence so it has a similar meaning to the first. Use the passive or causative and the word in brackets.

- 1 Police are investigating the case. (being)
The _____.
- 2 The university lets you borrow a car for official business. (allowed)
You _____.
- 3 They are delivering Mike's washing machine today. (having) Mike _____.

She _____.
- 7 Someone is checking in our luggage right now. (being)
Our _____.
- 8 The researchers have only tested the product on volunteers. (been)
The _____.

B Why might sentences 1–8 be better in the passive? Which might be formal written English?

C Rewrite the underlined phrases in the passive. Omit the 'doer' of the action.

¹They say that the world's greatest keepers of secrets are spies. While this may be true, there is another secret connected to spies that is less well known. They are a huge problem for their employers. Why? Like most workers, spies retire when they get old. However, unlike most workers, spies retain numerous high-level secrets. ²They need to keep these secrets even after the spies retire. So ³what can the authorities do with retired ex-spies? In the 1960s, ⁴they considered brainwashing. But ⁵they discovered that brainwashing didn't work. They also tried hypnosis, in the hope that ⁶they could erase certain memories from the mind. But it turned out to be impossible to erase some memories and not others, e.g. the names of your family members and your street address. So what did they do in the end? We don't know, of course. It's a secret.

- | | |
|---------|---------|
| 1 _____ | 4 _____ |
| 2 _____ | 5 _____ |
| 3 _____ | 6 _____ |

5.3 A Put the underlined words in the correct order to complete the conversations.

- A: ¹saying I'm is what we need to be very careful who we give the information to. ²suggest facts the that the more people who know about the idea, the riskier the situation.
- B: I guess so. But we need to tell people about the product before we launch to get people excited about it.
- A: That's true, but ³the is point if the competition find out about it, they will probably steal the idea.
- B: ⁴think always you is that case the do?
- A: Yes. ⁵all after, what have they got to lose?

- C: ⁶are several think reasons there why I this is the right thing to do and ⁷about think it if you, we don't have any other options.
- D: ⁸say you don't can how see I that. I just don't think the idea will work in practice.
- C: Well, ⁹way put this me it let, we don't have any more time to consider options. We need to decide.
- D: I know there are time pressures, but ¹⁰that trying make is I'm point to the we need to think about the costs as well.

GRAMMAR

6.1 future forms

be going to Use be going to + infinitive to:

- express personal intention. The action has been considered in advance and some plans have already been made.

We're going to stay with John next summer.

- make a prediction based on present evidence.

I think she's going to fall! (She is off balance.)

will Use will to:

- make predictions. We'll win the Cup this year.
- talk about future facts. He'll start school next year.

We often use will with adverbs of probability.

I'll probably see you tomorrow.

We also use will for decisions made at the moment of speaking. I think I'll have a nap.

present continuous

Use the present continuous to talk about a pre-arranged action in the future. Be going to is for intentions, while the present continuous is for planned events or arrangements for a specific time.

I'm visiting Sheila on Sunday.

present simple

Use the present simple to talk about fixed future events in timetables or programmes.

My train arrives at 5.00.

future continuous

Use the future continuous to:

- talk about an action that will be in progress at some time in the future.

This time next week I'll be lying on a beach.

- make a deduction about the future based on normal practice.

I expect the Smiths will be having their annual party soon.

- talk about something that will happen as part of the normal course of events, not because you planned it.

I'll be seeing Jackie at college, so I'll give her the note.

future perfect and future perfect continuous

Use the future perfect to talk about a future event which will be finished at a certain point in the future. Use the future perfect continuous to talk about the length of an action as seen from a moment in the future.

The builders will have finished our house by January.

By 2018, I'll have been studying French for twenty years.

modal verbs

Could, might and may are also used to make predictions. They have similar meanings, but may is more formal.

be to

Use be to + infinitive to describe official plans and arrangements.

The company is to provide insurance for all of its workers.

be due to

Use be due to + infinitive to describe a formal arrangement.

The plane is due to land at 6.00.

6.2 concession clauses

Use concession clauses to give information that contrasts with the information in the main clause. The clauses can be introduced with conjunctions such as although, however, even though, etc.

Although he was a good linguist, he took five years to learn Mandarin.

We can also use while and whilst (formal) to replace although.

While/Whilst I'd like to be with you, I have to attend a meeting.

Use much as to replace although with verbs of liking and hating to talk about strong feelings.

Much as we appreciate your efforts, sadly we won't be able to use the report.

Use adjective/adverb + as/though + subject + verb clause for emphatic sentences.

Hard as we tried, we failed to get hold of anybody.

Difficult though it was, we eventually secured the premises.

Use however/whatever/wherever, etc. to express the idea of 'no matter what/who/where', etc.

Whatever he says, I'm going anyway.

Use in spite of and despite + noun phrase/-ing form to express contrast.

In spite of the fact that we had no ID on us, the porter let us in.

Despite feeling awful, we stayed until the end.

Note: Sentences using in spite of/despite are not concession clauses, as the linker is not followed by a verb clause, but is followed by a noun/-ing form.

We can use adverbs and adverbial phrases to introduce contrast.

We were exhausted but we carried on all the same.

We were exhausted. Nevertheless, we carried on.

6.3 describing cause and effect

Cause

informal and neutral	formal
It all started ...	It has its origins/roots in ...
It originated in/from ...	It can be traced back/attributed to ...
It's because of ...	It stems from ...

Effect

informal and neutral	formal
It led to ...	It resulted in ...
It has caused ...	It gave rise to ...
Because of this, ...	It brought about ...

PRACTICE

- I understand how difficult the situation is. I'm afraid I can't help. (Whilst)

- He's very charming. I wouldn't trust him at all. (... However, ...)

- 6.3 A Underline the correct alternatives.

The Second World War gave ¹rights/arise/rise to the term 'The First World War'. Impossible? No. It's all because of 'retronymy'. A 'retronym' is a word invented for an object/concept whose original name has gone out of date. Retronyms are invented because new developments change the way we perceive the world. The term 'The First World War' can be traced ²up/on/back to 1939. Before that date, nobody knew there would be a World War II, and World War I had, until then, been called 'The Great War'. Another example is the guitar. All guitars used to be acoustic.

The invention of the electric guitar ³caused/led/moved to the term 'acoustic guitar'. Similarly, nobody said 'black and white TV' before the invention of colour TV. ⁴developed/resulted/traced in the need for the term. Many retronyms ⁵affect/stem/rise from modern technology. The invention of laptops brought ⁶with/for/about the term 'desktop computer' and the proliferation of mobile phones resulted ⁷on/in/to the word 'landline'. The word 'retronym' is ⁸attributed/given/caused to Frank Mankiewicz, an American journalist.

GRAMMAR

7.1 cleft sentences

Cleft means 'divided'. In cleft sentences, one sentence is divided into two parts, each with its own verb. This adds emphasis to part of the sentence.

John loves Mary. (one verb)

It's Mary that John loves. (two verbs, emphasises Mary)

The following structures are commonly used to begin cleft sentences.

It + ...	What + ...
It was a ... who ...	What I like about ... is
It was in ... that ...	What they didn't realise was ...
other structures
The person who ...	The reason why ... is/was ...
The place that ...	The only thing that ... is/was ...
The thing that ... is/was ...	All that I would ... is/was ...
Something that ... is/was ...

Note: We use the singular form after It + ... and What + ... sentences.

It was my parents I had to thank for this. NOT ~~It were my parents ...~~

What is really annoying are the arguments.

NOT ~~What are really annoying ...~~

We can use Wh - words with cleft sentences. To emphasise the action, we use a form of do.

Jane invested well. → What Jane did was invest well.

emphasising with what, all and it

To emphasise an action or series of actions, we can use sentences beginning with What.

He dropped the vase. → What happened was (that) he dropped the vase.

We can use Wh- clauses as introductory phrases.

What I would like to know is where the money went.

We can use all instead of what.

All I'd like to say is that the company appreciates your work.

Use It + be + that/who to emphasise parts of a sentence.

Karin left her bag on the train. → It was Karin who left her bag on the train. (Karin – not Fatima)

It was her bag that Karin left on the train. (not her umbrella)

It's because you have such a good sense of humour that I enjoy your company. (emphasising reason)

It was only yesterday that I discovered the documents were missing. (emphasising time)

It was in Paris that they first met. (emphasising place)

7.2 participle clauses

Participle clauses are used to make our writing and speaking more economical, efficient and, sometimes, more elegant. They can also be used to add information about reason, condition and result.

past participles

Past participle clauses have a passive meaning. Use past participles to add extra information. They sometimes serve the same purpose as adjectives (describing a noun).

Loved by everyone, Don was a wonderful character.

(describes Don)

Exhausted from her efforts, she struggled on. (describes 'she') present participles

Present participle clauses have an active meaning. Use present participles (-ing form):

- as reduced relative clauses. Here the present participle serves the same purpose as an adjective.

The woman who is smiling in the photo is my grandmother. →

The woman smiling in the photo is my grandmother.

I smelt the bread that was burning. → I smelt the burning bread.

- as adverbial clauses (like adverbs): expressing manner, conditions, cause, result, etc. This is especially common in formal or literary texts. To make the negative, use not before the present participle.

Moving silently, the lion follows its prey.

Lying face down in the sand, he looked like some strange sea beast.

Not being qualified, she couldn't work there.

There was a fire, resulting in serious damage.

Having + past participle

Having + past participle is used:

- to show the cause of a second action.
Having won every competition, he decided to retire.
- to show a sequence of actions.
Having made breakfast, she sat down and read the paper.

7.3 exchanging opinions agreeing

That's absolutely right.

I couldn't agree more.

Absolutely! I'm with you 100 percent on that.

agreeing in part

I agree with you up to a point.

I suppose you've got a point, but ...

questioning someone's opinion

Oh come on, you must be joking. Surely you don't think that ...

That goes against my better judgement because ...

How can you say that? Where's the logic in that?

You can't honestly think that ...

strongly disagreeing

It just doesn't make sense to me. Oh that's ridiculous!

PRACTICE

7.1 A Complete the second sentence so it has a similar meaning to the first. Use the word in brackets.

- 1 He lost his job because he kept breaking the rules. (reason)
The _____ kept breaking the rules.

b) All participants _____ a badge will receive a free meal.
- 5 a) In my opinion, it's one of the best books ever _____.
b) _____ on his blog today, Mick Davies says the economic crisis is over.

B Find and correct five mistakes in the text.

Arming with nothing but a donated caravan, a solar laptop and toothpaste made from crushed cuttlefish bones, Mark Boyle lives without cash. Having graduate in economics, he was a food company manager. One afternoon while to discuss the world's problems with a friend, he decided to act on Gandhi's words: 'Be the change you want to see in the world.' Giving a caravan by a stranger, he moved out of his home. A friend donated a bike and he got himself a stove and began his new life. He now lives off the land, cycles everywhere and writes a blog. Is it true freedom? Asking what he misses about his old life, he says stress, traffic, bank statements and utility bills. He's joking.

7.3 A Complete the conversations with the words in the box.

honestly suppose where more sense 100 percent

- 1 A: The sales department have asked us to talk through the material with them.

GRAMMAR

8.1 future in the past

Sometimes when we're talking about the past, we want to mention something that was in the future at that time. To do this, use future structures but make the verb forms past, e.g.

is going to → was going to

I was going to help you, but I didn't have time.

present continuous → past continuous

They were hoping to have a picnic, but it rained all weekend.

will → *would

*I arrived in Recife, where I would spend ten years of my life.

*This is a different use from would for repeated actions in the past. Compare:

At sixteen, I got a job at Limo Company, where I would later become CEO.

(future in the past)

For years, I would go running at 5.00a.m. every morning.

(repeated actions in the past)

We can also use was/were to + infinitive and was/were to have + past participle. These are quite literary and more commonly found in writing than speech. The expression was to have is usually used when the plan did not become a reality.

They told me I was to give a speech the following day.

I was to have taken a job with my father's company, but it went bankrupt.

other expressions to talk about the future in the past

To describe a plan that did not become reality, use:

- was/were supposed to.*

I was supposed to go to Nick's house, but my car broke down.

- meant to.*

I meant to mention the cost of tickets, but I forgot. (active)

We were meant to check in an hour ago! (passive)

For events that very nearly happened, use:

- was/were on the verge of* + gerund.

She was on the verge of giving up her dream when she received a letter from an agent.

- was/were on the point of* + gerund.

They were on the point of leaving when the boss arrived.

- was/were about to* + infinitive.

Hi! I was about to text you!

8.2 ellipsis and substitution

ellipsis

Sometimes words which we might expect to be present from a grammatical point of view are left out because we can understand the meaning from the context (the preceding or following text). Often the words which are left out are auxiliary verbs, modal verbs or subjects.

She immediately got up and (she) left the room.
(subject)

Should we wait for a while or (should we) phone him straightaway? (modal verb)

They have finished lunch and (they have) gone for a coffee. (subject + auxiliary verb)

It is possible to leave out repeated verb phrases or adjectives and just repeat the auxiliary or modal verb.

Marisa has never tried Asian cooking, but I have (tried Asian cooking).

Harry always thinks he's right about things, but he isn't (always right about things).

I thought we'd be able to finish this before Monday, but we can't (finish this before Monday).

spoken grammar

Ellipsis is very common in spoken English as the situational context is usually very clear between the speakers.

Didn't know you were going. (I didn't know ...)

Sounds good to me. (That/What you've just suggested sounds good.)

This means that some common phrases are often shortened.

Did you have a nice weekend? → Nice weekend?

I suppose so. → Suppose so. It's nice to meet you. → Nice to meet you.

substitution

Instead of repeating a word/phrase, they are sometimes replaced with a substitute word/phrase. Determiners (many, a little, some, etc.), so, do and not are all used for this.

A: Do you know a lot of the people coming tonight?

B: Not many.

A: What do you think of this dress?

B: Actually, I prefer the other one.

A: Do you think they'll be here soon?

B: I expect so. (so = them to be here soon)

A: Who ate all the chocolate biscuits – you?

B: No, Max did. (did = ate all the chocolate biscuits)

A: Will you have to pay a fine?

B: I hope not. (not = I won't have to pay a fine)

8.3 discussing ideas

acknowledging an idea

Right. OK. That's a good idea. Sure. I know what you mean.
Definitely. That's interesting. I never thought of that.
That makes (perfect) sense. Yes, it's true/That's true.
Exactly. I'm with you there.

introducing an alternative

Having said that, ...
But looking at it another way/But I'm looking at ...
But on the other hand Yes and no. Mind you, ...
But you could argue that Alternatively, ...

 A: Mine too.
 C: ⁷that said having, maybe they can write about their parties for homework.
 B: Nice idea!

GRAMMAR

9.1 tenses for unreal situations

After some expressions, we use past tenses to describe unreal or imaginary situations. These ideas may refer to the past, present or future.

it's time

Use it's time + past simple to say that something is not happening but it should be.

It's time you went home.

We can also use it's high time + past simple or it's about time + past simple. These are more emphatic than it's time.

It's high time she left her boyfriend!

It's about time you found a job!

what if/suppose/supposing

Use what if/suppose/supposing + past simple to ask about imaginary situations and their consequences in the present or future. These are similar to second conditional questions.

What if you missed the plane?

Suppose you got injured, what would the coach say?

Supposing they gave you the prize, how would you feel?

We can also use these expressions with the past perfect. This is similar to the third conditional.

What if you'd failed your exam last week, what would you have done?

would rather/would sooner

Use would rather/would sooner + past simple to describe preferences.

I'd rather you didn't play football inside.

I'd sooner they gave me a cheque than a watch when I retire.

If the person expressing the preference is also the subject of the preference, use the infinitive (not the past tense).

I'd rather go to Madagascar than Hawaii.

I'd sooner eat bread than cake.

as if/as though

Use as if/as though + past simple to say that appearance is different from reality.

She treats me as if I had a disease.

(The speaker knows he doesn't have a disease.)

They use this place as though it was a playground.

(It isn't a playground.)

Use the present simple/present perfect with these expressions when the situation may be true.

He acts as if he knows what he's doing.

(Maybe he knows what he's doing.)

You look as though you haven't slept for days.

(Maybe she hasn't slept for days.)

9.2 adverbials

Adverbs or adverbial phrases give us information or detail about how, when, why, how often, where, etc., something happens. They can be single words or groups of words.

adverbials of manner

These describe how something happens.

He left the room quietly. She spoke in a soft voice.

adverbials of time

These describe when something happened.

In 2008, the government was overthrown.

We saw him yesterday.

adverbials of frequency

These describe how often something happened.

We must have gone there pretty much every day for ten years.

I often blog about this topic.

adverbials of probability

These describe how probable or improbable something is.

He is right, without a doubt. She is undoubtedly right.

adverbials of purpose

These describe the reason behind/for an action.

They play chess to work on their strategic thinking skills.

She apologised for being so insensitive.

comment adverbials

These describe someone's viewpoint.

The clothes in that shop are ridiculously expensive.

For more examples, see page 111.

Adverbs and adverbial phrases usually go at the end of a sentence in the following order: how, where, when.

Adverbials of purpose generally come last.

They wandered aimlessly (how) around the park (where) at the end of the concert (when) in search of the keys (purpose).

Some adverbials can go at the start of the sentence for emphasis.

On the radio, they played his music all day long.

Adverbs/Adverbials of frequency usually go before the main verb (or after the verb to be/auxiliary verb).

Our paths have frequently crossed.

9.3 ranting/raving

raving

It was the most wonderful/amazing/awesome ...

It was absolutely fantastic/incredible. It's really the best (show) ever.

There's (absolutely) nothing better than ...

(It was) one of the most spectacular (sunsets) I've ever seen.

I couldn't believe my luck when ... It was idyllic. It's an all-time classic.

ranting

If there's one thing I can't stand, it's ...

It drives me up the wall.

It was absolutely horrendous.

It was a total waste of money.

It's not my style/kind of thing/cup of tea at all.

PRACTICE

9.1 A Cross out the incorrect alternative.

- 1 I'd prefer/sooner/rather we went somewhere picturesque than stay here.
- 2 He scores goals as if/as were/as though it was the easiest thing in the world.
- 3 What if/Suppose/How about that half-baked idea became a reality?
- 4 It's the/high/about time she started living up to her name.
- 5 She'd rather/want that/sooner they came up with some ideas than just criticise.
- 6 Supposing/Rather/Suppose your career went downhill, what would you do?
- 7 Isn't it one time/time/about time you took her feelings into consideration, too?
- 8 In meetings, I'm treated as if/as though/as I was an idiot.

B Rewrite the sentences using the words in brackets and the past simple.

- 1 You really should speak to your mother. (high time)

- 2 What would happen if I pressed this button? (Suppose)

- 3 The way they treat that girl, you'd think she was a princess. (as though)

- 4 Given the choice, I would learn Chinese instead of German. (sooner)

- 5 Imagine a volcanic eruption in a densely populated area. (What if)

- 6 She ought to stop smoking now. (about time)

- 7 Anyone would think they own the place, the way they behave. (as if)

- 8 I don't want you to go there. (rather)

9.2 A Choose the correct option, a), b) or c), to complete the text.

B: No, the food and the service were terrible. It was total waste of money. |

GRAMMAR

10.1 inversion

Inversion is when we put an auxiliary verb before the subject of a clause.

I never saw such a wonderful sight again.

auxiliary + subject + clause

Never again did I see such a wonderful sight.

Inversion is common in written formal texts, but it is also used in informal spoken English to add dramatic effect or emphasis.

No way would I ever go on a trip like that! (There is no way/chance that I would ever go on a trip like that.)

Not in a million years would I agree to cross Africa on a motorbike!

negative adverbials

In formal English, it is common to use inversion after negative adverbial expressions and restrictive words such as only, never, hardly and little.

At no time did they stop to think about the consequences.*

Not until the ambulance arrived did we realise how serious it was.*

Hardly had the meeting begun when they started to argue.*

Never before/Rarely/Seldom had I seen such landscapes.*

Little did they realise how stupid they had been.*

No sooner had we heard that prices were increasing than we accepted the deal.*

No longer will we accept these poor conditions.*

Only then did they see what a fantastic chance they'd been offered.*

Only now that I am pregnant has he finally agreed to stop riding his motorbike.*

Not only did they leave their families for more than two months, but they also travelled to some of the most dangerous places on the planet.*

Under no circumstances/On no account should you leave the bike unattended.*

Scarcely had they left the room when people started talking about them.*

conditional clauses

Inversion can be used with conditional sentences to make them sound more formal.

If we had known how much it was going to cost, we would never have chosen it.*

Had we known how much it was going to cost, we would never have chosen it.*

If you were to have approached from the other direction, you might have seen the signs.*

Were you to have approached from the other direction, you might have seen the signs.*

10.2 comparative structures

modifiers

	big difference	small difference
formal	considerably, infinitely, decidedly, significantly, nothing like, nowhere near	marginally neutral	much, far, a lot, a good deal	slightly, a bit, barely any informal	miles, way, loads

Their technology was considerably more advanced than ours.

We're way better than you at football! (spoken English) modifiers with as + as

We also use modifiers to give more detail about as + adjective + as statements.

To show a big difference, use nothing like, or nowhere near.

He's nothing like as obstinate as his brother.

She's nowhere near as good as me at chess.

To show a small difference use almost or nearly.

He's almost as neurotic as me.

To emphasise no difference use just or every bit.

I'm just as clever as you.

We're every bit as good as our competitors.

double comparatives

Use double comparatives with the to say that one situation leads to another.

The bigger the lie, the more people believe it.*

The more you read, the more you'll learn.*

progressive comparatives

Use the progressive comparative form to say something is escalating. Use the comparative word twice (separated by and) to emphasise the adjective.

House prices are getting lower and lower.

10.3 negotiating naming your objectives

We want to sort this out as soon as possible.
By the end of the day, we want to resolve this.

exploring positions

What do you have in mind? Can you go into more detail?

making conditional offers

If you do ... for me, I'll do ... for you.
What if we supported your idea?

refusing an offer

That would be difficult for me because of ...
I'm not sure I can do that because ...

accepting an offer

Good. That sounds acceptable to me. Great. We've got a deal.

following up the deal

Let me know if you have any queries.
Get in touch if anything needs clarifying.

- 7 The closer you come, _____ more dangerous it'll be.
- 8 I'm nowhere _____ as ambitious as my brother.

B Put the words in bold in the correct order to complete the text.

Four of the Baldwin brothers, Alec, Daniel, William and Stephen are actors. While they are ¹as like famous nothing as some acting families such as the Redgrave dynasty, their story is ²interesting bit as every. When they were young, the boys were always getting into trouble. This continued into adulthood! The oldest of them, Alec, is ³the by talented far most, and he landed acting roles in movies like Beetlejuice and The Hunt for Red October. Daniel, the second brother, followed suit, starring in Hawaii Five-O on TV. His acting career looked set to flourish, but his personal problems ⁴worse got worse and and he ended up getting arrested after some strange behaviour in a hotel. Brother number three, Billy, ⁵talented near as as nowhere Alec, was initially a New York model, but ⁶than years little in more two became a Hollywood actor, appearing in Born on the Fourth of July and Flatliners. The fourth brother, Stephen, is ⁷a closer deal good to Alec in terms of acting talent, and he is best known for his performance in The Usual Suspects. While they all followed the same career path, the brothers are ⁸more famous considerably for their personal lives than their acting. They still get into fights with one another and regularly appear in the tabloids.

Lesson 1.3

7 A Work in pairs. Describe and discuss the portraits below. Use the following questions to help you.

- What can you say about the person's job or character from the picture?
- How do you think he/she is feeling? Why do you think this might be?

Lesson 2.1

Student B

9 A Read the paragraph below and underline four metaphors related to time and money. Match them with meanings 1–4.

'Stuck in a stressful job, I was living on borrowed time. I ate badly and was constantly sick. Whenever I tried to relax, I found myself thinking about work. Even at weekends, I felt as if my boss was tapping me on the shoulder, saying, "You're wasting precious time!" One Sunday, I visited my grandfather. I said, "I know I should put aside some time for myself, but I just can't afford to spend time relaxing. I'll lose my job." He said, "No. You can't afford not to. If you go on like this, you'll lose your mind. Which is worse?"'

- 1 keep time free
- 2 using time badly (not doing anything with your time)
- 3 don't have time to do something
- 4 survive after you would expect to be dead

B Read your paragraph to your partner twice. Which metaphors did he/she notice? Explain the meaning of the four metaphors to your partner.

Lesson 2.3

7 C Read the text to find out what really happened. Do you think the bosses did the right thing?

Case 1 The boss organised a day of training in the new management system for all assistants. The event was held in a smart hotel, with a gourmet dinner and free drinks afterwards. The CEO explained to all assistants the importance of the new system and how it would make everyone's lives easier eventually.

Case 2 The boss collected all of the negative comments online and printed them out. Then she had a meeting with the employee, inviting him to air his complaints and suggest solutions. The man was so embarrassed and surprised that his boss took his complaints seriously and really listened (she even made a procedural change suggested by him) that he stopped posting criticism and abandoned his blog.

Case 3 The boss wrote a memo to all employees, saying exactly what was and was not allowed to be charged as expenses. Without naming the woman, he included many of the items that she had been charging the company for (clothes, tickets to the theatre, etc.). He knew the employee would recognise that she had been caught. The boss also explained that any corporate entertaining needed to be cleared with him before it happened.

9 A This is how the story continued.

It was a small wooden box, which her mother had kept hidden in the back of her wardrobe. Madge lifted the lid gently and peered inside. The moment she saw them, she recognised his handwriting. At the bottom of the box, lying unopened after all those years, were dozens of letters from the man she had wanted to marry.

Lesson 6.2

8 A Student B

The English Village

At the Happy English Village in Taoyuan, Taiwan, children arrive at the end of their normal school day to spend time speaking English and having fun. The village has themed rooms (a shop, restaurant, airport, coffee shop, cookery room and dance studio). Children work in groups of twelve with volunteer foreign teachers.

Lesson 10.3

8 B Read your role. Think about your answers to questions 1–3 below.

Group A

You are the school administrators.

- Your budget is €800 (for renting films, buying food and paying staff for overtime).
- You think students should pay €5 per evening (two films).
- You want to serve snacks only.
- You think the festival should last three days.
- You think the school administrators should choose the films because you need to make sure they are appropriate.
- You want the student Film Festival Committee to develop a web page about the festival to go on the school's website. You think this will attract students to the school.
- You want the festival to take place next term so there is time to arrange it properly.

- 1 What is your main objective in this negotiation?
- 2 What do you think the other team's objective is?
- 3 What are your other objectives? Which of these are quite important? Which are not so important?

Lesson 5.2

1 B Read the myths below and answer the questions.

- 1 What is the myth?
- 2 Which myths were disproved by experiments?
- 3 What is the truth about the myth?

5 Pick up your food within five seconds of dropping it and it'll be safe to eat

Microbiologists at Clemson University, South Carolina, tested this. They found that bacteria, like salmonella, can survive for weeks on carpet, wood and tiles, and contaminates food within seconds of contact.

6 Driving is safe with a hands-free mobile

This would seem to be intuitively true. Surely using a hands-free mobile is just like having a conversation with someone in the car? Research tells a different story. It's even worse for your concentration than alcohol, according to the Transport Research Laboratory. They tested drivers with or without alcohol, as well as with mobiles and hands-free mobiles. Afterwards, the drivers answered the experimenter's questions. Driving performance under the influence of alcohol was significantly worse than normal driving, yet better than driving with a phone – even one with a hands-free kit.

7 Goldfish have short memories

A fifteen-year-old schoolboy has debunked this myth. Rory Stokes placed a piece of Lego (a small, plastic, coloured block) in the water of a fish tank at feeding time. Thirty seconds after placing it, he sprinkled food around it, so that the fish would start to associate it with eating. At the beginning of Stokes' experiment, it took the fish over a minute to swim over to the Lego. After three weeks, it took under five seconds. In the second part of the experiment, Rory removed the Lego from the feeding process and then reintroduced it after six days. It took the fish just 4.4 seconds to associate it with food again.

8 Owls have the ability to rotate their heads through 360 degrees

A bit of simple science allows us to disprove this myth. An owl's neck has fourteen vertebrae, which is twice as many as humans. Consequently, an owl can turn its head up to 270 degrees. In other words, they could start by facing 12 o'clock and turn their heads in a clockwise direction until facing roughly 9 o'clock. – impressive, but not 360 degrees.

Lesson 5.2

5 A You are going to debunk a myth of your choice. It can be about a person, a profession, a country or a belief. Here are three ideas. Complete the title and notes on page 60.

1 We only use ten percent of our brains

This myth is often cited by people who want us to believe that we can learn to master paranormal activities such as telepathy. Brain imaging techniques, e.g. PET scans, disprove this myth. They clearly show us using the whole brain on a daily basis.

2 Sushi means raw fish

It does not mean raw fish. The name refers to the rice used in the dish. Sushi is rice made with rice vinegar, salt and sugar dressing. Traditionally, it's topped with fish, fish eggs, or a variety of vegetables.

3 Bulls are angered by the colour red

Bulls do not get angry because of the colour red. Professional matadors traditionally use a red cape, but it wouldn't make any difference if the cape was a different colour because cattle are colour-blind. It is the movement of the cape that angers the bull, not the colour.

Lesson 7.1

- 1 D Read part two of the story and check your answers to Exercise 1C on page 80.

An investigation was immediately launched into his disappearance. Five days later, John Darwin was arrested on suspicion of fraud and deception. A photograph, published in a tabloid newspaper, revealed that Mr and Mrs Darwin had been seen together in Panama and had bought a house there together.

It turned out that Mr Darwin had planned the whole disappearance from the beginning after finding himself in financial difficulty. On the day of the 'disappearance', Mr Darwin had in fact pushed his kayak out to sea and later returned home to his wife. What he did then was spend the next few years hiding inside the house and rarely leaving. When visitors came, Mr Darwin supposedly hid in the neighbouring house, escaping through a hole he had made in the wall of an upstairs bedroom. He changed his appearance, spent a lot of time on the internet and applied for a passport under a false name.

Mr and Mrs Darwin travelled to Greece and then to Panama, looking for opportunities to start a new life together, while Mrs Darwin kept up the pretence that her husband was dead to her friends, colleagues and two sons. When Mrs Darwin received the life insurance money taken out in her husband's name, Mr Darwin moved to Panama, where he bought an apartment and waited for his wife to join him. When she finally managed to emigrate, they bought a £200,000 tropical estate and planned to start a hotel business selling canoe holidays. John Darwin finally returned to the UK, claiming that he was missing his sons and was fed up with living the deception.

In the meantime, in the UK, several people had become suspicious. It was a colleague of Anne Darwin's who eventually put the pieces of the puzzle together. She had overheard a conversation which Anne Darwin had had with her husband on the telephone before leaving for Panama. She then typed the names 'Anne+John+Darwin+Panama' into Google images and found the photograph, which she later sent to the media and to the police.

John and Anne Darwin were both sentenced and served time in prison for fraud and deception. Their ill-gained assets (money and property) were taken from them and their sons refused to talk to either of them, claiming that they had been victims of the scam and they no longer wished to have any contact with their parents.

John and Anne Darwin were both released from prison, and later divorced. It is thought that Anne felt betrayed by her husband, and has since tried to rebuild her life in secret, without him.

Lesson 4.4

- 7 Student B: read the notes about a famous forger.

WHO: Tom Keating, art restorer and painter (1917–1984)

WHAT: Painted technically brilliant forgeries. Used a London art dealer to sell the works in UK auction houses in the late 1950s and 1960s.

WHY: Art critics didn't appreciate his work. He hated the system – it enriched art dealers and left painters poor.

HOW HE WAS CAUGHT: In the 1970s, a set of works 'by Samuel Palmer' aroused suspicion. Auctioneers were uncertain of the paintings' provenance. Keating admitted he'd forged them. He claimed to have made over 2000 forgeries by 100 painters.

Lesson 10.3

- 8 B Read your role. Think about your answers to questions 1–3 below.

Group B

You are the student Film Festival Committee.

- You think the event will cost €1500 (for renting films and buying food).
- You think students should pay €10 and be allowed to attend all films (two per day).
- You want to serve international food to match the films (e.g. during a Brazilian film, you will serve Brazilian food).
- You think the festival should last five days (Monday–Friday).
- You think the student Film Festival Committee should choose the films because you know what students like.
- You want to create a promotional leaflet to hand out to all students.
- You want the festival to take place this term because everyone is enthusiastic about it.

- 1 What is your main objective in this negotiation?
- 2 What do you think the other team's objective is?
- 3 What are your other objectives? Which of these are quite important? Which are not so important?

Lesson 3.5

4 B

- 1 lead in a pencil
- 2 a chick in an egg
- 3 Are you asleep?
- 4 a hole

Lesson 6.2

8 A Student C

Mobile English

With the Millee Language Programme, children in rural areas in India are learning English on their mobile phones. In remote villages, good English teachers are hard to come by, but mobile phones are reasonably cheap. The children learn vocabulary by playing games on their phones. They can then take the phones wherever they go, so that even the fields where they work can become a classroom.

Lesson 8.1

9 A When would you use the proverbs below? Match proverbs 7–12 with situations g)–l). Do you have equivalents in your language?

- 7 There's no place like home.
- 8 Nothing ventured, nothing gained.
- 9 Don't judge a book by its cover.
- 10 Actions speak louder than words.
- 11 Practice makes perfect.
- 12 Absence makes the heart grow fonder.
- g) I love to travel but I feel happier when I return.
- h) I haven't seen Miroslav for six months and I really miss him!
- i) He looks ordinary but actually, he's a genius!
- j) She's a great tennis player because she works at it six hours a day.
- k) He doesn't talk much but he gets the job done.
- l) If you don't take any risks, you'll never know what you can achieve.

Lesson 8.2

7 A Student B: listen to Student A's sentences and choose the correct responses a)–e).

- a) It's a Cajun dish with shrimps. Try some!
- b) Yes, I have. I went there to see my brother who was living in Beijing.
- c) Neither do I. Why don't you let Johnnie have a look? He's good with technology.
- d) Do you? I can't stand them.
- e) I think so. They've just got one more thing to do.

B Look at your sentences. Delete any words you can leave out due to ellipsis. Read your sentences to Student A. Student A will choose a response.

- 1 Have you been in the job for long?
- 2 Are you sure she's coming today?
- 3 Someone called you earlier and left a message.
- 4 Do you want a tea or coffee?
- 5 Did you see the film last night?

Lesson 4.4

Tom Keating: Part 2

WHAT HAPPENED NEXT: Keating admitted his guilt and went to court. The trial stopped as Keating was ill, and he avoided a prison sentence.

HOW GUILT WAS PROVED: Keating left 'time bombs' (evidence) in the paintings. For example, he wrote in white paint on the canvas before painting the picture, so the writing could be detected under x-ray. He sometimes added anachronisms to paintings or put a layer of glycerine under the paint; when the painting was cleaned, the cleaning chemicals interacted with the glycerine to destroy the work.

CONSEQUENCES: Keating later recovered and hosted a TV programme, Tom Keating on Painters. In the programme he revealed the techniques of the old masters like Rembrandt and van Gogh.

VALUE OF WORK: After Keating's death in 1984, the value of his work rose to £10,000–12,000.

Lesson 6.4

8 Group B

Growth of cloning. Cloning is already with us, but it isn't just for rich folks who want clones of their favourite pets. Cloning will provide one solution as we seek to protect endangered animals from extinction. To ensure that these animals never die out, we will develop special labs to preserve species.

Hi-tech fitness clothing. Exercise clothing will contain monitors that give you real-time information about your state of health. This information will include your heart rate, the number of steps you take, your running speed, and how much liquid you are losing when you sweat. The clothes will automatically transfer data to your other exercise gear of the same brand.

Smart virtual personal assistants. A smart app will monitor your email, calendar and texting behaviour and make suggestions. So if you are planning to meet a friend, the app geolocates you both and provides a display of cafés and restaurants in the area and even helps you reserve a table.

Lesson 9.1

- 9 A You are an art dealer. Read about your clients and look at the sculptures below. Decide which sculpture to recommend to each company.
- 1 Icontech.biz is an internet start-up run by twenty-one-year-old twins. There is no one over thirty in the company and everyone wears jeans and shorts. The company recently relocated to a stylish one-storey office. The owners want a dramatic sculpture for the roof. It must fit their company motto: Live for Now.
 - 2 Daniels & Stone is a conservative, traditional law firm. The new boss wants a more exciting image for the firm, but doesn't want to offend old clients. He is looking for a sculpture to go outside the main entrance of the building.
 - 3 Green Tuesdays Ltd is a company that sells organic food. It is run by fifteen ex-hippies who live in a multi-coloured bus. In two years, the company has expanded by 180 percent and now has a stunning new office building surrounded by trees and hills. The owners want a striking sculpture to go in reception.

Lesson 10.2

- 7 C Check your answers for Exercise 7B on page 120.
- 1 a scrap (of attention) (n) → a very small amount
 - 2 dazzled (adj) → amazed
 - 3 ascension (n) → rise
 - 4 clamour (n) → continuous loud noise
 - 5 geriatric (adj) → old (person)
 - 6 a beacon (of hope) (n) → a shining light

Lesson 4.4

- 7 Student A: read the notes about a famous forger.

WHO: Han van Meegeren, Dutch painter (1889–1947)

WHAT: Painted forgeries. Studied old masters' techniques, mixed own paints using old formulas, even used badger hair paintbrushes, common in the 17th century.

WHY: Art critics said his work was unoriginal. He rebelled against the system.

HOW HE WAS CAUGHT: In 1945, after World War II, a Vermeer painting was discovered among enemy possessions. It was traced back to van Meegeren. He was charged with treason for selling Dutch property to an enemy official, and faced a possible death penalty. On trial, van Meegeren said he had painted the 'Vermeer' himself.

Lesson 8.2

- 7 A Student A: look at your sentences. Delete any words you can leave out due to ellipsis. Read your sentences to Student B. Student B will choose a response.

- 1 Have you ever been to China?
- 2 I don't know why I can't get this camera to work.
- 3 I love olives.
- 4 Have they nearly finished?
- 5 What's that? It looks wonderful.

B Listen to Student B's sentences and choose the correct responses a)–e).

- a) Yes, she said she'd be at the airport at 2p.m.
- b) No, I wanted to but I fell asleep!
- c) No, I haven't. I've only just started.
- d) Did they? Do you know who it was?
- e) No thanks. I've just had one.

Lesson 4.4

Han van Meegeren: Part 2

WHAT HAPPENED NEXT: The court made him do another forgery while he was in prison. He painted Jesus among the Doctors. The court asked a group of international art experts to study van Meegeren's work.

HOW GUILT WAS PROVED: Experts noticed the chemical Albertol in the paint. Albertol – only produced in 20th century – was unavailable in Vermeer's time.

CONSEQUENCES: The court dropped the charges of treason and sentenced van Meegeren to a year in prison for producing forgeries. He died of a heart attack before he could serve his time.

VALUE OF WORK: The value of van Meegeren's own paintings rose to £25,000 after he was exposed as a forger.

Lesson 6.4

8 Group A

Smart washing machines. No more manual settings necessary! Smart washing machines will not only be able to recognise the textiles and fabrics you put in there; they will also have sensors to detect the amount and type of dirt on the clothes. They will then programme themselves to do the washing.

Home 3D printing. 3D printers are already being developed for medical procedures such as manufacturing new body parts, but now they are making their way into our everyday lives. They will be used to make copies of household objects such as kitchen utensils, vases, even artwork.

Growth of eco-homes. Rainwater harvesting, sewage recycling, green roofs, renewable energy ... these are all features of eco-homes that will revolutionise domestic life. Eco-homes will become the norm in many countries, combining high- and low-tech solutions to help save the planet one house at a time.

Lesson 9.2

12 Exhibition notes

First impression: nice ideas, but not very dramatic visually

Simple layout – fifteen recent British inventions laid around the gallery with short information boards on each

Some of the ideas are interesting, e.g. a hypersonic alarm which only teenagers can hear (called a mosquito) – used to stop teenagers loitering where they aren't wanted

Some not so interesting or original, e.g. electric bicycle, baby bottle with automatic warmer

Information about the story behind the invention – OK – interesting to note that some ideas have been inspired by young people (one child was just eight when he suggested the idea to his father)

Overall – disappointed – it only takes about ten minutes to go around the whole exhibition – feeling a little flat, rather than inspired

Highlight – section where people have written their own ideas of problems which could be solved with new ideas/solutions – some really funny, new ideas

Lesson 7.1

7 A Read the rules of the game.

THE RULES

Where are you?

You're on one of the Admiralty Islands, a group of small islands off the north coast of Papua New Guinea in the Pacific Ocean. You were able to swim there, with a few belongings, after your plane crashed en route to a conference in Australia.

What do you have with you?

A penknife, a pen and some paper, a small mirror, a bottle of alcohol and water-resistant tape. Plus, up to five items of your own choice. None of them would, in themselves, allow you to escape (so no inflatable boats, sadly). But used together, and perhaps with a few items from the island, you can hatch an escape plan.

What have you tried so far?

Building a raft, but you quickly realised it would not get you to safety on Papua New Guinea 300 kilometres away before you ran out of the fruit you'd stashed for the journey. Shining a mirror towards the boats that pass on the horizon has failed, too.

Unit 1 Recording 1

- 1 John's not in the office. He might be having lunch.
- 2 I'm fed up. We've been waiting for an hour!
- 3 She owns a small house by the river.
- 4 Can you be quiet? I'm trying to work.
- 5 The letter arrived today. She'd been expecting the news since Monday.
- 6 That chicken dish tasted great.
- 7 Who do these keys belong to?
- 8 By next September, we'll have been living here for twenty-five years.
- 9 I'm working on a project at the moment.
- 10 My partner was making dinner when I got home so I helped.

Unit 1 Recording 3

- 1 He'll spend hours on the computer.
- 2 They would complain all the time.
- 3 She'll disagree with everything you say.

Unit 1 Recording 6

M = Mariella J = John

M: For any of you who work surrounded by other people, you'll know that one of the biggest stressors in the world of work is not the work itself, it's the people we work with. There are the people who need to be noisy when you're trying to be quiet, there are the ones who 'shush' you when you're telling a really good story, there are the sweeping generalisers, and the detail-obsessed nit-pickers, the obsessive planners, and the last-minute deadline junkies. You, of course, are perfect. These days there are tests for just about everything, and personality is no exception. If you've ever been intrigued to define your type, or sat down and completed a questionnaire at work, then it's likely you'll have come across the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator, known to its fans as the MBTI. Myers-Briggs is the world's most widely used personality questionnaire. From Beijing to Boston to Bournemouth, office workers, college students, and people who are simply curious to find out more about themselves, answer a series of questions to determine which of sixteen different personality types they fall into.

J: How did you find completing the questionnaire that you completed just yesterday I think?

M: Em, I found it not particularly challenging. Maybe I didn't think about it as much as one ought to.

...

M: The preferences are split into four sections, so prepare yourself for the psychological bit. The first category determines whether you are an extrovert or an introvert. The second tells you whether you prefer to sense or intuit information. The third deals with decision-making: thinking or feeling. And the fourth, our approach to actions: judging and perceiving. Ultimately, you end up with a four-letter acronym like ENFP, or ISFJ, which describes your personality type.

J: How do you prefer to, if you like, recharge your batteries at the end of a tiring day?

M: Well, most of the time, I prefer to go home and be quiet and read, or slow down ... put my children to bed and so on.

J: Typically when we ask people this sort of question. Typically, introverts are more likely to talk about spending quiet time, time on their own, reading, etc. Extroverts are more likely to talk about spending time with people. ... I don't know if you ever had the opportunity to put together any flat-pack furniture, or anything like that. How did you go about doing it?

M: Well, you know, I'd lose the screws, and then the directions would be underneath the box, and then I'd lose another part of it, and it would take quite a long time, and be quite an infuriating process.

J: OK. Typically when we ask that question, people with a preference for sensing will like to follow the instructions. People who have a preference for intuition, it's not that they disregard instructions, but they're a little bit more of a guide ...

If you imagine perhaps a friend of yours gives you a call, and says, 'I've just been burgled.' What would you, what would your reaction be, what would you do?

M: Do you know, it's so difficult, because I think it depends on the person, you know ...

J: OK. In some ... matter ... to me it's a matter of what you do first, because both people with a preference for thinking, (and both people with a preference for feeling) ... will do both things. They'll do the practical things. 'Have you called the police?' 'Is the person still there?' 'Have you, you know, called the insurance?', etc., etc. And they'll then go on to, 'And how are you?'

M: Well, in that instance I would definitely fall into the thinking category, I think.

J: How do you go about doing the food shopping?

M: Em I, I'm in love with internet food ordering, um so I do that, and then all the things that I've forgotten, cos I don't do it with any great system, I spend the rest of the week running out and picking up.

J: OK. Typically, people with a preference for judging will be quite organised about those sorts of things. People with a preference for perceiving may also make lists, but those lists have a more aspirational quality.

M: Random feel, shall we say?

J: Yeah, they are things that they might buy, or they might not buy. If they see something more interesting when they get to the supermarket, they'll get that instead.

M: At the end of my conversation with John, I got my personality type, which I'll illuminate you on later.

Unit 1 Recording 7

M = Man W1 = Woman 1 W2 = Woman 2

W1: Yeah.

M: I'd say she's around thirty years old.

W1: Yeah. She looks nice actually.

W2: I reckon maybe mid-thirties.

M: Oh really?

W2: Or something like that, yeah.

W1: If I had to make a guess I'd say actually thirty-two.

M: I wouldn't say that old.

W1: There's something about her, isn't there?

W2: Yes.

M: She looks friendly.

W2: Well, there's something in her eyes actually, that makes me think she's about to laugh or something.

M: Have you noticed her apron's got some sort of white marks on it, kind of er ...

W1: Yeah, she's obviously been baking bread, hasn't she?

M: Yes.

W1: She looks quite serene though.

W2: She does yeah, she's - she - she looks like you'd get on with her.

W1: Yes, I suppose you would, yeah.

W2: Yeah.

M: What about where she's working? What would you say?

W1: Well ...

W2: That's bread isn't - oh is it? Is it bread? I think it's ...

M: Wasn't - is it cheese in the background?

W1: Don't think ...

W2: I think that's bread.

M: OK.

W2: It could be a bakery, as you know, there's like bread and stuff in the background.

W1: Yeah, she's got a bit of flour down there as well.

W2: Oh yeah. Yeah, she must have been ...

W1: So ...

M: One of those posh delis, don't you think?

W1: Probably. Shall we go to the next - yeah, photograph.

M: Yes, let's have a look.

W1: Have you got - the - this lady, the older lady, yeah?

W2: The older lady, yeah.

M: Oh yeah, yeah, I've got her.

W1: Yeah, there she is.

W2: What do we think about her?

W1: Oh, she looks very dignified, doesn't she?

M: Definitely.

W1: Um ...

M: She looks, I would say, she looks intellectual, maybe that's cos of her age, but ...

W2: Yeah.

W1: Yeah.

M: Something about her face that just makes me think she's seen a lot.

W2: Yeah, she gives the impression of being very intellectual.

M: Yeah.

W2: I might suggest she's a lecturer in a university or ...

M: Yeah.

W2: Um, something really brainy like that.

W1: It seems to me she's very pretty as well.

W2: She is, yeah.

W1: She could have been a model, or anything like that.

W2: Oh, do you think?

W1: Yeah.

M: The outfit's quite sort of snazzy, isn't it? You know. She could have been something like that in a - in her heyday.

W1: She looks - well she's done her makeup nicely, hasn't she?

M: And that - that necklace might suggest that she has got something to do with fashion.

W1: Yeah. Yeah.
M: Let's have a look at the next one.
W1: Yeah, what's the ...
M: Ah, right.
W2: This young guy.
M: He looks happy.
W2: He looks pretty cool actually.
M: Big smile.
W2: Yeah.
W1: Nice bright T-shirt.
M: Er, I wonder what his job is.
W1: I'm pretty sure he's a creative of some sort.
W2: I'd hazard a guess it's something to do with computers because he's, you know, he's surrounded with them, so maybe graphic design, something cool.
M: There's something about him that says sort of creative, doesn't it? You know, with the – with the bags around.
W1: Yeah, er what do you think about all those bags in the background?
W2: Oh yeah, I hadn't noticed those.
W1: I wonder what those are for.
M: They might suggest that he designs the bags perhaps. I don't know.
W1: Yeah, maybe. Maybe he's like a creative or something, or marketing or something that involves computers, like you said.
M: What's that in the window, right through the back? It looks like a load of bikes, is it?
W2: It makes me think he's in a gym, which is really strange, isn't it? Cos he doesn't look ...
W1: Yeah, a gym.
M: Maybe he's the receptionist at a gym. No.
W1: I'm pretty sure ...
W2: What, with bags out everywhere and computers?
M: OK, no.
W1: Yeah.
W2: I don't know though.
W1: I'm pretty sure he's quite a laugh though. He looks like a laugh, doesn't he?
M: What about – how old would you put him?
W1: Oh, um ...
W2: I'd hazard a guess he's about twenty-something. Or do you think he's older?
M: Oh, definitely older. Yeah, I reckon he's about forty-ish.
W1: No way, really?
W2: Do you think?
W1: I do like his hair; I think it's really cool.
M: Yeah, he just looks kind of happy.

Unit 1 Recording 8

- 1 I'll be there soon. I just have a couple of things to do.
- 2 Why don't we meet at about eight-ish?
- 3 I left a lot of stuff at the hotel, but I can pick it up later.
- 4 Don't worry. We've got plenty of time.
- 5 We've sort of finished the accounts.
- 6 There'll be about forty or so people attending.

Unit 1 Recording 10

My treasured possession is a very old carpet that has been in my family for four generations. My great grandfather was a salesman. He sold carpets in Calcutta. During the nineteen-fifties he went bankrupt and went to South Africa to find his fortune. Legend has it that he took nothing but the clothes he was wearing and this carpet. I'm not sure this is true, but that's the story. Anyway, he made his fortune in South Africa and the carpet remained in the family. When he died, my grandmother inherited it and instead of putting it on the floor of her house in Durban, she hung it on the wall. Even as a young child I remember it. It's brightly coloured: reds, white, green and gold, with these beautiful patterns that look like leaves, and I just remember it hanging on the wall of the dining room and always wondering why a carpet was on the wall. Anyway, eventually it was bequeathed to me and um it's now on my wall. It's a little bit old and frayed now. I suppose I should repair it. Some of the weaving is falling apart, but it still looks OK. When I die, my children will have it, and then their children, so it will always be in the family.

P = Presenter A = Alex S = Saba

P: Now, you might think of a library as a dusty old place full of books that nobody uses anymore. But in a 'living library' the books are real people. People who can share a significant personal experience, or a particular perspective on life. Today we've got two people here to tell us about their 'living book' experiences. Alex Fuller, who was a book at his living library event in Sheffield, and Saba Chataranda, who was a reader at an event in Norwich. First of all Alex, hi ...
A: Hello.
P: Alex, can you tell us a little bit about the experience? What kind of book were you? And what was it like?
A: Er, yeah ... well, the event was organised by the university and was meant to tackle prejudices. I arrived in a bit of a hurry, and ... er ... quickly checked through the catalogue to see what kind of 'books' were available, and to, er, sign myself in as 'a student'.
P: A student. OK. And what sort of prejudices were you expecting?
A: Yeah, well, er, I wasn't sure what to expect really, but when you read the catalogue, against each 'book' there are a few of the typical prejudices and preconceptions that people might associate with your 'title'. So, next to 'student' people had written things like 'lazy', 'politically apathetic', 'do useless degrees'. And also 'waste tax payers' money', 'can't cook' and 'spends all his money on beer'. Well, thinking back to the previous night, I wasn't sure how I was going to tackle any of those accusations.

P: I see. So what did you do?

A: Well, first we just had to go and sit in the waiting room. And I was beginning to have second thoughts, to be honest. I was quite uneasy about it all. But anyway, then the public started coming in, it was like sitting on a shelf, waiting and hoping that someone would choose you, and hoping that you would be able to find something to say when they did.

P: Er, right. And presumably someone did choose you.

A: Yeah ... an older man, with grey hair and a suit, came to collect me. And as we were walking over to our corner, I was planning my responses to the expected accusations. But, in fact, as we started talking over coffee, we compared our experiences – you know, student life in the 1960s, with its riots and protests, wild music, and all the ambitions they had of changing the world. And student life now.

P: OK ... and what did you discover? Anything interesting?

A: Actually, we found that we shared a lot of the same ideologies, and that many things haven't really changed.

P: Ahh ... that's interesting. So, do you think there was any point in the session? Did it change your opinions at all?

A: I think the directness of the experience was eye-opening really. It forces you to have a very candid discussion, so people have to keep an open mind about things, and that has to be good.

P: Thank you. And Saba ... how was your experience? Was it similar? Did you enjoy the 'living book' experience?

S: Hi. Thank you. Yes, I really enjoyed the experience. Um, I went to a three-hour session in Norwich, and I was really surprised at how much I learnt. It gives you a chance to really talk to people, who may be from a different religion, or culture – er, people who you don't normally get to talk to in your everyday life.

P: Great. So, who did you talk to?

S: I met all kinds of people, some wonderful people. One of them was a lady called Karrie, a blind woman. Karrie is visually impaired, having lost her sight due to illness when she was a child. The first thing that struck me about Karrie is that she's fiercely independent. She doesn't like other people doing things for her, so you can imagine that can be a bit difficult.

P: Absolutely. So, what did you learn from Karrie?

S: OK, her mission was to tackle the stigma that people attach to blind people, that they're helpless. So, she wants to challenge the stereotype that just because a person can't see, they can't do anything for themselves.

P: And how does she do that?

S: Well, er, Karrie lives a perfectly normal life, er, she goes to work, goes out socially – and does all the things that the rest of us do. Well, she can't drive, but that was really one of her few limitations. She told me about other successful blind people around the world who have had a great impact on society – er, people who've been successfully employed, or taken degrees, published books, even participated in Olympic events. These are the people that have been Karrie's inspiration.

P: That's wonderful. Tell me, did you ask Karrie about her other senses? You know, people often say that people who are blind use their other senses, because these are quite well developed.

S: That's right. Karrie feels that she's quite a good judge of character, because she's able to 'see' people for who they really are, on the inside, rather than just how they want to present themselves, or how you may judge them because of the clothes they're wearing. As she put it, she's able to 'see with her heart' rather than her eyes.

P: OK ... how interesting. So, did the conversation change your views on disability?

S: Yes, it did, definitely. My conversation with Karrie gave me a whole new perspective. It taught me not to be narrow-minded about disability, and I thank her for that.

M1: As far as I'm concerned, we cannot trust the news we read these days.

W1: Mmm.

M2: Why not?

M1: Because journalists have an axe to grind.

M2: What? That's debatable.

M1: I think it's very rare to get a truly impartial journalist. I don't think it's within human nature to be impartial. You side on one side or the other.

M2: Why would a journalist want to be partial? Why would a journalist not want to be impartial? Surely that's the job of a journalist.

W2: Oooh, I don't know about that.

M1: It is ... why?

W2: No, I, I'm agreeing with you. I'm just saying I think there are some journalists who cannot be trusted. They have an agenda ... they, they aren't there to tell the truth, they're there to sell newspapers ... or they have an axe to grind.

M1: Yeah, it's a job, they're being paid and, er, effectively they're the mouthpiece for whoever is paying them.

M2: But isn't the job of a journalist to be, to be rigorous? I mean if somebody comes up with a piece of nonsense, or just whatever, er, you know a piece of received information that they're spouting, isn't the job of a journalist to get to the bottom of that and say 'What do you really mean by that, have you got proof of it, who, you know, what are your sources?' That's their job, surely?

W1: Exactly, you know they're going in there asking 'Where's the evidence for what you're saying?' They're not just going to say, you know – 'Oh you tell me every sheep in Wales is blue' and they're not going to go 'Oooh right I'll just write down every sheep in Wales is blue.' They're going to say 'Right, well show me photographs, take me and show me these sheep.'

M1: But, but the bigger issue here if you ask me is that they're there to sell newspapers and newspaper owners have political agendas.

W2: Quite frankly, it's a business as well, isn't it?

M1: It's a political business.

M2: From what I can gather about the nature of ... of the dispassionate idea of being a journalist, what a journalist is after is the truth. If that journalist then goes to work for a particular paper that's got a particular angle ... a particular axe to grind then, certainly that journalist may err towards one side of the political spectrum or the other. But only a bit, I would say. I would say they are still after truth at its heart.

W1: Exactly. Surely any journalist worth his or her salt is going to make the case for both sides. Anybody just arguing one side in a totally biased way is not going to be taken seriously.

M1: Why? Why are there so many libel trials then if we can trust everything journalists write?

W2: And from what I can gather, people and journalists included don't even know that they're biased and they'll write, you know, something trying to be impartial and they, they won't realise that actually they have a slant on it, you can't help it.

W1: I find that highly unlikely. I mean, they're not stupid people, are they?

M1: Some of them are, for some newspapers, the way they write, incredibly stupid.

W2: But surely the people being libelled are just people who didn't like what was said about them?

M2: Could we ... do you think we could agree that the basic honesty of journalists is probably not to be questioned but that there are a few bad apples in the cart?

W2: Yeah.

M2: And that there are journalists who give other, you know, who are bad journalists, who are partisan and who are arguing a particular political slant who give other journalists a bad name.

M1: Well, I'd say that there are a few bad carts rather than a few bad apples!

A: Journalists have an axe to grind.

B: What? That's debatable.

2

A: Why would a journalist not want to be impartial?

B: Oooh ... I don't know about that.

A: Journalists don't even know that they're biased.

B: I find that highly unlikely.

C = Chairperson Q = Questioner S = Speaker

S: OK, I'm going to talk about the influence of nature versus nurture. And I'd like to begin by stating that, as I see it, by far the strongest influence has to be 'nurture'. The reason I think this is that I believe the way we're brought up will have a much stronger influence on how we behave than anything that's in our genes.

I mean, some people will argue that our abilities are determined pretty much exclusively by our genes, so if your father was a great scientist with a natural ability for mathematics, then there's a pretty good chance that you might inherit that same ability. Personally, I think it's ridiculous to suggest this. I think that when a parent has a particular strength, or interest, or achieves something wonderful in a particular field, then the chances are that when they have children, they will try to instil in the children the same kind of interest, they will pass on their knowledge, their passion for the subject, they are quite likely to engage the child in activities related to that field, perhaps for quite a lot of the child's time. And it's as a result of this that the child may also develop strengths or abilities in the same field. I absolutely reject the idea that nature endows us with these inborn abilities. I mean, you can be born with the best natural musical ability in the universe, but if you don't practise the piano, then nothing will come of it. On the other hand, I think you can teach people to do just about anything, so long as you dedicate time and give the child the right kind of encouragement, or put them in the right situation. So, to conclude I would have to argue that nurture plays a much stronger role in the development of who you are and the talents that you develop than nature does.

C: OK. Thank you. And now, let's open the discussion up and take questions from the floor. Does anyone have a question for one of the speakers?

Q: Yes, I'd like to ask a question to the last speaker. I think it is quite obvious if you look around you, that people often very much resemble their parents in terms of their physical appearance, and even their characters. Why then, do you not think that it is equally possible that a child will inherit its parents' ability, or intelligence?

S: That's a good question, because yes, we can see that we do inherit physical characteristics from our parents. However, the point I'm trying to make is that we cannot rely on something we are assumed to be born with. For me, the influence of nurture is far stronger. I believe that everyone has the same potential, they just need to be given the right conditions to nurture and develop that potential. Thank you for the question.

C: Thank you. Are there any other questions?

M = Man W = Woman

W: Where did this interest in homes come from? You obviously had your own, but then what?

M: Well, I trained as an architect and as a young man I travelled an awful lot, and my two interests eventually connected. But I had a real awakening when I travelled in Africa and parts of Asia. In Indonesia I saw these enormous tree houses built high in the sky, made with the wood from banyan trees, and it just took my breath away, these houses fifty feet in the air.

W: Why did they build them so high?

M: Well, it's a refuge from wild animals and mosquitoes and also, in their culture, they believe in evil spirits and these spirits are earthbound. So it's really for protection. You're safe if you're higher up.

W: And you've also written about houses on stilts in your book.

M: Yes. All along the Amazon Rainforest you can find fishermen living in these houses built on wooden stilts. I was fortunate enough to stay in a fishing community there for a month and see first-hand how it works, and it's pretty interesting ...

W: And on the other side of the world, igloos, too.

M: I stayed in an igloo in Greenland for three weeks.

W: And you survived to tell the tale.

M: I did. Actually, they're far more comfortable than they look. They're pretty cosy inside. The packed ice and snow acts as an insulator.

W: So if we take the average sort of westernised home – maybe bricks and cement, a bit of wood – how do they compare to so-called primitive dwellings without toilets and running water, that kind of thing? Is there any comparison?

M: Well, we have to understand what we mean by primitive housing. The original home was a cave, and when we talk about a caveman we think of someone extremely primitive, with no culture. But the funny thing is that caves are pretty good places to live. They're cool in the summer and warm in the winter, they give superb protection in that they'll never blow down in the wind, and in fact they're well made for decoration.

W: In what sense?

M: Well, the so-called primitive caveman made paintings on the walls which survived thousands of years. And y'know, er, any place you find caves, whether it's France, Spain, the United States, er, China, people have lived in them and decorated them and adorned them with figurines and artwork. But we have to recognise that these houses are built in accordance with the habitat and the surroundings. Y'know, igloos keep out the cold and snow; tree houses provide safety. Then there are yurts, which are portable houses made of a wooden frame and animal skins – you can carry them around with you. Well, a yurt is built so that the nomads in Central Asia can move as the season and the weather changes. So you see, houses can be beautiful but in most cultures they're built to be purely functional, above all.

Just to give you a bit of background information, Harrogate council has announced the creation of cycle hubs as, er, part of its cycling strategy for the next five years. Now, the aim of this project is to set up cycle hubs. What are hubs? Hubs are areas where innovative ideas for cycling can be piloted and where resources can be targeted to, er, increase cycling. So what we plan to do is, er, to introduce these new hubs in the centre of Harrogate, located in areas with a high concentration of cyclists. Er, this solution will help us to create, um, a safer environment for the cyclist. Cycling is an incredibly efficient mode of transport. It's fast, it's environmentally friendly and, er, it's cheap – with of course the added bonus of keeping you fit. So basically, what we're proposing to do is to get everybody around the table to discuss the merits and demerits of, er, whether or not the idea of a cycling hub in the centre of Harrogate is a good or a bad idea basically. So um, does anyone have any questions?

Unit 3 Recording 6

W1 = Woman 1 W2 = Woman 2

W1: Er, Canada has one of the highest standards of living in the world and, you know, long life expectancy ... um and it's one of the world's wealthiest nations so it's really quite a nice – nice place to live. Um, and on the downside I suppose there's um – in a lot of areas you have to deal with bad winter weather, so um, not – not in all places but in a lot of places we get a lot of snow and um, really cold temperatures in the winter um, and that can be quite difficult to deal with, although you do get used to it.

I would describe Canada as, er, geographically massive. Um, I think it's kind of difficult to explain how – just how big the country is. It's the second largest country in the world apart from Russia, or next to Russia, um, and yeah, so it's just really, really, really big and very, very diverse.

Every province is different um, and, you know, to visit Canada you really have to go far and go for a long time to – to really appreciate the vastness of the country. Um, what um, if I was making a documentary I'd probably focus on things like, you know, we're very, very lucky in Canada to have a huge range of fresh water, um, great lakes, rivers everywhere, literally. Um, we have three coasts: the Pacific coast, the Atlantic and the Arctic, and we actually have the longest coastline in the world. So you get incredible um, diversity, um, everything from wildlife to bird life um, and also diversity in climate so, you know, we have temperate rain forests and we have deserts, we have um, arctic er, prairies, we have volcanoes, mountains, um, you know, almost half of Canada is covered in forests.

Er, some similarities um, between the United States and Canada um, that I can think of is that um, we both have a strong history and a long standing history of aboriginal peoples um, and we share the longest border in the world.

W2: Well, undoubtedly one of the best things about Argentina is um, the values, um, people and, and their values, how they view life and they – we tend to attribute quite a lot of um, um, sort of value to our, our family. We care a lot about our families and and our gatherings and we kind of gather on Sundays and we have a big barbecue and everybody comes and we all talk about our weeks and what we've been up to and it's a good chance to catch up.

Um, we also care a great deal about our friends, um, we celebrate Friend's Day, which is a big celebration and we have a lot of fun and we give each other cards and thank each other for our friendship. Um, so I think that's kind of the best thing about Argentina: people are very warm, very caring and there's a – we've got a great sense of solidarity.

Um, I guess if you – a lot of people think that Latin America is just Latin America and that all the countries are the same and, you know, like Brazil and Argentina are the same thing but we're very different um, with our – we've got like I, I guess if you could put it in into words, Brazilians are very upbeat and very happy and Argentinians we're ... we've got a sense of longing for, for the old world and this er, melancholic view of the of the world and so we ... the outlooks are very different and hence the culture is, is very different.

An interesting way of seeing Argentina would be um, if you were to film a documentary, it would be through following one person like through a day or through a couple of days because then you start getting a sense for all the things that um, go on in the country and like, you know, for instance when I used to teach, it, it was like I used to start my day not knowing what my day would be about because there's always a strike, there's always a picket line, there's always all these difficulties you have to overcome through, throughout a day and ... but at the same time you can see how resourceful people are when dealing with difficulties and how er, relaxed and and laid back they are about them, in a way. So it's, it's an interesting way of living. Um, it's a constant struggle but at the same time keeping your smile.

I really admire Malala Yousafzai. Her story is astonishing. She was a BBC blogger at the age of eleven, and in that role she revealed the state of schooling for girls in Pakistan. Basically, girls were being prevented from getting an education and she campaigned against this and shed light on what was going on in the country. And of course this got her into all sorts of trouble with the Taliban, and a few years later she was shot point blank in an assassination attempt. Miraculously, she survived, but for me the amazing thing is that instead of being scared she continued to advocate for children's rights. I think she spoke to the United Nations and various presidents. And of course people with that kind of courage and determination are one in a million, and so a few years ago she was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. She was the youngest person ever to win it, at just seventeen years old.

2

Rigoberta Menchu is my hero, without a doubt. She's an extraordinary woman and someone I really look up to. She's an indigenous woman from a poor background in Guatemala, and she's fought for human rights all her life. Several members of her family were murdered when Rigoberta was still young, and she was exiled to Mexico for her own protection. But the interesting thing is, this didn't deter her at all. She just carried on campaigning against the human rights violations and the atrocities perpetrated by the military. So obviously she's a very, very brave person. But I think what kind of propelled her into the world's consciousness was the book she published about her life, called I, Rigoberta Menchu. This kind of alerted people to the wider struggles and made her a household name, a beacon for justice, certainly in the world of human rights advocacy. And she's such a humble person – she's a stellar figure in Guatemala, but you wouldn't know it from her manner and her appearance and the way she carries herself.

3

Someone I admire is Cornel West, an American intellectual. He speaks out about all kinds of issues, like civil rights, particularly for African Americans and for the poor. What stands out is his charisma and that he's an amazing, electrifying speaker. You can see him on YouTube or acting in two of the Matrix films. He's kind of like a crazy preacher, but really funny and sharp and, OK, he has a PhD from Princeton but he has a really good grasp of pop culture, and when he speaks he uses all these academic references but also references to TV and rap music. Also, he's completely fearless. He criticised President Bush but also President Obama and I think he was arrested at one point for civil disobedience in New York. He's just a tower of strength and eloquence.

M: So did you see that thing on the news about that er, seventy-year-old grandmother who um, who stopped the jewel thieves?

W: Oh, the the one yeah, who knocked one of them off their bike, off their motorbike?

M: Yeah.

W: That was amazing.

M: Wasn't it extraordinary? And they were robbing this jewel store and smashing the windows.

W: Yeah, yeah, yeah, and she just came up and completely ...

M: And nobody was doing anything about it.

W: ... hit them straight over the head with her massive great handbag.

M: With her shopping bag.

W: Shopping bag or something.

M: Full of, I don't know, beans or something.

W: Cans of beans, yeah!

M: But, I mean, would you do that, in that situation?

W: Oh I, I, if it was up to me, I think I would probably be too cowardly and I'd end up just calling the police, I'm afraid to say.

M: I know, it's interesting, isn't it? I mean, you know, if, if I ever found myself in that situation, I would like to think that I would be, you know, a have-a-go-hero as well but come, you know, push come to shove, whether or not you actually do it or not is another question, isn't it?

W: Yeah, yeah, I mean.

M: I mean the fact is that it's dangerous.

W: How many ... were there six of them she took on?

M: Something like that, yeah.

W: That really is ...

M: And she knocked one of them off their scooter and then ... and it was only then that all the other passers-by came and, you know, landed on him, yeah.

W: Oh yeah, jumped on the bandwagon, yes.

M: But she'd done, done the whole thing.

W: No you have to ... I completely take my my hat off ... hat off to her for that because that is truly heroic to just charge in there, but no way would I do that. I just can't see my er, yes I, I own up to cowardice. I would be ringing someone.

M: Well, a friend of mine said that he thought it was absolutely, you know, completely stupid, totally wrong thing to do. I said no, I thought that if more people, you know, were like that, you'd have a better society.

W: Yeah. The thing is, as you said before, I don't know, I think it has to be one of those instantaneous reactions. You either don't think about the consequences and you, you pile in and you, you do what you can, or it's, I mean as soon as you hesitate I think you're lost really.

M: Yeah.

W: And er ...

M: I think to be absolutely honest, if it was up to me, in the same situation, I'd probably leg it.

W: Really? Yes, well I, I think I'd probably do my bit by calling the police.

Unit 4 Recording 7

M = Man W = Woman

M: So what do you think? How were they caught?

W: Well, it's usually some detail in the artwork, isn't it? Like the forger uses the wrong kind of paint or the canvas is made of the wrong type of material or something like that. It's usually human error, isn't it?

M: I think so. And in this case it was human error, but not quite what you're saying.

W: Could it be something to do with the family? I mean it's quite unusual to have a whole family involved. I think art forgers are usually lone wolves, aren't they? Maybe it was the elderly parents. Maybe they let something slip. Or perhaps they said something that gave the game away somehow.

M: Nope. Good guess, though. The mistake was made by the forger, Shaun. And it wasn't a painting. It was an Assyrian relief, kind of like a flat sculpture, from six hundred BC.

W: Six hundred BC? Oh, so maybe he used the wrong type of stone or plaster. Or could it be that the design didn't match up to designs from six hundred BC? Maybe it was too modern?

M: You're on the right track. The relief included horses and the horses' reins. The ones in the forgery were apparently 'inconsistent with other reliefs of that period'. But also – you'll like this – there was a spelling mistake on the inscription!

W: No way!

M: This mistake was 'considered very unlikely on a piece that was supposedly made for a king'. And then George panicked ...

W: George is the father, who sold the art, right?

M: Yes. George panicked and said he'd sell the piece for a very low price.

W: Aha. So it's connected to the elderly parents, too.

M: Yeah, it all seemed too suspicious, so the police got involved and eighteen months later they arrested the whole family.

W: Wow. That's some story.

M: Yeah, but the interesting thing is that the family didn't seem to do it for the money. They lived in a small, messy house, and Shaun made all his forgeries in the garden shed. Anyway, in the end, Shaun was sentenced to four years in jail, and the family had to pay back £400,000. The parents were spared prison sentences because of their age.

J: Now, if I'd ever told anybody how much my dad earned, he'd have been absolutely furious. I'm not sure that I ever really knew. We were raised in an atmosphere where families kept themselves to themselves and you told nobody your business. And then it all changed as we became more knowledgeable about the kind of dangerous secrets that might be held behind closed doors, and the damage they could do. We were encouraged as a society to tell these tales and let it all hang out. So, can we still keep a secret?

G: One of my friends told me to keep a secret about how she was going out with this other girl's boyfriend. And I kind of went up to the girl and told her by accident, it just fell out. She got really, really annoyed and it was – oh, it was horrible. It was like I thought she was actually going to slap me. It was so bad. Oh my god. We made up like two hours later but it was just the initial, you know, ... I should never have told her secret though. So, it was my fault.

A: Have you ever given away anyone's secret by accident?

W1: Probably, just Christmas presents maybe, accidentally telling someone what their Christmas present was. My husband nearly did that yesterday actually. He took an afternoon off work to go and er, go and get something for me ... for Christmas for me. He wouldn't tell me for days where he was going, and almost let it slip where he was. I really wish he had given it away.

A: What's the hardest secret that you've ever had to keep?

W2: I revealed a secret of a, of a romance that I had with an older man ... that I revealed to my husband because I decided that I had to tell him ... er, so that ... because I couldn't live with this secret. If I had to live in honesty with my husband, I had to reveal to him this secret and face the consequences. And, as you can see this is the consequence – we've grown closer together as a result of that.

A: So the consequences were quite good then, it seems?

W2: They were. Here he is, still at my side, and I'm at his side. So that was a very big secret that I kept, but I did reveal it.

J: Ailish Kavanagh talking to people in Croydon. So when do you spill the beans and be honest, and when is it better to stay schtum?

Eva Rice is the author of a novel called The Lost Art of Keeping a Secret. Do you really think we have lost the art of keeping a secret?

E: I, I certainly do. I think that nowadays everyone's so encouraged to say everything at all times, and express the way they feel, um, at the drop of a hat. And I think that the point of my book was to get across the fact that sometimes keeping a secret isn't always a bad thing. It can be something that um ... can bring a more positive outcome than always, always telling everyone how you feel.

J: So what kind of secret would you keep?

E: I think, in, well, like the characters in my book, if you're keeping a secret that is, in some way, going to protect somebody from something. Obviously I don't want to give away too much of the plot. But if you're protecting somebody in a way that isn't going to damage them when they do ultimately find out um, I think that in that case a secret is a very good thing to keep. But nowadays, it's something that is frowned upon, and something that is considered wrong. And you're supposed to tell everyone the way you feel twenty-four hours a day, and so it's something that you shouldn't do is keep a secret.

Unit 5 Recording 6

M = Man MA = Marc W = Woman

W: What do you think about organisations like WikiLeaks?

M: Well, to be honest, I think they should be stopped. And the reason why I say that is because they are responsible for leaking all kinds of confidential information, some of which is highly sensitive information about people who work in government, or military strategy, and they release this kind of information in a way which is, which is quite honestly ... completely reckless. They seem to have no regard for the ethics of what they're doing, and um, I think they should be stopped. They've exposed people who they say are informants, and now the lives of those people and their families are now in danger.

W: Hold on a minute. Can you be sure about that? Is there any evidence to prove that?

M: Well, no, probably not, not absolute proof. But that's not the point. The only way to prove it'll be if something terrible happens to those people as a result of the information which has been disclosed. The point is that governments and, you know, certain organisations simply have to be able to keep some information private. It doesn't make sense for everybody to have access to all the information that they want. Let me put it this way. It's like saying you need to give everybody your bank details, because we all have the right to know, but you don't. You don't have the right, and it's simply ridiculous to think that you do. If you think about it, it's just irresponsible and it's dangerous.

W: I don't see how you can say that. Don't you think that there are cases when it's right for the public to know what's happening? Marc, where do you stand on this?

MA: Well, yeah, absolutely. I agree. It's not something I've thought much about before, but in fact I think that WikiLeaks is one of the best things to happen in the last few years. It's opened up access to information and it means that big companies and governments will need to be much more careful about how they deal with things in the future, because they can no longer hide behind secrets. And that's how it should be. After all, if you think about it, you can't give people the protection to do whatever they want without fear of being discovered. Whether it's companies using spies to find out what rival companies are planning, or governments holding people illegally, or using illegal practices to get information. I think freedom of information can only be a good thing, and it's like a wake-up call to all those who previously thought that they could get away with wrongdoing by just keeping it quiet. That just doesn't work anymore.

M: But that doesn't take account of the fact that some information, like um, military information, is highly sensitive, and shouldn't be allowed to spread around the internet where simply anybody can get hold of it and use it for whatever purposes they wish.

MA: I think you'll find that actually information has always been leaked. It's just the medium that has changed now, so that with the internet it's that bit easier, but there've always been whistle-blowers, and there will continue to be. It's no different. The point I'm trying to make is that if the chances of you being discovered are increased, the likelihood of you being exposed, then it'll make you think twice about the actions you're taking, whether you're in government or in a big corporation. I think you'll find that people will be more careful in the future, and in my opinion that can only be a good thing.

Unit 5 Recording 8

OK, so I'm going to tell you about some secret places to go in my city. Well, I live in Edinburgh and the first place I'm going to talk about is ... I think the Japanese Kyoto Friendship Gardens. If you look around the grounds of the Lauriston Castle in Cramond, which is a lovely castle, then secluded away you'll find the Japanese gardens. Er, they were opened to celebrate the twinning of Edinburgh with Kyoto, and they are just a wonderful place to sit and relax, look at the blossom on the trees, and enjoy the serenity of the place. It's very, you know, very Zen ... and you would never believe it's there.

Next, this is a place you could easily walk past, unless you knew about it. Most people have never heard about it. It's number two Wellington Place, in Leith. It's just a normal-looking Edinburgh door. There's no plaque outside or anything like that. But the Scottish author Irvine Welsh wrote his debut novel Trainspotting in the top-floor apartment of this house. So, that's a secret I always point out to people when we walk past. Insider information. Um ... next I think I should tell you about the rooftop terrace on top of the National Museum of Scotland. It's not what you'd call a big secret, but this place is really hidden away and can seem quite difficult to get to. But it's so worth it when you get there because you can get these fantastic views of the city and the castle. It's brilliant, especially on a clear day. And there's a really nice café up there too.

Unit 6 Recording 2

S = Stephen Fry D = David Crystal

S: Professor David Crystal says that the migratory patterns of our language as it continues to move across the globe, gives us a whole range of Englishes, and that process is becoming ever more intense.

D: So just as once upon a time there was British English and American English, and then there came Australian English and South African English, and then Indian English and then Caribbean English. Now, it's down to the level of Nigerian English, Ghanaian English, Singaporean English and so on. And these are the new Englishes of the world. What happens is this: that when a country adopts English as its language, it then immediately adapts it to suit its own circumstances. I mean why have a language? You have to express what you want to say which is your culture, your people, your identity. And when you think of everything that makes up an identity – all the plants and animals that you have, the food and drink, the myths, the legends, the history of your culture, the politics of it, the folk tales, the music, everything has to be talked about in language. And that means your local language, local words to do with the way you are, and different from the way everybody else is. And so the result has been, as English has been taken up by, well over seventy countries in the world as an important medium of their local communication. But they have developed their own local brand of English.

S: How many people spoke the language we are now conversing in say 600 years ago?

D: Ahh, well, certainly we know around about 1500, 1600, there were four million speakers of English in England.

S: And now in the early part of the twenty-first century, how many ... ?

D: Well, if you distinguish between, sort of first language speakers and foreign language speakers there's about 400 million or so first language speakers, English as a mother tongue – or father tongue, depending on your point of view – around the world, and about five times as many who speak English as a second or a foreign language, so we're talking about two billion people, you know, a third of the world's population really. The important point to notice is that for every one native speaker of English, there are now four or five non-native speakers of English, so the centre of gravity of the language has shifted, with interesting consequences.

Unit 6 Recording 4

Speaker 1

It's a trend that started in the States and spread certainly in Europe. And it's when guys wear their jeans halfway down their hips so you can see their underwear. Apparently it all started in the prison system in the States. What happened was that prisoners aren't allowed to wear belts cos these can be used as a weapon. And the prison uniforms were often too big for the inmates. So you'd have a little guy wearing a huge baggy pair of prison-issue trousers and so the prisoners ended up with these trousers halfway down their legs. So the trend has its roots in the prison system but somehow it spread beyond those walls so rappers like Ice T started wearing their trousers like this and it led to widespread adoption of the style. It's known in some parts as a kind of gangster look because obviously it originated in prison, but actually it's pretty common now amongst young people, so basically it's crossed over into the mainstream. And I guess this is how fashions start and spread cos they kind of come from nowhere, out of the blue, and then early adopters, I think they're called, help to make them fashionable and suddenly you've got a trend.

Speaker 2

As a TV producer, I've obviously looked at the trend of reality TV. It all started to take off in the nineties with the emergence of programmes like Big Brother and Pop Idol. But actually I'd say it originated from earlier programmes, stuff that was done in the seventies and eighties. I think the popularity of these shows has caused a big shift in how programmes are made. Production values are quite low and the emphasis is now on making something cheap and quick. Because of this, TV companies make bigger profits and it's this that resulted in these shows spreading around the world. So what I'm really saying is we'll keep making these programmes now until the, um, the public tires of them. And it's because of the public's taste for knowing about real people and real lives.

Unit 6 Recording 5

- 1 People now expect to download music for free and CD sales are at their lowest ebb. Basically, the music industry has had to completely change its business model.
- 2 We saw some great presentations at the conference. The hotel was wonderful and we loved the food! So overall, it was really worth it.
- 3 Bloggers take news from reporters and write comments. They don't do much reporting. So what I'm really saying is that without real reporters, there's no news.
- 4 Sales of the game soared in May, jumped again in July and rose dramatically in December. To sum up, we've had an incredible year.
- 5 The report says young people believe in openness. They like sharing their private lives online. In conclusion, young people don't value their privacy as much as older generations.
- 6 We had developed a great product, so logically it should have been a success. However, we had technical problems. Then a competitor stole the idea. All in all, it was a complete disaster.

M: So the gadget is called Midomo and it's a type of water carrier on wheels, but it also works as a filter. According to the description here, it was invented because in some parts of Africa, people need to walk several miles to fetch water. And also, of course, contaminated water accounts for so many illnesses and deaths in sub-Saharan Africa.

W: So it's like a container for water but it also cleans the water?

M: Yeah, it's a bit like a wheelbarrow. You collect the water in this container, and then while you're walking, as the wheels turn, the filter system starts working to clean the water.

W: So it solves two problems at once. It could save millions of lives because it filters dirty water, and it also makes it easier to transport the water.

M: It's an amazing invention. And I think one of the biggest benefits is that it's relatively cheap.

W: Oh, OK. What kind of prices are we talking about?

M: It'll go on the market for around about a hundred pounds. I guess the question is whether to fund it or not. Can we see any drawbacks?

W: I can't really see any negatives. You'd have to ask how durable it is. Is it likely to break? What materials is it made from? How easy is it to manufacture and export? But overall, it seems like a great investment.

M: Yeah, not just for financial reasons, but also it's going to save lives.

W: And is it a big company that's making it available?

M: No, it's a start-up called Red Button Design. They're based in the UK.

W: OK. My initial reaction is that it's worth investing in this, but obviously we'd need more details about the product.

M: I agree. I think it has a lot of potential.

Unit 7 Recording 2

- 1 OK, run around the field one more time, then you can have a breather.
- 2 Just go to the party and let your hair down.
- 3 She's going to take time out from work to finish her PhD dissertation.
- 4 I went travelling in order to take my mind off the tragedy.
- 5 It's hard to switch off at weekends.
- 6 If I've been working a sixteen-hour shift, I usually go to the bar to unwind.

Unit 7 Recording 3

Speaker 1

The way I switch off is by going hiking. We have excellent trails near where I live in Canada, where you can walk for a couple of hours. Some days when I'm out there I literally don't see another person. For me, it's a good way to take time out from my routine. The actual hiking's a hard slog because we're at high altitude and going up hills and across some rocky terrain, but that's fine because it means you're so focused on the walk you can't think about anything else. The only hairy moment was about a year ago when I saw a mountain lion on the trail about twenty yards away. It stopped, looked up at me, had a little sniff, and decided it didn't want me for dinner.

Speaker 2

If I want to unwind, I play the piano. I don't think anyone would confuse me with Beethoven – I'm really not very good – but I just find it relaxing. It's like doodling or something. You just let your fingers wander and go with the flow. I play all kinds of music, even some of my own compositions, which, as I say, are nothing special. My friends say my stuff sounds like elevator music – the kind of thing you hear in the elevator of a sleepy hotel. I think they're probably right.

Speaker 3

Any team sports do it for me. I can be having the most stressful day, but then I meet up with my friends for a game of football or Ultimate Frisbee and all my problems melt away, at least temporarily. I think it's that idea of just running around in the open air, getting sweaty. Maybe it's a remnant of childhood or something, when you had nothing to worry about, so you just ran around all day. It works for me.

Unit 7 Recording 4

M = Man W = Woman

M: Did you read that article recently about um, uh, I can't remember her name, a New York journalist who ...

W: Oh, the one about the nine-year-old child?

M: Yeah, who left her son uh, in central New York and left him to come back on his own, to make his own way back at the age of nine.

W: Brilliant!

M: Brilliant?

W: Yes!

M: Oh come on, you must be joking.

W: I'm absolutely serious.

M: Well, in what way brilliant? I mean he could have got lost, he could have been attacked, he could have been mugged, he could have ...

W: That's absolutely right and we have ...

M: What, and that's good?

W: Look, we have to, as parents, now take a stand against all this mollycoddling, cotton wool rubbish. I was allowed to do a lot at a very young age and it helped me make the right decisions about how to protect myself and learn to be streetwise. These kids don't know anything these days.

M: Well, I agree with you up to a point, but I mean you can't think that a nine-year-old should be left alone to kind of grow up in the course of two hours.

W: Surely you don't think that he should never make his own way home then and never learn?

M: Of course not, but not at the age of nine!

W: Right, well that goes against my better judgement because I actually think it's, it's more responsible as a parent to show them by chucking them in at the deep end.

M: Right so it's, you think it's more responsible to abandon your child, you can't think that, surely?

W: She didn't abandon the child.

M: Well, effectively she did.

W: The, you know he lives in New York and anyway ...

M: What, so who, well that's one of the most dangerous places in the world!

W: How can you say that? There are far worse places in the world. It's all relative.

M: Of course it's all relative, but if you look at the muggings and the crime rate in New York, it's horrendous and a nine-year-old wouldn't have a clue how to deal with all of that. It's, it just doesn't make sense to me.

W: It wasn't from what I know at two o'clock in the morning so, you know, you have to take it with a pinch of salt a bit.

M: Right.

W: Right, so ...

M: Because all crime happens at two o'clock in the morning?

W: Surely you don't think then that it's terribly dangerous to leave a child in a, in a city in the middle of the morning, that they know and they're not four ...

M: I do at the age of nine, he didn't even have a mobile phone!

W: He's probably a nine-year-old that's really got a lot going on, you know, that's the whole point I think, to take the child as an individual.

M: I understand the wanting the empowerment, I just think we're in a hurry to, to push our kids to grow, grow up too soon ...

W: Oh, come on.

M: ... these days, I don't understand it.

W: Oh, please!

M: What's the hurry?

W: You know everybody feels that, if everybody feels like that we're never going to get anybody that stands up for themselves.

M: Oh, that's ridiculous! We're talking about a nine-year-old!

W: Well, that's absolutely right.

Unit 7 Recording 6

M = Man W = Woman

W: I think there are two ways to look at it.

Freedom, to me, means letting your hair down and being able to relax completely.

M: Right. I know what you mean.

W: But we should also bear in mind political freedoms.

M: Well, exactly. That's what I was going to say. When I think of freedom, I immediately think of it's opposite, of persecution and all the oppression going on around the world.

W: So the lack of freedom ...

M: Not only lack of freedom but actual oppression, people being denied human rights, such as the right to vote.

W: To be part of a functioning democracy.

M: Also freedom to worship, freedom of religion.

W: And maybe you could add to that the freedom to access information without it being blocked or censored. This seems to have been in the news a lot lately.

M: That's right. The issue of governments trying to control what the population can and can't see or hear or read. I think people would be horrified if they knew just how widespread censorship is, and how much their freedoms are being eroded. And I'm not only talking about developing countries. It's in many developed countries, too.

W: While we're on the subject of censorship, do you think freedom of speech is still a big problem?

M: Yes, in general, I'd say that one of the biggest issues is the freedom to express yourself, so it's freedom of speech and freedom to wear what you like. As I see it, those are essential freedoms.

W: And perhaps the biggest issue of all in recent years, bearing in mind the various refugee crises, is freedom to travel. Open borders.

M: Yes, definitely. There must be ... what ... hundreds of thousands of people trying to escape their countries because of poverty or persecution, to make better lives for their families, and these people are labelled 'illegal' because perhaps they don't have the right documents. But the question is: who has the right to stop other people from seeking a better life elsewhere? If your country has been half-destroyed by war or sanctions, who wouldn't want to leave to give their kids a better future? For me, the freedom to travel is a basic human right.

Unit 8 Recording 2

G = Geoff Watts M1 = Man 1 M2 = Man 2

C = Claudia Hammond S = Simon Chu

L = Louise J = John Aggleton

G: Hello. We're looking back quite a bit in this week's programme, back to childhood for a start. Now, ever had that feeling of being suddenly carried back in time by a particular odour? You probably have because it's a common experience. The smell of coal does it for me, and even more specifically mint sauce. One whiff of that, and it's back to Sunday lunch in the house where I was born. There is, it seems, something special about smells when it comes to evoking memories. Now, as Claudia Hammond reports, psychologists think they may be getting to the root of it.

M1: The smell that always really takes me back in time is the smell of disinfectant, and kind of cedary wood. And for some bizarre reason it reminds me of being at school when I was about seven.

M2: Whenever I smell privet, walk past a hedge or something, it takes me instantly back to my kindergarten, to the rather smelly passage through from the garden to the school restaurant, where we had our lunches. It takes me straight back there.

C: For some reason, the memories evoked by smells seem to be stronger than memories that come back to you, say, from looking at a photo. In the field of psychology, they call it the Proust phenomenon, after the famous incident with the madeleines in Remembrance Of Things Past. One of the people studying the Proust effect is Doctor Simon Chu, a lecturer in psychology at Liverpool University. The link between smell and memory has hardly been touched by researchers, because until recently, it's been very difficult to prove in the lab. Using familiar smells, like vinegar and talcum powder, Simon Chu tries to trigger autobiographical memories.

So, what have you got here? You've got about eight little plastic boxes.

S: Here we've got things like raw mixed herbs, we've got um, some cigarette ash, some vinegar, ketchup, got some paint. What I'm going to do is I'm going to give you a word, and I'm going to ask you to tell me as much as you can about a particular experience that the word reminds you of.

C: First, he gives his volunteer Louise a word, like 'cigarette'. And she has to come up with an event from her past linked to the word. Once she's remembered everything she can, he lets her sniff the real thing from one of his special boxes.

S: I'd like you to sniff gently at this and tell me anything else you can remember about that particular experience.

L: Oooh, um, stale cigarette smoke ... that's a horrible smell. I can still smell it from here. I just remember ... just the smell of it and the fact that it, you can still smell it on yourself ages later. And then when you go home, you suddenly realise that your parents are probably going to be able to smell it on you as well. And then you get that fear inside you that they're going to know that you were smoking, and you know there were the Polos, and the perfume and that kind of thing – desperately trying to cover up the smell, so that your parents don't know what you've been up to.

C: Confronted by the actual smell of cigarettes, Louise remembers far more about the event than she did when she was simply given the word 'cigarette'. In particular, she remembered the fear that her parents would find out she'd been having a sneaky cigarette. It seems that smell is very good at bringing back the emotional details like this.

S: There is something quite unusual and special about the relationship between smells and memory.

J: For me, the most evocative smell is that smell you get when candles have just been snuffed out. And it takes me back to my childhood when I was a chorister in a church choir, in a village in Berkshire. And towards the end of the service, one of the servers used to come out and extinguish the big candles up by the altar. And if I just smell that smell, of candles being snuffed out, I'm instantly back at that time and the memories are of the music of my boyhood, the church music of the time.

G: Odours that prompt the memories of times past.

B: Yes, I think so.

Conversation 2

A: Did you just delete the file?

B: Hope not.

Conversation 3

S = Stephanie J = John

S: John, you're a time management consultant. What exactly do you do?

J: Hello, Stephanie. I advise individuals and companies on how to maximise their time. It involves looking at the processes they use to accomplish tasks, looking at how deadlines are set and met, and examining people's working habits to see if there are any shortcuts or more efficient ways to do things.

S: Right, OK. So what type of companies do you work with?

J: All kinds, really. Everything from very traditional manufacturing firms to internet start-ups. Every company wastes time at some point and every company wants to save time. Having said that, I'd say some companies are more efficient than others.

S: Can you go into more detail? So, let's say I want to restructure my day to get more work done. How would you approach it?

J: Well, the first thing I do is observe your routine. What's your normal day like?

S: Sure.

J: As a journalist you probably have deadlines.

S: Definitely.

J: You're probably under pressure. But looking at it another way, you may have a lot of freedom about where and how you work and what time of day. You don't have the constraints of, say, the traditional office worker.

S: I never thought of that. But yes, it's true.

J: So you need to work quickly, but on the other hand you probably have great resources: people who can help you, contacts, archives. And these are the tools you use to accomplish the task.

S: Right.

J: OK, so then we'd look at your typical day, starting from the moment you sit down at your desk. What's the first thing you do? Probably, if you're like everybody else, you check your emails. Maybe you read the news, go on a couple of social media sites, and respond to a few messages. But I'm looking at how long this takes you and how much time is spent off-task. I'm also looking at what you're looking at. Do you have a calendar? Do you use to-do lists, prioritised tasks that you need to finish at certain times of the day? Some people have lists next to their lists. They write down the names of contacts and other information which they'll use in order to achieve the task.

S: That's a good idea. Can you think of anything else you might look at?

J: How much media is around you? By which I really mean how many distractions are there? If you have text messaging, Facebook, the TV, the phone, the mobile phone, all within reach, then what are your chances of working uninterrupted for more than ten minutes?

S: I know what you mean. Alternatively, those might be the sources of my information.

J: Yes and no. You need them, but at some point you have to work without them if you're going to write something original.

S: Right. So you obviously go into a lot of detail looking at what people do every day. Any other suggestions for how I might save time?

J: Loads! One other thing you can do is ...

Unit 8 Recording 7

When I was about nine or ten and everybody uh, from primary school was moving up to secondary school, my parents gave me the option to go to a specialised theatrical school or a regular comprehensive. And um, it was very important, cos I remember being sat down and shown brochures of everything and there was no pressure either way. And at that young age I made the decision to go to a theatre school. And luckily for me I, I, it's panned out and I've had a career in that um, that line of work. But I then found myself faced with another decision, because we were moving house and uh, we had to leave school, and did we want to continue with theatre school or did we want to go to a normal school? And at that point I was about fourteen, and I decided actually I want to get an education and leave the theatrical world at that point, still very, very young to make those decisions. And I did, I left and went to a regular comprehensive and got some uh, you know, qualifications behind me and everything, and my sister didn't she carried on at theatre school and she went straight into work, very early, and was really successful. I've always wondered if perhaps I should have chosen the other option, cos it was a longer road for me, and I'm still very much on it. And um, and I suppose that the next major decision, the final decision was whether to have children or not or take this huge job that was offered to me, and I chose my children, in that case. So I'm very grateful I've got two lovely boys um, and I've still got my career but I just um, kind of wonder what would have happened if ...

UNIT 9 Recording 2

Speaker 1

People always ask me that, and it's a very difficult question to answer. One thing is that it's no good just sitting around waiting for an idea to come. If I'm stuck for an idea, I have to switch off and do something else for a while. Doing the washing-up is quite good, doing something mundane, that you don't have to think too hard about. So, I like to invite lots of people round to dinner, so that in the morning there are lots of plates to wash, and that gets me thinking. When you free the mind, it helps spark creative connections. So you're doing the washing-up, or having a shower, and suddenly an idea might come to you. You actually have to take your mind off the writing, off the task in hand. And that's when you think of something creative. It's funny how our brains work. Sometimes, I'll go out into the garden, or go for a run to clear my head. When I get back to my desk, the ideas flow a lot more easily.

Speaker 2

Inspiration? Goodness. Inspiration is everywhere, I guess. I'm inspired by people. The people around me. By people who achieve great things, or manage terrible hardships. The world around us is full of stories, and people doing things differently. And when you work in advertising, you're always looking for something new. A new way of conveying your message. Ahh ... nature. Nature is another great inspiration. Going somewhere beautiful is a really good way to get new ideas. Or doing an outdoor sport. Sometimes I'll go skiing or snowboarding, and there's something about it, the fresh air and the outdoors, perhaps it's the sky and the mountains. I don't know. But while I'm there, I'll have lots of ideas for things I can do when I get back to work.

Speaker 3

Um, books mainly, old recipe books ... like Margaret Costa, a classic. I'll look through old recipes and then try to recreate the same idea but with a modern, more contemporary twist. Yes, old tomes. Larousse is another one, with plenty of ideas, or sometimes I'll go to the Michelin guides, you know the restaurants with stars – they have books, so I look there too. Unfortunately, I rarely eat out myself, so I don't get ideas that way, but books are a great inspiration. And there's something about having big, heavy books in the kitchen that have been with you a long time. They inherit your character a little, and hold in them so many memories of enjoyable meals.

Speaker 4

This is going to sound a bit odd, but something that has really inspired me in life has been the people who didn't believe in me. You know, I wasn't the cleverest kid in school. In fact, I left school as soon as I could. But at school, there was this one teacher, who I'd never really got on with. And he told me I that I would never get anywhere, that I would never achieve anything really worthwhile. And I remember thinking, through the loathing, that I would prove him wrong. I felt this huge sense of determination. Um, and I've carried that with me, you know, at times when things aren't going well, and I'm not sure if I can make a success of something. I'll think about that. And it really inspires me to put in that extra bit of effort. To prove to myself that he was wrong. For an entrepreneur, that determination to succeed is really important.

If there's one thing I cannot stand it's getting off a tube train on the London underground and lots of people on the platform try to get on the carriage before I have gotten off. Honestly, it drives me up the wall! Don't they understand that if I can't get off, then they can't get on, so they need to let me off. And I have in the past actually raised my voice at tourists.

Speaker 2

The last time we went to Cornwall we went to the lovely little town of Fowey, and I discovered what I could describe for me as paradise, it's a tearoom which somebody could describe in a book and it still wouldn't be as good as, as the actual experience when you go in – beautifully decorated. It's got those little um, cake plates with, piled up with the most beautiful sumptuous cupcakes. And then in the back part they've got a lovely Rayburn, and if you decided you wanted sardines on toast or scrambled egg or something they'll just whip it up for you. Every single thing you could imagine on your dream menu. I could have sat there for a week and worked my way through the menu. It was the most wonderful, delicious and, and, the people were so friendly. And they'd gone to such sort of trouble to make this gorgeous place to eat. And um, I'd definitely go back there again.

Speaker 3

The other night I saw the best show ever, it was a show called Dirty Dancing, it's on in the West End, absolutely fantastic. The acting was brilliant, the dancing was brilliant, the songs were terrific! I mean uniformly they were absolutely terrific. And I don't know who played the mother, but she was especially good, honestly, really the best show ever, you must see it!

Speaker 4

I cannot recommend highly enough a trip to one of the beautiful islands of Thailand. I went there last year and there is absolutely nothing better than finding yourself on a private beach with a cool drink in hand and having a dip in tropical warm waters. And I saw one of the most spectacular sunsets I've ever seen. And honestly, I couldn't believe my luck when I saw turtles in the water, I've always wanted to see turtles. It was idyllic.

Speaker 5

The worst meal I ever had was quite recently. It was absolutely horrendous. The restaurant was grossly overpriced, honestly it was a total waste of money. But it's also, you know, minutes of my life that I won't get back. Um, the service was appalling, and the waiter just seemed like he'd rather be doing anything else. Clearly it's hard to cook for a lot of people, I understand that, at the same time. But you know meals were coming out at all different times. We had appetisers arriving and then the main course and then nothing for about an hour. It was horrendous.

Speaker 6

I bought the 'one touch can opener' and it has changed my life, seriously, and I'm not even overstating how amazing it is. It's an all-time classic of products, you have to get one, and I couldn't believe my luck when it arrived in the post, just for me, and it does exactly what it says it will. You touch it once and you leave it alone. It's incredible! It's the most incredible thing. You don't have to, you can do something else if you want. It's one of the most spectacular life-changing products you can buy, because all of that mess and effort taken away um. So if you're ever thinking about it, just do it, it's awesome, seriously, the best product.

Unit 9 Recording 7

OK, the person I want to nominate is not famous. He isn't a celebrity and has never been on TV. Um, he's one of those people who goes under the radar because he's so humble. I'm nominating him because he's made a huge difference to people's lives. His name is Tomasso Beltrini, though everyone calls him Tom, and he's 63 years old. Tom is a factory worker, but in his spare time for the last 30 years he's worked tirelessly with immigrants and refugees who are new to Australia and helped them with the language and with forms and documents. He helps them find apartments and jobs and he, um, provides moral support and sometimes even financial support. He's based in a small town near Perth, which has a high number of immigrants and refugees. So, er, sometimes these are people who come to the country quite traumatised by their experiences back home. Maybe they're escaping war or persecution, and what they need is a new start in life and a friendly face and someone to pick them up and help them to integrate into society. Well, Tom's been doing that as a volunteer at our Refugee Centre for three decades. He's an example to us all. He must have helped thousands of people and he's done it with incredible dignity and kindness. Er, I don't think we'll ever know how much good he's done, but I know this: he'd be a worthy winner of this award because no one deserves it more.

When I taught in New York City high schools for 30 years no one but my students paid me a scrap of attention. In the world outside the school I was invisible. Then I wrote a book about my childhood and became mick of the moment. I hoped the book would explain family history to McCourt children and grandchildren. I hoped it might sell a few hundred copies and I might be invited to have discussions with book clubs. Instead it jumped on the best-seller list and was translated into 30 languages and I was dazzled. The book was my second act. In the world of books I am a late bloomer, a johnny-come-lately, new kid on the block. My first book, Angela's Ashes, was published in 1996 when I was 66, the second, 'Tis, in 1999 when I was 69. At that age it's a wonder I was able to lift the pen at all. New friends of mine (recently acquired because of my ascension to the best-seller lists) had published books in their twenties. Striplings. So, what took you so long? I was teaching, that's what took me so long. Not in college or university, where you have all the time in the world for writing and other diversions, but in four different New York City public high schools. (I have read novels about the lives of university professors where they seemed to be so busy with adultery and academic in-fighting you wonder where they found time to squeeze in a little teaching.) When you teach five high school classes a day, five days a week, you're not inclined to go home to clear your head and fashion deathless prose. After a day of five classes your head is filled with the clamour of the classroom.

I never expected Angela's Ashes to attract any attention, but when it hit the best-seller lists I became a media darling. I had my picture taken hundreds of times. I was a geriatric novelty with an Irish accent. I was interviewed for dozens of publications. I met governors, mayors, actors. I met the first President Bush and his son, the governor of Texas. I met President Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton. I met Gregory Peck. I met the Pope and kissed his ring. Sarah, Duchess of York, interviewed me. She said I was her first Pulitzer Prize winner. I said she was my first duchess. She said, Ooh, and asked the cameraman, Did you get that? Did you get that? I was nominated for a Grammy for the spoken word and nearly met Elton John. People looked at me in a different way. They said, Oh, you wrote that book. This way, please, Mr McCourt, or Is there anything you'd like, anything? A woman in a coffee shop squinted and said, I seen you on TV. You must be important. Who are you? Could I have your autograph? I was listened to. I was asked for my opinion on Ireland, conjunctivitis, drinking, teeth, education, religion, adolescent angst, William Butler Yeats, literature in general. What books are you reading this summer? What books have you read this year? Catholicism, writing, hunger. I spoke to gatherings of dentists, lawyers, ophthalmologists and, of course, teachers. I travelled the world being Irish, being a teacher, an authority on misery of all kinds, a beacon of hope to senior citizens everywhere who always wanted to tell their stories. They made a movie of Angela's Ashes. No matter what you write in America there is always talk of The Movie. You could write the Manhattan telephone directory, and they'd say, So, when is the movie?

Unit 10 Recording 5

S = Serena D = David

S: So, David, tell us a little more about negotiating. Is it all about the words you use?

D: Much of negotiating is in body language and gesture, but it's also vital that you use the right words.

S: OK, so I'm at the beginning of some kind of negotiation. How do I start? What's my opening gambit?

D: The first thing you want to do is name your objectives.

S: OK.

D: So you can use a phrase such as 'we want to sort this out as soon as possible'. This makes it clear what you want from the discussion. Another thing you need to do is explore positions.

S: What does that mean exactly? Can you give an example?

D: It means asking questions like 'Can you tell me more about this?' 'What do you have in mind?' Exploring positions is all about asking what the other guy wants and then really listening.

S: I see. So we're trying to establish common goals.

D: Yeah, then you need to make an offer.

S: And this is where the real negotiating starts.

D: Exactly, and the 'if' word becomes so important because your offer is going to be conditional on certain terms being met, concessions and compromises being made. So you might say, 'If you do this for me, I'll do this for you.' 'What if we gave you access to this?' 'What if we supported your idea?'

S: I see. So it seems in negotiating, the word 'if' is the biggest word in the language.

D: That's right.

S: What about negotiating meaning? Things like checking that you understand the conditions on offer.

D: Essential. Negotiations can be long and tiring, but you cannot switch off for a moment. If you missed something, don't bluff. Ask about it. Go over the points more than once. Be sure. Ask 'Have I got this right?' 'Are you saying this or that?'

S: OK. And what about the endgame? Let's say the haggling is over. It's decision time and you need to refuse or accept the deal.

D: Well, refusing is always delicate. You really don't want to close off all further discussion, so you need to be tactful. You never just say no. Instead, you give reasons and explanations. You might say, 'That's more than I can offer.' 'That would be difficult for me because of my situation.' 'I'm not sure I can do that because I promised something else'.

S: In other words, you refuse without saying no.

D: Yeah. It's at this stage you might want to stall for time, or defer the decision, or if you're in business, consult a more senior colleague. The next stage is when you've reached agreement. You say something like, 'Good. That sounds acceptable to me.' Or 'Great. We've got a deal.' But that's not it.

S: It isn't over?

D: You need to follow up the deal. Be polite and civil. Say something like, 'We can talk about it again and review the situation in a few months.' If it's a more formal deal, we can say 'Let me know if you have any queries.' The thing is to follow up the deal. Always keep the conversation open.

Unit 10 Recording 7

I guess my dream job would have to be a film-maker. Making short films, well, making full-length films too – that would be wonderful. The kind of films I'm interested in are those realistic animation films. What appeals to me is that it's wonderfully creative. There's so much you can do. You can do anything. I'd relish having the opportunity to work in an environment like that. I'm fairly qualified in that, well I'm doing a degree in time-based art and digital film at university so we do a lot of work on film, image, sound and performance. I've made a series of short films, using various different techniques, so I've got a bit of experience behind me. And I'd like to think I'm a fairly creative individual. I have lots of ideas about how to do things, and I'm not afraid to try out new ideas, to experiment. I'd say I've got quite a good eye for things that are going to work. Like an instinct. I can sense if something is working or not visually, or if we need to change it. I think it's essential to be open-minded and forward-thinking. There are a lot of people now doing fantastically creative things, and making films, so it's quite hard to be able to stand out from the crowd. So you need good business sense too, to make sure your film is successful. It's not just about having the ideas. You need to be a good organiser, so you can manage a project. And you have to be flexible. As for moving towards getting my dream job, as I said, I'm still studying at the moment, but I try to do as much creative work as I can in my spare time. I'm also doing some work experience with an advertising company, looking at how we can use short films in advertising. I'm hoping that this experience will help me to find a job when I graduate.
